FAIR WEATHER PROMISED FOR DAILY PRESS HIPPODROME PARTY

250 or More Plainfielders Will Go to Famous New York Show House Tonight to See "Hip, Hip, Hooray!"—Some Good Seats, Will Be on Sale on the Train

The New York Hippodrome

HOW TO GET THERE.

Representatives of the Plainfield Daily Press and the New York Hippodrome will be conspicuous on the train and are ready to answer all questions.

The special train is due to arrive in New York, Liberty St., at 7:00 P. M. and on the return trip will leave Liberty St. at 11:45 P. M. sharp.

The Hippodrome curtain rises promptly at 8:15 P. M., one hour and fifteen minutes after excursionists arrive in New York.

The performance ends at 10:58 P. M., giving forty-seven minutes to catch ferry boat at Liberty St.

The Hippodrome is on Sixth Ave., 43rd to 44th St. Upon arrival in New York walk over three short blocks to the Sixth Ave. Elevated (Not Ninth Ave.) Cortland Street Station (Uptown side) get off at 42nd St. The Hippodrome is only one block north from there.

Good and reasonable priced restaurants are numerous near the Hippodrome to suit all purses.

Be sure to be seated in the Hippodrome by 8:15 P. M. as the fun begins right from the start.

Be sure to see the very finish of the show. You have forty-seven minutes to catch the boat. Don't worry, have a good time.

The weather man says that tonight is to be fair.

When the special train chartered by the Daily Press to take Plainfielders to the New York Hippodrome pulls out of Fanwood tonight, there will be 250 or more residents of this city and surrounding towns on board. That much was assured by the advance ticket sale up to noon, and people were continuing to come into the Press office for more tickets all the afternoon. The Hippodrome management has consented to leave nearly 75 good seats on sale in this city, and on the train, up to the last minute, and late comers can be accommodated at the advertised price.

The special train of all-steel, electric lighted day coaches will pull out of Dunellen promptly at 5:54 this afternoon. It will stop at Clinton Avenue at 5:57, Grant Avenue at 6 o'clock, Plainfield at 6:04, Netherwood at 6:07, and Fanwood at 6:10, and after that will run as an express direct to New York. As has been told the only tickets accepted on this train will be the special tickets issued for transportation by the railroad to the Daily Press party. Commutation, fifty-trip or other regular tickets of the railroad will not be good, under a ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The price for the trip, including railroad fare and a $1.50 reserved seat at the Hippodrome, to be selected at the Press office or on the train, is but $1.75, or $1.80 from Dunellen. The special train will leave New York at 11:45 returning, and will reach Plainfield a full half hour ahead of the regular theatre train.

Complete directions as to how to reach the Hipprodome by the easiest method are contained in the box at the top of this article. There are plenty of places near the Hippodrome where food can be procured by those who wait until they reach New York for their evening meal. The weather man promises fair weather tonight, so that those who have hesitated because of a possible rain storm need hesitate no longer.

T. A. B. S. OBSERVE 44TH ANNIVERSARY

Father Walter J. Shanley, of Danbury, Conn., Delivers Inspring Address.

"Temperance" was the subject of a sermon delivered in St. Mary's church last night by the Rev. Walter J. Shanley, L. L. D., of Danbury, Conn., in connection with the forty-fourth anniversary of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society. Father Shanley, who is an eloquent speaker, is deeply interested in the temperance movement and is himself president of the National Union of Temperance Societies. He is an enthusiastic worker for the cause and has gained a country-wide prominence for the strong stand he has taken on several occasions.

Following the sermon solemn benediction was given, Father P. J. Hart, of St. Joseph's church, being the celebrant; Father Joseph McDonald, deacon, and Father John Baldwin, chaplain of Mt. St. Mary College, sub-deacon. Mrs. Harry DeMeza presided at the organ and during the service the choir gave special selections.

St. Mary's T. A. B. Society has had a remarkable growth in the forty-four years of its existence and it is rapidly gaining membership. The society has a finely-appointed home, where all sorts of helpful amusements are provided for the entertainment of the members and their friends.

BOY HIT BY AUTO BUT IS ONLY SLIGHTLY HURT

Alfred Canter, eight years old, was run over and slightly injured yesterday afternoon by the automobile of James Racz, of New Brunswick. The accident happened on West Fourth street shortly before 5 p. m. The boy was riding a bicycle and attempted to cross the street in front of Mr. Racz's machine. Witnesses all said that the automobile was moving at a slow rate of speed, but in some manner the bicycle was struck and the car ran over it. The boy was only slightly bruised on one knee. His injuries were attended by Dr. Clawson. Chief Kiely ordered Racz to appear in police court this morning and he was here, but the case went over to Friday of this week.

All Eyes Are On the Capital.

PRINCIPAL EARLY ENTERS A PROTEST

Declares That Time Limit Rules in Rutgers' Oratorical Contest Violated.

Immediately following the oratorical contest at Rutgers College on Saturday, Principal Albert Earley, of the North Plainfield High School, entered a formal protest claiming that there had been a violation of the time-limit rules, which provided that the speakers would be limited to six minutes. He said that some of the speakers had taken nine and ten minutes. The chairman was unable to explain the matter and requested Mr. Earley to present his protest in writing, which he will do immediately.

Seven contestants were entered in the contest, including Ernest Pruden from the borough school. The following were given gold and silver medals for first and second places respectively: Louise D. Heyer, of Leonardo, first; Dora Goldberg, of Chattle High School, being runner-up; Samuel Hoffman, of New Brunswick, first; Abram Powelson, of Somerville High School, second. Ernest Pruden received third third honor, although the public sentiment favored him as a runner-up.

7 BOYS UP FOR RIDING BICYCLES ON SIDEWALK

Carrying out orders of Chief Kiely to break up the riding of bicycles on sidewalks, members of the local police department this morning had seven boys in police court. They were Charles Johnson, James Montross, Walter Morris, Erich Niolysen, Geo. Gaskill, Frank Force and John Kiely. The charge against each was violating the bicycle ordinance. For some time, complaints of the reckless use of the sidewalk have been coming to the police department, and Chief Kiely has ordered that it be stopped. Judge De Meza gave each of the boys a severe lecture this morning, but suspended sentence over them because of their tender ages.

Auction Sale Tomorrow.

An auction sale of the personal effects of the late Captain Phillips will be conducted at 1122 West Front street tomorrow afternoon, commeninb prompty at 1:30 o'clock. Robert Murray, the local auctioneer, will dispose of the entire contents of the house, a list of the goods being published on another page of this issue. All are in good condition.—Adv. ***

PREPAREDNESS IS BEST PREVENTION

Major-General Leonard Wood Enthuses Audience in Address at High School.

TRAINED MEN NEEDED

"Preparedness is Simply Being Able to Defend Institutions We Think We Would Be Willing to Die For," Says the Speaker.

That a large number of Plainfielders believe in "Preparedness" was clearly demonstrated, when nearly one thousand people gathered in the Plainfield High School, Saturday night to hear Major-General Leonard Wood talk on that subject. The head of the Department of the East was given an ovation on his appearance here and frequently throughout his convincing and impassioned talk he was interrupted by hearty applause.

General Wood came here under the auspices of the Monday Afternoon Club, and he was introduced by Mrs. Allan Cowperthwait, president of the club. Seated on the platform were Mayor Leighton Calkins, William L. Saunders, a member of the Naval Advisory Board; former Mayor Alexander Gilbert and Evarts Tracy. The general was escorted to the High School by Co. K, Second Regiment, Troop D, First Squadron Cavalry and the Field Hospital Corps, all of which made a fine and imposing appearance and aroused the assemblage to great enthusiasm. General Gordon, the generals aide, also accompanied him to this city.

"Preparedness is simply being prepared to defend our institutions which we think we would be willing to die for," declared General Wood. "It is the only means we have of protecting ourselves. The history of nations swept away has been that they were unable to defend themselves.

"Belgium today offers a striking illustration of this fact. What we want is a good army to protect the country and all its possessions, including the Panama Canal and the entire coast line. A suitable mobile army is an absolute necessity. The school teachers of New York State, plus the police force, represents the present force of the mobile army. There must be a force sufficient to keep the enemy off our coast. The regular army must always be ready and prepared for action, and with the aid of a first-class National Guard can accomplish much."

General Wood spoke as though he was quite in favor of making the National Guard a federal guard, to increase its efficiency, and he emphasized the importance of having a sufficient number of thoroughly well-drilled officers. He contrasted conditions of the early wars and the Civil War with the present European War, and also advocated the establishment of training camps such as the one at Plattsburg last year, and declared that there should be a reserve corps of 50,000 men.

The value of a large body of trained students was commented upon. "We are interested in keeping out of war," said General Wood. "We establish hospitals to fight tuberculosis and other diseases, and why not establish a large and well-trained force to prevent war. We must realize that with suffrage goes the obligation to one's country. We have never engaged in war with a first-class power and I hope we never will. God has given us eyes and ears for observation, and it is our duty to use them."

The military system in Switzerland was favorably commented upon by General Wood and he said that it was one that might be adopted in this country. "The trouble is," said the speaker, "the people of this country do not appreciate the United States soldier's uniform, while in other countries it is a mark of distinction and honor." Throughout his talk, General Wood gave many apt illustrations which were appreciated by the audience. After the lecture, many remained and accepted the opportunity to personally meet the general.

CHARGE OF THEFT OF WATCH IS NOT PROVEN

Theodore Lane, colored, charged with entering the home of Carl Silbert more than a year ago and stealing a watch, was released this morning when tried in police court. There was no evidence on which to hold him, and Judge De Meza ordered the complaint dismissed. Lane was charged with taking a watch, which was later sold to a local pool room man, and by him to another man, who took it to Mr. Silbert to be repaired. When the watch was recognized a search was started that resulted in the arrest of Lane in Bernardsville. He says the watch was bought by him from a man who has left the city.

DRESS REHEARSAL FOR "MYSTIC ROSE"

Everything in Readiness for Initial Performance of the Comic Opera Tonight.

The final dress rehearsal, with the full orchestra for "The Mystic Rose," which is to be presented at the Plainfield Theatre tonight, tomorrow and Wednesday, under the auspices of the local Elks, was very satisfactory to Mr. Skilling, the director, and brought forth much praise from several musical critics who had been invited to witness the private performance. The entire cast seemed to be at home on the theatre stage and it seems certain that the opening performance tonight will be excellent. At the rehearsal, the Boola Boola Boys, the Tea Girls, the Double Sextet and the Double Septet made a great hit with those present. These numbers are sure to get several encores at each performance.

Without a doubt the biggest hit of the whole opera will be "The Flower and Butterfly" ballet, which is the most wonderful spectacular attraction which has ever been produced in Plainfield. Over 200 little girls from eight to fourteen years of age appear in the ballet.

The committee reports that very good seats remain for the performance tonight, while the sale for tomorrow evening is very heavy and the seats for Wednesday night are very nearly exhausted.

KAPELSON FINED FOR VIOLATING HEALTH LAWS

Emmanuel Kapelson was arraigned in police court this morning on four complaints charging that he had violated the health ordinances of the city in failing to keep plumbing work in proper condition in houses here. The defense of Mr. Kapelson was that the houses were owned by a corporation of which he was the head and that he had not received the notices. Collis Case, local health inspector, said he had served notices on officers of the corporation and had sent them in registered letters. Attorney Harry C. Runyon appeared for the defendant and after his plea for leniency, Judge De Meza assessed fines of $10 in two cases and suspended sentence on the others.

TURKS CAPTURED FOUR GENERALS

Gen. Townshend Was Permitted to Keep Sword After Surrender.

500 OFFICERS TAKEN

British Losses in Mesopotamian Campaign Put at 20,000—Gerard Sees Kaiser But Makes No Report to Washington.

Constantinople, May 1.—The Turkish War Office announced today that among the prisoners taken at Kut-el-Amara were four generals, 240 British officers and 270 Indian officers. General Townshend, commander of the British forces, was permitted to keep his sword. The War Office states also that the British casualties in the fighting that took place in March and April on the Mesopotamian front numbered 20,000.

No Word from Gerard.

Washington, Mty 1.—Secretary of State Lansing today declined to make any comment on the German situation except to make clear that Ambassador Gerard had not yet been heard from regarding his conference with the German Emperor. Reports that a conference was at Mr. Gerard's initiation rather than the Kaiser's, cabled from Berlin, failed of confirmation at the State Department, and it was indicated that officials believed that the Emperor initiated the meeting.

German Attacks Increase.

Paris, May 1.—French war statement:

Fighting at Verdun is increasing in violence. Today's communique, issued by the War Office, reported a number of attacks by the Crown Prince's army during the night. These like previous ones, met with repulses. In only one, made in the region of Cumieres, on the west bank of the Meuse, did the Germans succeed in penetrating the French line of defense and they were ejected by counter attack. A furious attack was made by the Germans on Dead Man's Hill, following a violent bombardment. This was checked by the French, who also drove back foes that launched two attacks at Cumieres. The German, on their third attack, made a momentary gain, but were quickly driven back. A violent bombardment of Hill No. 304 and the French positions at Vaux, on the west and east banks of the Meuse was continued by the Germans.

Irish Rebels Surrender.

London, May 1.—According to an official announcement this afternoon, all the rebels in Dublin have surrendered.

Can Export Some Wheat.

London, May 1.—A despatch from Simla, India, says that the government has restored normal conditions pertaining to the private export of wheat, subject to the maximum restrictions on the quantity permitted to be exported during the war.

City of Lucknow Sunk.

Londan, May 1.—The British steamer City of Lucknow, 3,669 tons has been sunk. The vessel was built in 1896 and hailed from Glasgow.

Norwegian Steamer Sunk.

London, May 1.—The Norwegian steamer Mod, 664 tons, has been sunk. The vessel hailed from Christiania.

"MAC" WILL SING A DUET WITH HIMSELF

Special Musical Service Tomorrow Night—Judge Runyon on Program.

There will be a special musical service at the Tabernacle tomorrow night and the program arranged is one that should appeal peculiarly to Plainfield people. Judge William N. Runyon will sing a solo, so many requests having been received for this that Mr. McEwan persuaded him to appear. The big feature of the service, however, will be a duet my "Mac" with himself. Perhaps other soloists in the world can sing a duet without a second voice, as will be admitted after local people see how "Mac" does it, but no one else does. Mr. McEwan is also rehearsing the chorus choir for several special numbers and there will be selections by the National Male Quartet and a reading by Mrs. Brake. The program follows:

Selection ..... Chorus Choir
Solo ..... Judge Runyon
Reading ..... Mrs. Brake
Selection ..... National Male Quartet
Duet (with himself) ... Mr. McEwan

PLAINFIELD GIVES $6,614 IN FEW MINUTES TO PAY EXPENSES OF THE BIEDERWOLF CAMPAIGN

SMALL CROWD AT SUNDAY MORNING SERVICE RESPONDS TO APPEAL FOR FINANCES IN MOST GENEROUS MANNER.

TOTAL OF 819 WALKED DOWN SAWDUST AISLE

Evangelist Preached to Total of 21,500 People Since Saturday Afternoon—"A Wonderful Day," He Said After Last Night's Service—No More Collections and Some Left for Charity.

Plainfield has paid its debt.

In a meeting at the Tabernacle yesterday morning, when not more five thousand persons were present, the collection was sufficient to pay every cent of expense connected with the Biederwolf evangelistic campaign, with that already received. In thirteen minutes $5,300 was raised, and the total in only a few more ran of $6,614.

It was a marvelous exhibition of Plainfield generosity, and in looking about for a fitting compliment to pay the congregation the Rev. William E. Biederwolf could only say, "You have done it in the true Plainfield way."

The whole day was one to gladden the heart of the great evangelist. Aside from seeing all expenses of the campaign cared for at a single meeting, he preached to 21,500 people since Saturday afternoon, and in the four services his eloquence and magnetic appeal in the name of his Christ brought 819 men, women and children to give their hearts and their lives to their mother's God. Yesterday afternoon 434 young men and young women walked down the sawdust aisle. It was a meeting for Sunday-school students and officers, and the decisions and reconsecrations were the largest of any single service of the Plainfield campaign. Saturday night the total was 69, yesterday morning it was 109 and last night it was 207... The atendance at the Saturday evening service was not more than 3,500, but yesterday afternoon and evening the Pine Tabernacle was filled to overflowing and many were turned away.

Dr. Biederwolf had nothing to with taking the collection yesterday morning. It was Plainfield's debt and Plainfield paid it alone. C. W. McCutcheon took charge of the service when time of the morning offering came and he explained that the total expenses for the services was $10,242. Of this amount $4,545 has been received in the pan collections, but Mr. McCutcheon explained that the committee wanted to raise all the money at once, so that there would be no more collections.

"It is a glorious privilege you have this morning," he said, "that of giving this money for such a noble work."

Mr. McCutcheon said that Plainfield was a fortunate community. He told of many things in which the city and the borough are fortunate, and when he asked, "Where in all the country is there a community with two such Mayors?" the congregation burst into applause. Most of them applauded again when he said that both Mayor Calkins and Mayor Smalley stood squarely against the saloons and the whisky traffic.

He reminded his hearers that Plainfield still owed a debt of more than $6,000 on the building, and said he wanted the money... "It is a debt of gratitude to God for the wonderful work he is doing here through Dr. Biederwolf and other workers," he said, "and it is also a debt of honor and law to the carpenters, the wood workers and others who have created this Tabernacle."

George E. Hall, chairman of the finance committee, then read a detailed statement of expenses. It follows:

Tabernacle cost	$5,718
Office expenses	307
Executive work	267
Advertising	42
Music	150
Janitor, light, heat, etc.	534
Entertainment of guests	1,000
Salaries	2,200
Sundries	2,100
Total	$10,242

In speaking of the collection Mr. McCutcheon called attention to the loyal and efficient work of De Witt Hubbell and his associates, who had counted the dollars, dimes, quarters, nickels and even pennies night after night without even a word of praise.

He then asked for $500 subscrip-

ELIZABETH DEFEATS ST. MARY'S SOCIETY

That the Literacy Test Would Be Beneficial to Country is Decision of Judges.

St. Mary's Holy Name Society of this city lost to the Elizabeth Holy Name debating team in the hall on Liberty street, yesterday afternoon, when the two societies' debating teams met for a discussion of the resolution that "The Literacy Test would be Beneficial to the Country." The Plainfield team, which was composed of William V. Rafferty and James M. Cullen, took the negative side of the debate, while the Elizabethans, T. E. Rastery and Edward McGrath, took the affirmative side.

Daniel Courain acted as chairman during the discussion, and three judges, two from Elizabeth and T. J. Meaney of this city, rendered the decision. The debate yesterday was the first of a series which will be conducted between the two societies, the dates for the future meetings not yet being decided upon.

The hall was thronged with a large number of members of the two societies, who were interested listeners during the various problems and issues brought up by both teams, and dealing with the important question which is now occupying the attention of legislators and prominent men throughout the country.

TURNS FORD OVER IN FRONT OF TABERNACLE

Miss Emma Lasker, of 621 Hamilton road, South Orange, attempted to make a short turn in front of the Biederwolf Tabernacle after the Sunday evening service and turned her Ford touring car completely over. The five passengers in the machine escaped without injury, but the automobile was badly damaged.

OPEN NEW EAST END SCHOOL TODAY

Classes Are Transferred to the Building and Pupils Are Being Received.

The new Evergreen School was opened this morning by the transfer of the following classes and teachers from the Franklin School: Miss Clara J. Churton, fifth grade; Miss Helen C. Trenbath, fourth grade; Mrs. Frances B. Nischwitz, third grade; Miss Gertrude Slocum, second grade; Miss Caroline A. Barber, first grade; Miss Elizabeth T. Angell, kindergarten. Miss Carolyn Slauson will be the kindergarten assistant.

It is expected that tomorrow morning the school will be in full running order, ready to receive new pupils from the neighborhood. Any parents who have young children to begin school at this time should bring them in at once, as new pupils will not be received after next week until the opening of the fall term. In September, it is expected to add to the school sixth and seventh grade classes.

The grading about the school building is fast approaching completion, and when the lawns and surroundings have been put into shape, the school will be the most attractive in this vicinity. Miss Bullock, the present principal of the Franklin School, will act as principal of both the Evergreen and Franklin, with her main office in the Evergreen School.

"THE HIDDEN GEM."

Several local people attended the play, "The Hidden Gem," written by Cardinal Wiseman and given by the High School department of St. Peter's College in Jersey City yesterday afternoon. Edward J. McCann, the Plainfield boy who was awarded the Holy Name Society scholarship in the college, is a student in the school and played the role of "Davus," a slave.

DEMOCRATS TO MEET.

The monthly meeting of the Plainfield Democratic Club will be held tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock sharp at Park and North avenues, in the rooms adjoining the former quarters of the club in the Depew building. There will be a discussion of plans for the campaign.

KLEVER KLOVER KLUB'S FIFTH ANNUAL DANCE

The Klever Klover Klub, by a request from a large number of the young people of the borough, will conduct its fifth dance of the season in the near future. The last dance of the club was held in Debele's Hall, North Plainfield, last Thursday evening. This was a very successful affair, over one hundred couple being present and everybody having a grand time. Berrell's orchestra, of Bernardsville, which furnished the music so pleasingly for the last dance, will be re-engaged. The committee which has proven its worth on former occasions will again be in charge.

MOTORED TO NEWARK.

C. L. Wahl, Jr., entertained a party of friends from New Rochelle over the week-end. Yesterday Mr. Wahl, his friends and Raymond Tynan motored to Newark in Mr. Tynan's car and witnessed the baseball game between the Newark and Toronto teams of the International League.

PLANS FOR NEW HOUSE.

Kaspar Fuchs, of Greenbrook road, is having plans drawn for a seven-room house to be erected on a lot next to his home. Mr. Fuchs will build for investment.

TO ATTEND DANCE.

A large number of the young people of the borough are making arrangements to attend the dance in St. Mary's parish house, Stony Hill, Friday evening. They will leave here on the 8:15 o'clock car for Scotch Plains, where several auto busses will be waiting to convey them to Stony Hill.

ENTERTAINED FRIENDS.

Mrs. E. B. Latham entertained three friends from her girlhood home, Belle Plains, Iowa, Thursday. They were Mrs. Thomas Murray and two sisters. Mrs. Murray came East as a delegate to the D. A. R. Convention which was in session at Washington, D. C., recently. From Washington, Mrs. Murray and her sisters came to New York. They have since extended their tour to Boston.

JOINS A CARNIVAL.

According to his annual custom, John Apgar, of Plainfield, an employe of the Apgar Construction Company, has laid his carpentry implements aside to go with a carnival for the summer. The one which Mr. Apgar will join this year opens at Scranton, Pa., next Thursday. Mr. Apgar conducts a stand at which one tries to ring canes.

DUNELLENITES HAVE SORRY EXPERIENCE ON AUTO TRIP

Charles Wrage, the contractor, hopes that it will never be his lot to put in another day like he and his three men, Fred Wrage, Harry Kramer and Theodore Kuldoshes experienced Saturday. At 5 o'clock in the morning, Mr. Wrage and his men left by automobile for Demarest on the Hudson, where they were to build a chicken house. All went well until the party was halfway between Westfield and Springfield, when the vibrator of the machine failed and the auto stopped. After a walk of a half-a-mile along the road, Mr. Kuldoshes located a telephone and was finally granted permission to use it. Suffice it to say that Contractor Wrage and his men were not able to resume their journey until 9:30. They arrived at Demarest about noon and it was dusk before they started homeward. All went well on this trip until DeKalb avenue, Plainfield, was reached, when the supply of gasoline gave out and the machine again stopped. There is a garage at the corner of DeKalb avenue, but the hour was about midnight and it was closed. It was necessary that somebody go for gasoline to the nearest "all-night" garage which happened to be Waller's, in this borough, and Theo. good-naturedly volunteered.

CYCLIST FINED $3.

Eke Egarueski, of the Equator Park section, was fined $3 by Recorder Campbell in the borough court, Saturday afternoon for riding his bicycle on the sidewalk on Sanford avenue.

Miss Bessie Darnell, of Mariner's Harbor, who has been visiting Miss Lillian Fisher, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hamley and children motored to Port Murray Saturday afternoon and spent the week-end there visiting Mrs. Hamley's father, Albert Fleming.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Terry have returned from a week's trip to Fortress Monroe, Va.

Clarence Waldron, who is employed as fireman at the Gabrielle and Schall factory, has been unable to work for the past four days owing to an injury sustained while at work.

Miss Natalie Terry was the guest of Miss Margery Fetter at Hopewell recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Smith, of Railroad avenue, spent the week-end in Newark visiting friends.

EDWARD HARVEY IMPROVING.

According to reports from the Muhlenberg Hospital, Edward Harvey, who was injured several weeks ago at the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company, is improving.

W. H. R. Hardingham and family, now stopping at Truell court, Plainfield, will move shortly into the house on Mountainview terrace, which Mrs. Martha M. Parmenter vacated last week.

Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, Jr., of Westfield, visited Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, of Dunellen avenue, yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. William Giles entertained the New Market Card Club Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Elwood Bolmer and Miss Hazel Bolmer, of Allentown, Pa., who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Smith since last Monday, were joined by Mr. Bolmer yesterday.

AUTOIST HITS BOY AT SCOTCH PLAINS

Four Year Old Son of William Bellerjean Has Narrow Escape on South Ave.

A half hour after he had been warned by Marshal Bogan for reckless driving, Carlton Drumpelmann, a nineteen-year-old youth of Westfield, ran into the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bellerjeau, of South avenue, Saturday afternoon as the little fellow turned from the Central crossing into South avenue. In his effort to pass the youngster without stopping Drumpelmann went over on the wrong side of the road and hit the boy, knocking him and the bicycle under the machine. The front wheel passed over the lower part of his body, but the frame of the wheel acted as a protection and the lad escaped with some bad bruises and cuts.

A little while before the accident the same car turned the corner from Martine avenue into North at a high rate of speed and narrowly escaped hitting another bicyclist. The borough marshal cautioned him then. When the accident happened he remembered the license number, although the youth denied it. The boy was accompanied by other members of his family, who took the borough official to task for stopping them to get names and addresses. The matter has been reported to the State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles and Drumpelmann will be summoned before him to show why his license should not be revoked.

PARISH HOUSE CLOSED.

After being open for four successful months, the Piarsh House closed Saturday night until after warm weather. Being closed for two years, the popular pleasure resort was opened late in December through the efforts of the Rev. J. Madison Hare for three afternoons and nights in the week. The numbers that have flocked there tended to show how local people regarded it and many are sorry because of its closing. For two or three nights during the coming month the bowling alleys will be open to enable the Parish House bowling team to roll the few remaining games on the schedule.

The last meeting of the Tuesday Afternoon Bridge Club until after the summer months will be held tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Thomas Louden, of Martine avenue. Mrs. Louden will be assisted in the entertaining by Miss Hazel Gardner.

William Lindsey and family have removed into the house on Bartle avenue formerly occupied by John Lyndall.

KAISER'S MESSAGE IS NOW ON ITS WAY

Gerard Sending Details of the Interview.

Washington, May 1.—Ambassador Gerard has cabled briefly that he is forwarding a long report of his meeting with the German emperor. The report is understood to convey a message of good will and friendship from the German sovereign and to make it clear to President Wilson and the American people that Germany wants peace with the United States.

Though not wishing to minimize the importance of any message of friendship and good will or the conciliatory attitude of the German emperor, officials here do not regard Mr. Gerard's dispatch as likely to eliminate all tension. The statement is reiterated that the president is firm in his stand that Germany must squarely meet his demands, which call for an immediate abandonment of present methods of submarine warfare. Secretary Lansing said that the situation remains unchanged.

Reports are current in diplomatic circles that President Wilson has set the anniversary of the sinking of the Lusitania as the limit for Germany's answer to his note. It was impossible to confirm the reports, but friends of the president were inclined to regard them more seriously than mere speculations.

They point out that the president has told several callers within the last week that he had practically made up his mind as to the length of time he would wait for Germany's reply. Despite his command for "immediate" action, the president has emphasized his desire to give Germany a last chance.

KILLED ON WAY TO ILL WIFE

Husband Hurrying Across Railroad Tracks Is Hit by Train.

Harrison, N. J., May 1.—Lawrence Ross, a fireman, of 560 Schuyler avenue, Arlington, employed at the Arlington Manufacturing company, received a telephone summons to hurry to his home, as his wife had been taken ill.

He cut across the tracks of the Erie railroad and failed to notice the approach of a train, which struck and killed him.

WOULD SINK ALL FOOD SHIPS

Submarine Commander Bares Germany's Plan to a Sea Captain.

Rotterdam, May 1.—The captain of the Dutch ship Berkelstrom, which was sunk in the North sea April 23 by a German submarine, is quoted by the Neuw Rotterdamsche Courant as declaring that the commander of the submarine told him the Germans intended to sink all ships of every nationality carrying food to England.

GUGLIELMO MARCONI.

Declares New Weapons Will Put End to the War.

Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless telegraph, predicts that science will decide the war. He says: "This will be a scientific war up to the very end. Scientists must continue seeking new weapons of attack and defense. Victory will go to the side that persists most steadily in the application of scientific discoveries. I am happy to say all the scientists in the allied countries are working together in harmony."

WORK ON PLANS FOR GREAT NAVAL FORCE

Program to Put United States In Second Place.

Washington, May 1.—A program to put the American navy in second place within three years and a fleet built upon a definite, well balanced plan designed to produce and maintain a fighting naval force of a size to meet any emergency, a real preparedness program, will be offered to the country within a short time.

It will have the approval of Admiral Dewey and the naval general board. The board, of which Admiral Dewey is president, has been working on the plan for the last ten days. Representative Thomas S. Butler, ranking Republican member of the house naval affairs committee, decided after a conference with his associates that a five year building program was too slow, as even at the end of that time the United States navy would probably be third or a poor fourth among the fleets of the world.

After having reached this decision Mr. Butler conferred with Secretary Daniels, who agreed to ask the general board to supply Mr. Butler with the information desired, such information to be presented to congress. It was explained to Secretary Daniels that it was the wish of the group of men desiring to see the United States navy in second place within three years to promote such a scheme without any political considerations. Every effort will be made after the report is presented to congress to enlist the aid of congressmen of all parties.

INJURIES FATAL TO GEORGE KREGAR

Twelve-Year-Old Lad Dies in Muhlenberg Folowing Accident at So. Plainfield.

George Kreger, the twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kreger, of 422 Spruce street, who was badly injured at South Plainfield, Saturday noon, when a Standard Oil tank wagon passed over his body, died at Muhlenberg Hospital, about five hours after he was admitted for treatment. The weight of the heavy vehicle crushed the little fellow's chest and abdomen so that one of the ribs penetrated a lung. He was only semi-conscious from the time of the accident until death ensued.

Coroner Hubbard, of New Brunswick, investigated the case and afterward granted a certificate of accidental death. The funeral service will be held at the parents' home this afternoon. It will be in charge of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, and interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

As told in Saturday's Daily Press, George went riding to South Plainfield on the tank wagon with William Madden, the driver, of West Third street. While Madden was delivering oil at the Lehigh Valley Railroad station the horses were frightened by a passing engine, bolted suddenly and throwing the boy from the driver's seat to the ground. He landed directly in the path of the wheels and was run over before a hand could be lifted to save him. The mangled form was placed in an automobile by Robert Hamilton, who made a record trip to Muhlenberg Hospital to give the boy proper treatment. The little victim leaves no brothers or sisters. He was a grandson of Anthony Kreger, the well known local musician.

DEATH COMES TO GEORGE E. STILLMAN

Funeral Service Will Be Held at the Late Home Tomorrow at 2 O'clock.

The funeral of George Edward Stillman, whose death occurred Saturday noon after an illness of about two weeks, will be held at the late home, 827 West Sixth street, tomorrow afternoon at 2 oo'clock and will be in charge of Rev. Dr. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church. Burial will be in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Stillman was born at De Ruyter, New York, March 9, 1850, the son of Charles A. Stillman and Esther Babcock Stillman. With his parents he moved to Westerly, R. I., where he was educated and remained until 1879, when he moved to this city as foreman for the Potter Printing Press Company, which position he held up to the time of his death. Before he came here he had served his time in the Rhode Island State Militia as captain of a company, and his services were eagerly sought in the campaign of 1880 by the young Republicans of this city as captain of the well remembered "Lincoln Guards," one of the best companies. Senator E. R. Ackerman, ex-Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, and the late Freeholder J. Hervey Doane were a few of the names on the roster.

Mr. Stillman was at once time assessor for the Third ward, appointed by former Mayor Fisk and continuing in office until the election of ex-Mayor Stewart. To this office he brought the same thoroughness and care that was his practice in all his walks of life and as such he gave universal satisfaction. He had been a director in the Home Building and Loan Association since its organization in 1888, and lately its vice president. He was a member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of this city; for twenty-six years past its assistant treasurer, and for ten years past a church trustee, to which office he had just been re-elected at the annual meeting in April for another term of five years. He had also served as a director of the American Sabbath Tract Society for a period of 12 years from 1888 to 1900.

His first wife, Cassie Powers Stillman, died in October, 1907, and on December 25, 1911, he married Annie Louise Birge, of Providence, R. I., who survives him. He left no children but is survived by an aged stepmother, Mrs. Content Stillman, a half sister of Mrs. Etta Hemphill, and ahalf-brother, Herman Stillman, all of Westerly.

BIBB CASE TO COME UP BEFORE THE GRAND JURY

One of the first cases to come before the Union County Grand Jury which meets tomorrow in Elizabeth, will be that against Claude Bibb, the negro who shot Iona Hunter four times here a short time ago because she refused to marry him. Bibb later shot himself, but he recovered after several weeks in the hospital and has been in jail in Elizabeth for several weeks. The woman will appear against him.

LAID CORNERSTONE OF EAST END SCHOOL

New Emerson Structure Ceremonies Witnessed by Large Gathering.

Under the auspices of the East End Civic Association, the cornerstone of the new Emerson School on Emerson avenue was laid with appropriate ceremonies yesterday afternoon. Several hundred people took part in the program as arranged by the executive committee of the association.

Mayor Leighton Calkins, President Archibald Cox, of the Board of Education, and Superintendent H. M. Maxson, of the public schools, spoke briefly before the stone was placed in position by Rev. E. S. Ralston, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church, who is also president of the Civic Association. Mr. Ralston made an appropriate address in which he extended thanks to the Board of Education and citizens for listening to the appeal of Netherwood residents and locating the fine structure in that section. The program closed with the entire assemblage singing "America."

A box placed inside the cornerstone contained a list of Plainfield's municipal officers, the personnel of the Board of Education and school officials, the officers and members of the East End Civic Association, the names of the teachers in the present temporary Leland Avenue School, copies of the Plainfield Daily Press and Courier-News of Saturday, April 29, and an American flag.

SEVEN HURT WHEN JITNEY OVERTURNS

Passengers to Perth Amboy Upset in South Plainfield Accident.

When a jitney buss in which they were riding to Perth Amboy overturned yesterday morning near the Lehigh Valley railroad crossing on Park avenue, Michael Bowman, Michael and Thomas Filler and John Years—all of 725 South Second street, Plainfield; William Yitzosac, of 649 West Third street, and Mr. and Mrs. John Toswiski, of 311 Lee place, were all badly shaken up.

Mrs. Toswiski seemed to be badly injured and was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, but an examination there proved that she was suffering from nothing more serious than a cut on the head. The others were only slightly bruised and cut. The jitney was badly damaged, its body being smashed.

BUSINESS MEN TO DISCUSS LOCATION OF PLANT HERE

The details of the merger of the Credit Men's Association with the Business Men's Association have all been worked out, and Martin B Stutsman, attorney, has been employed by the association. He has charge of the credit and collection business, and the members are requested to get in touch with him, as he keeps valuable data and a special method of collecting accounts.

The association will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in Coward's Hall, 109 Park avenue, at 8 o'clock, when several matters of importance will be considered including the discussion of the location of an industrial plant in Plainfield.

LOCAL COUPLE WEDDED IN ST. MARY'S CHURCH

Miss Blanche Schierholtz, of 412 John street, and George Rohrs, of 738 Kensington avenue, were married in St. Mary's church at 5:30 yesterday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father McDonald in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The couple were attended by Miss Elise Schroepfer, of Paterson, and James McKenzie, of this city.

Following a reception at the home of the bride's mother, the couple left for a wedding trip, which will include visits to Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. On rreturning they will make their home on Kensington avenue. Mr. Rohrs is employed as a chauffeur by W. W. Coriell, of Belvidere avenue.

RESCUE MISSION SERVICE.

John Temple will conduct the Rescue Mission service at 8 o'clock tonight. There will be special music.

Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donohue, of this city, attended the first amateur race meeting of the spring season at the Rockaway Hunting Club at Hewlett Bay, L. I., Saturday afternoon.

In Want Ads Do Not Use An Unnecessary Word, Nor Omit a Necessary One

The Big Print Red Letter Bible

Fascinating Figures About The Bible

Over 200 million copies of the Bible have been printed. Touching end to end, they would go 'round the world—25000 miles. Piled one on another, it would take 4000 mountains like Mt. Everest, the highest in the world, to reach the topmost book. But this is not all. The public libraries of the entire world could not contain them. It would take two of the largest ships ever built, loaded to the deck, or a hundred freight trains, with 25 cars to the train, to transport them. Stacked in columns, they would make 100,000 Eiffel Towers, the tallest structure ever built by human hands. To print them would require at least 100 billions of pages of type.

The mere physical facts about the Bible stagger the imagination. All the other books ever printed seem microscopic by comparison. The Bible has been read by more people than any ten thousand other books. Today it forms the basis of religion for several hundred millions of the most enlightened peoples of the earth. The greatest war in history began in 1914. and shook the world from center to circumference. As a result, untold millions of people, startled out of their lethargy, took to the Bible to save their sanity and restore their mental vision. The first year of the war saw more Bibles sold than in any other year since it was printed.

It was the consideration of these facts that led this newspaper, in conjunction with all the leading newspapers of the country, to seize upon the psychological moment in which to inaugrate a nation-wide revival of Bible reading. The edition now offered in these columns is the same as is being offered by the leading papers everywhere—not for profit to themselves—but for the benefit of their readers.

We invite comparison with any other edition of the Bible. We challenge competitive examination; secure in the knowledge that the Famous Red Letter Edition we offer, is easily first—and beyond any ordinary offering by publishers who seek only profit.

ISN'T IT SO?

What is a good value? Everybody talks about it, but did you ever hear the real meaning of it? Well, this is our definition of it, and see if it isn't your own.

A good value in clothes is when you put on in your home a suit which fits you so perfectly and is so indescribably individual in style, that you sort of feel that you have put it all over the man that sold it to you!

That's a common experience among Rothberg patrons.

CELEBRATION IN NEWARK BEGUN

City Gayly Decked For 250th Anniversary.

BIG PARADE FIRST EVENT

Banquet to Former Governor Murphy as Chairman of Committee—Great Industrial Exposition to Be Opened May 13 by President Wilson.

Newark, May 1.—Newark is in holiday attire for the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary celebration, which will continue until the end of October. A banquet was given at the Washington to former Governor Franklin Murphy, chairman of the committee of one hundred, which has charge of the fete.

Broad street from Washington to Lincoln park and Market street from the courthouse to the Pennsylvania railroad station are illuminated at night with thousands and thousands of brilliant incandescent lights.

Business houses along all the main thoroughfares of the city are decorated with American flags and with orange and black bunting, the colors used in the celebration. Fifty-two massive pylons have been erected along Broad and Market streets.

Church bells and factory whistles ushered in the celebration. Two hours later the parade of the national guard, Boy Scouts and other organizations was held.

Formal opening of the celebration took place at Proctor's Palace theater on Market street. There was an overture by the Newark Musicians' club orchestra, song "America" by choir and audience, invocation by the Right Rev. Dr. Edwin S. Lines and addresses by former Governor Murphy, Mayor Raymond and Governor James F. Fielder.

"Brief Reminiscences of Fifty Years Ago" was given by former Postmaster James L. Hays, and the celebration ode was read by the author, the Rev. Dr. Lyman Whitney Allen. Then there was a historic address by Justice Francis J. Swayze, president of the New Jersey Historical society. Other parts of the program were special music by the Musicians' club orchestra; song, "Old Hundred," choir and audience, and the benediction, the Right Rev. Dr. John J. O'Connor.

At 8 p. m. there will be a musical festival at the First regiment armory.

Many pageants, parades, concerts, historical and contemporary entertainments, will mark the anniversary festival. Chief place among them should perhaps be given to the industrial exposition to be opened on May 13 by President Woodrow Wilson. Newark has 2,200 factories engaged in the manufacture of 252 distinct lines of goods, having an annual output valued at $259,000,000. This makes Newark eleventh in the annual aggregate value of products.

PROTEST AGAINST LICENSE.

Not Good For Girls to Have Saloonkeeper as Father, They Say.

Passaic, May 1.—An unusual argument will be used by residents of Clifton, N. J., when they appear before Judge Abram Klenert to protest against the renewal of a retail liquor license to Julius Schwartz of Highland avenue. They will point out that one of their strongest objections is that Schwartz has seven children, the majority girls, and that the surroundings are not good for them.

The members of the Acquackanonk township police department, including Chief William J. Coughlan, will be among the witnesses summoned to testify against Schwartz. Three petitions of protest against the license renewal have been filed, and they contain about ninety names.

TO GET PAY WHILE DRILLING.

Montclair Banks Make Provision For Employees at Plattsburg.

Montclair, May 1.—Four of the banks of Montclair have gone on record as willing to pay any employees desiring to take the Plattsburg training for the full period while they are away. More men have enrolled for Plattsburg from Montclair than from Newark, which has a population fifteen times as large.

The first drill of the Montclair battalion of citizen soldiery, organized at a public meeting, was held in the old high school gymnasium. Those interested in preparedness, but who are unable to arrange to go to Plattsburg, are particularly desired in the ranks.

GIRL OF SIX FINDS CONVICT

Identifies Fugitive From Picture She Saw In Rogues' Gallery.

Billings, Mont., May 1.—Opal Hartzell, six years old, daughter of the sheriff of Deer Lodge county, has identified an escaped Iowa convict. While in her father's office she glanced at some pictures in the rogues' gallery and told her father one of the pictures was that of a man in the kitchen.

Harry Hayes, who broke his parole after having been sentenced to ten years, will be returned to Warden J. E. Sanders at Fort Madison, Ia., as a result of the investigation. The child will receive a $50 reward.

HARRISON MAY QUIT.

Governor General of Philippines Thought Likely to Resign.

Washington, May 1.—Francis Burton Harrison, governor general of the Philippines, may resign his post and remain permanently in the United States when he returns here soon on his vacation.

Rumors to this effect are current among his friends in congress, the reason given being that he is dissatisfied over conditions there, and unless legislation is passed looking to the ultimate independence, which he has been advised is not now probable, he probably will quit.

EDWIN CRAIG IN AN INTERVIEW ON THE "HIGH COST OF GASOLINE"

"I can't see the reason for all this excitement about the price of gasoline," said Edwin A. Craig, agent for the Reo Motor Car Company, "nor can I understand why some folk who ought to know better take the matter so seriously.

"Of course, if there was the slightest chance of '40-cent' gasoline in the near future, or ever a chance that the present prices would continue, it would be different. But anyone with even the most superficial knowledge of conditions knows that is impossible.

"No one worries about the price of aluminum—though that is now twice its normal price. Nor brass, nor lead.

"The price of steel is high—but nobody supposes for a moment that those prices will obtain after the European war is over.

"War conditions and war prices is the answer to the gasoline situation as to the others.

"So far as New York is concerned, that city is an exception to every rule anyway. At this time it is impossible to ship freight into New York, so most of it is hauled from far distant points—and the rest is shipped in by express. That is the reason for New York's 30 cents per gallon, and of course it is for the moment only.

"We are exporting tremendous quantities of gasoline to Europe. In fact, nistcehe Galician, Roumanian and Russian fields are inactive, we are suplying the world with gasoline, as well as all other petroleum products.

"I noticed the other day that twelve big tank steamers had cleared on the same day—the biggest day's shipment ever made. And every available tank ship is in service. The Standard Oil Company is rushing work on 30 of the largest tank steamers ever built.

"Why, just think! Practically all the cooking at the front is done with gasoline. Then there are 40,000 motor trucks to be fed, as well as myriads of greedy aeroplanes. Every automobile in Europe is doing double duty—and little attention can be paid to economy in that service. Tremendous quantities are destroyed too in storage places by enemy aircraft and shells.

"Surely there's ample reason for the present shortage and for the present prices. They are war-time conditions, that is all. And they will end with the war. In fact we are at the peak now—prices will go no higher and may be expected to come down any day.

"Incidentally, I have it on pretty good authority that oil producers, like men in other lines, have been quick to take advantage of the situation and to temporarily advance prices just because they could. In fact, I am told that in order to uphold prices and for speculation purposes, a very large proportion of the oil wells of this country are actually 'plugged'—they are not pumping. Nor are these wells controlled by 'Standard Oil.' They are independent for the most part. Right now there are 300,000 barrels of crude petroleum in the big reservoirs on the at Oil City, held for '$3 per barrel,' and speculators are paying that and more. There's 'war brides' for you!

"Of course that condition cannot last. In fact there is evidence that it is about over. Producers have been taking the long prices of lat at a rate that will surely readjust matters.

"But you say, could not the producers keep prices up by a continuation of those tactics? The answer is that in normal peace times, just as soon as gasoline in this country approaches 20 cents per gallon, Russian and Asiatic oils come in in floods. Oil, like water, soon finds it level—economically as well as physically.

"Some will recall that just before the war broke out people on the Pacific coast became alarmed at the soaring prices and feared they would continue. A company was financed to bring Asiatic gasoline over—and immediately thereafter Pacific Coats points go the cheapest gasoline they had had for years. In short, just as soon as the price of gasolic reaches a certain level it begins to flow back this way—and to stop competitno before it gets serious, our distillers cut prices. That was the real reason for the various price cuttings in the past; not the supposed 'war' between the trust and independents. Only the war prevents that now.

"There is an impression abroad that the supply will some time run out. I can't see it that way.

"For example, just consider this. Whereas, formerly only seven per cent. of the crude oil was available for gasoline, today, because of improved methods of distilling and improvements of carburetors and motors, 65 per cent. of all crude oil is rendered suitable for engine consumption! And new wells by hundreds are being opened up every day, and better processes of distillation. Oil experts tell me that the need for a 'kerosene carburetor' has passed—that they now knoow how, and it only remains to install the equipment, to break up the kerosene molecules into gasoline molecules, to render all that is now sold as kerosene available for power puruoses.

"Bunk—that stuff about a shortage—pure bunk! It's like the tales of exhausted coal fields and timber forests. No generation now living will see that shortage. Time was when those commodities were wastefully used and sold for less than their value as compared with other commodities—but that is the whole story.

"Now let us consider it from another angle—that of the automobile user. He need feel no concern over the present condition if he was satisfied with that which obtained, say three years ago.

"He is getting more miles per dollar today that he got then, despite the dierence in price—even at wartime prices. And it may be news to him, but it is a fact, that he is getting more miles per gallon out of the low-test fuel today than he got from his high-test gasoline then. And there is less waste from evaporation, etc.

"Reason, of course, is the tremendous improvement in carburetors, motors, and in automobiles generally. Why, we used to think nothing of it when our motors spit and coughed and back-fired on starting in cold weather—with 'real gasoline' too. Who ever experiences that trouble now? Why cold weather is the same as warm to a good automobile motor nowadays.

"I wonder how many buyers consider another phase of the matter—that the maker has, as a matter of fact, donated all the gasoline he can hope to use in the next five or six years when he sold him the car.

"Just credit against the 'temporarily high' cost of gasoline the 'permanently lower' cost of automobiles—and there is a large margin on the side of the user.

"For example, four years ago Reo the Fifth sold for $1,395. Today the price of that model is $875. And it is a vastly better car, because of improvements we have been able to work out in the meantime.

"Then you'd have to pay $2,750 to $3,000 for a car the size of the New Reo Six—and every motorist knows it was not possible to procure present-day quality at any price then. Today that seven-passenger car sells for $1,250—$500 difference in both cases. At 20 cents per gallon that would pay for 2,500 gallons of gasoline, which would mean 40,000 to 60,000 miles. Is gasoline high? And if so, what matters it when the cost per mile is less than one-fifth of one cent per passenger?

REO

Experience—Plus Good Intent

EXPERIENCE—engineering skill—enable a manufacturer to do either of two things—skimp, and yet make the product look the part—or make it true all the way thru.

LOTS OF MONEY is made by skimping—no use blinking the fact. It's there. In the short run—big dividends for a few years.

SO AFTER ALL, it simmers down to the matter of experience alone; not equipment alone; not facilities, but good intent.

WE RATHER LIKE THAT TERM, good intent. It means so much. It is so much to you as a buyer.

FOR SINCE YOU CAN'T see the heart of the metal—since you can't know till you've driven it a few months, just how well your car is made, the one thing you can tie to—your only real guarantee, is the Good Intent of the men who made it.

FOR IF YOU KNOW that those men honestly intended to put the best they knew into the making of that car, you know it must be a good car—Good Intent backed by long experience and recognized skill.

REO GOOD INTENT is proverbial; Reo Integrity is as well known in automobile circles as Reo Factory Facilities and Reo Experience—and those are conceded to be the best and largest in the industry.

CHALMERS MOTOR CO. Detroit, Mich., U.S.A.

"Quality First

She's active, lacks "nerves," and very modern—the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers

She's active, full of life, lacks "nerves," and delivers a terrific wallop with only the slightest effort.

I mean by that a power-wallop. Because she turns up 3400 revolutions per minute. Her crank shaft speed surpasses that of any other American car.

Though there are three built in the U. S. A. that get a bit beyond 3100 r. p. m.

It's like an electric fan, which turns up 4000 r. p. m., or a turbine which does around 4300.

Of course, the Chalmers engine doesn't hit 3400 all the time. 3400 is the maximum. When the car is running 5 miles an hour she turns up 250 r. p. m.

At 10 miles an hour she does 500 r. p. m. At 15 she does 750. At 20, 1000. At 30, 1500.

So you see the engine isn't hitting the highest speed at the slower car speeds—those speeds you drive 90 per cent of the time.

In a way it's like horse-power. You say the horse-power of your car is 40. You mean by that the maximum is 40.

Yet at 10 miles an hour you are using probably less than 10 h. p. While at 20 miles an hour you are using about 17 or 18 h. p. And so on.

3400 r. p. m. is just another way of stating horse-power. It's the modern way. Because it shows power through supreme engine speed and not through large bore and stroke, which means a brute of an engine, and hence a vehicle of great weight.

The day of such a car has gone by. You and I want a light, spunky beast that responds to the slightest touch of the accelerator, that pulverizes hills, that drives straight as a sunbeam, that has the lure in her lines, and obeys.

That's the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers. I've never had any person buy one and tell me she wasn't there. For she is—100 per cent.

Run in and I will show you a car that has doubled my business.

Ask me about our service inspection coupons. They are negotiable with all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is a most important consideration in buying your car.

AN INDUSTRIAL PREPAREDNESS PROGRAM.

Howard E. Coffin, in an article in the May World's Work, outlines a plan for National Defense which seems to be the only logical method to bring the industrial organization of the country in line with a proper preparedness program. Mr. Coffin says that the Naval Consulting Board first desires to get an accurate census of manufacturing plants, which are to equip themselves with the necessary tools and train themselves by making a small amount of munitions each year. Then it is proposed that all skilled labor be enlisted in the service of the government to make munitions in time of war, instead if being sent to the front. Without such co-operation, he declares, if a war comes and we send our soldiers, be they regulars, militia or volunteers to the front, they will be slaughtered and defeated.

Without such industrial organization no other preparations for defense can be effective. Armies and navies in modern warfare cannot fight without constant flow of all kinds of munitions to the front, and this flow can be achieved only by the almost universal organization of industry for war purposes. The fighting forces in Europe, for example, take three-fourths or more of the industrial activity of France, England, and Germany.

The plan has the approval of the President of the United States, the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of the Navy. It has also the cordial co-operation of the five great engineering societies, made up of the Chemical Engineers, the Civil Engineers, the Electrical Engineers, the Mechanical Engineers, and the Mining Engineers. The engineers are the men best equipped in the country to put the program into operation.

Also co-operating is the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and, through it and its affiliated organizations, the co-operation of most of the owners and operators of the plants which must be organized for war work. At the same time the Associated Advertising Clubs of this country have made plans to co-operate in putting before the public in the advertising pages of the magazines and newspapers and on the billboards from the Atlantic to the Pacific the importance of industrial organization for national defense.

It is a pleasant fact to emphasize that all this is done as a patriotic service, without pay, by the members of the Naval Consulting Board committee, the committees of engineers in each State, the committee of the Chamber of Commerce, and by the Associated Advertising Clubs.

The spirit in which the engineers and the manufacturers and the advertisers have taken hold of this plan for industrial organization for national defense is the same spirit which every one else should evidence toward it— a constructive recognition that every citizen owes his country a duty, and that a most necessary duty at present is to support in every way, shape, and form the practical plan of Mr. Coffin's committee to make us as a nation so well prepared that there will be no profit in attacking us.

A few weeks ago the Daily Press completed a serial from the pen of Mrs. Eva Leonard, entitled "Marrying for Money." It was the only serial story of the many which we have published in recent years that apparently attracted any attention from our readers, and on two or three occasions, due to the confused conditions when the paper moved into its new home, the installments were omitted for a few days. It was then that we learned that people were not only reading Mrs. Leonard's articles, but that they intended to get the whole series, and did not want them interrupted. In view of all this, it is a pleasure for us to announce that Mrs. Leonard starts a new series of articles, entitled "Marrying a Butterfly," and we will endeavor to give them uninterruptedly until the end. The series is bound to arouse discussion among those who are interested in Mrs. Leonard's work, for two great questions are dealt with. They are, "What proportion of the girls of today think of all the financial and material phases before they consider the relation of love and sacrifice to married life?" and "How many young husbands find that a spoiled child for a wife means a task mistress with an iron hand and an insatiable soul?"

Congratulations are due E. F. Feickert, of the State Trust Company, for his successful efforts to bring another big automobile factory to this city. While Plainfield is well known as a city of homes, there is plenty of room for expansion and development of its manufacturing plants, and after all much is dependent upon these for the future upbuilding of the city. The exact details of how the task was completed will probably not be known until a statement comes from the concern, but that Mr. Feickert had much to do with the job is undisputed. If every citizen tried to do as much as he has done in this matter the city would have the greatest boom of any community in New Jersey.

We are glad to see that our neighbor, the Courier-News, has joined the list of newspapers that refuse to print the baseball pools. The Daily Press stopped this two years or more ago, and set forth exactly the same reasons for so doing that the Courier-News explained on Friday night last. No reputable newspaper can afford to aid and abet any kind of a gambling scheme, and the printing of the runs scored each day in box form was for no other purpose than to make it easier for the conduct of pools.

When Maggie Sings.

No ordinary voice is hers,
Because it really stirs
The souls of those who listen and
Her kind of music understand.
There's not another of its kind
That anyone can call to mind.
It's plain to see she has a tone
That's really, truly, all her own.
No Ttarazzini or Calve
Can ever hope to sing the way
That Maggie does when she is right
For her accustomed vocal flight.
Life loses all its other stings
When Maggie sings.

When Maggie sings "My Rosary,"
The folks who listen must agree
No one on earth could imitate
Her technique, and that's safe to state.
Her audience beneath her sway
Sees other trouble pass away.
They float on a mysterious sea,
Where they had never thought to be.
The universe seems just to stand still,
A feeling stage just seems to thrill
Them and a ghastly message send
That this world is about to end.
I always wish it would, by jings,
When Maggie sings.

Uncle Abner

There ain't nothing that breaks up the harmony of any occasion like a red necktie.

There ain't no wax figger in a store winder that looks as good as the genuine article.

There is one little thing that a lot of people will never have to pay and that is an income tax.

Any feller who kin turn down a book agent in less than 10 minutes is going to succeed in anything he undertakes.

The trouser skirt with pockets is the latest thing for wimmen. I always knowned they would wear 'em sooner or later.

There is only one thing better than havin' a little money in the bank, and that is havin' a little more.

Jes' Loafin' Around.

No matter what may come to pass old Hi Tubbs kin be found
Without fail, on his reg'lar job, which is jes' sittin' round.
He's never done a single thing that looked at all like work,
And he's an expert on the art of knowin' how to shirk.
When he's asked his opinion on a thing he says, "Ho-hum,
I ain't had time to think about it very much, by gum."
He says there's no use huslin', for it wears the system out,
And worryin' is boud to put a feller up the spout.
He sees the others get ahead, and garner up the wealth,
The one ambition that he knows is to retain his health,
He lives 'round with the relatives, and never makes complaint,
Exceptin' when the grub should be precisely what it ain't.
They have to entertain him just like company, you know,
Or else he gets right peeved at them, and up and tells them so.
They're glad to pay his railroad fare around from place to place,
So as to keep him movin' and to get rid of his face.
They pass him on quite reg'lar fer someone to take in;
They send him to some relative, they've got a grudge again.
He's always sad about his health which no one understands;
They hustle him along so that he won't die on their hands.
'Tis safe to say when all the folks he knows are under ground,
And are forgotten, old Hi Tubbs will still be settin' round.

The Style Show.

I wonder where they get 'em—all those styles,
These windows full of fashions by the miles;
Wonder whose imaginations
To add unto our grave financial trials.

They Are?

--Astor Theatre--

Cleo Ridgely, the beautiful Lasky star, who is appearing with Wallace Reid in the Jesse L. Lasky production of Jeanie Macpherson's thrilling love story, "The Golden Chance," at the Astor Theatre today, has for several years been considered one of the photo drama's most captivating stars. Outside of her work, Miss Ridgely's great passion is horseback riding, and when she is not at the studio she is exploring the trail and byways of the California mountains. Several years ago, Miss Ridgely started from New York and rode all the way to Los Angeles. It took her eighteen months to make the journey, but she arrived with the same horse and dog with which she left the Eastern metropolis. Several times she was delayed by snow and floods, and from Pittsburg she had to retrace her way as far east as Washington, and then approach California over the southern route through Texas. Wallace Reid, the distinguished star who is co-starring with Cleo Ridgely, has been a soldier of fortune nearly all his life. Being the son of the famous dramatist Hal Reid, he made his first stage appearance at the age of five, playing Little Eva in the Uncle Tom Cabin production. He later appeared in vaudeville in one of his father's sketches. Tiring of the footlights, he secured a position as a civil engineer and helped build the great Shishone dam in Montana. When his work there was completed, he ran a hotel in Wyoming, but resigned that to become an editor of an Eastern magazine. Tiring of the confinement of an office and having received an excellent offer, he joined a motion picture producing company. He tired of acting and learned the mechanics of the motion picture camera. He then became a director and wrote scenarios of the photoplays he produced, also playing the leading roles. He was engaged by the Lasky Co. to appear as leading man with the great operatic prima donna, Geraldine Farrar, in the production of "Carmen" and "Maria Rosa." Since that time he has been a prominent Lasky star. Tomorrow, the Bluebird Photoplay Co. will present at this theatre, "Tangled Hearts," with Louise Lovely and Lon Chaney, who will be remembered for their wonderful work in "The Grip of Jealousy," which was shown at this house a short while ago. This time Miss Lovely plays a lovable widow who solves the problems of life for two married couples who are sadly in need of her good offices. There is a gripping story, teeming with thrills and heart interest, told in beautiful photoplay, to reward Miss Lovely's admirers in their visit to this theatre. Always a clean bill at the Astor Theatre, nothing sensational. Our motto, "Quality, not Quantity." We give Travelstamps.

RESTLESS NIGHTS

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Will you allow me to ask Dr. Biederwolf, through your columns, the following question:

In your lectures here you are reported as saying that salvation can only be secured through Jesus and that all those who do not accept Jesus as the Christ are bound straight for hell. Is it your intention to say that all Jews, Mohammedans and other non-Christians who, as is well known, have not accepted Christ or anybody else as the Saviour or Son of God, will go to hell, no matter how clean a life they may lead and no matter how earnestly they may serve their fellow men and the God in whom they believe and worship.

A reply by Dr. Biederwolf through the columns of the Press would be of great interest to a large number of the citizens of Plainfield.

S. C. NEWMARK.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Referring to the storm which has broken over the unhappy head of our mis-Representative Capstick, I beg to say that Chas. W. McCutcheon has sent me a slobbering letter addressed to him by Capstick in reply to an indignant protest against his un-American failure to support the President, and against the outrageous statements of Leader Mann. Capstick says: "It is my desire, and will be at all times, to support the President of the United States in any matter where the national honor of our country is at stake!"

I suppose the lightning-change mind of a pinhead politician can square this statement with a vote against tabling the McLemore resolution, but at any rate it is some relief to be able to hope that the prodigal is beginning to come to himself; that his appetite for the husk food of his porcine herd of the far-off country is failing, and that perhaps he will set his face and his feet towards his former American home.

Yours truly,
HOWARD M'WILLIAMS.

HIGH COST OF GASOline

"I might go on indefinitely showing that the increased efficiency of automobiles and motor trucks, due to improvement in design and manufacture has more than kept pace with the price of and more than offset the difference in cost of gasoline, and will continue to do so.

"Suffice it to say the condition is only of the moment anyway, and even if we knew it could be permanent, it still would not matter, for, on the whole, the cost of motoring and of motor trucking is coming down."

- Proctor's Theatre -

The hundreds of patrons who enjoyed Theda Bara's masterful portrayal of "Carmen" on Saturday, as produced by the William Fox Company, today have an opportunity of comparing that feature with the Paramount version of "Carmen" with Geraldine Farrar in the title role. The management took special pains and expended a great deal of time and money to present these two colossal attractions in consecutive order, knowing that their patrons would appreciate viewing the two productions and passing upon the merits of each. Today, therefore, you will be delighted to see Miss Farrar portray the difficult role of the enraged and captivating cigarette girl; and although this production was booked at enormous expense, the management will present it at the regular rates of admission. Today's program also includes the big local photoplay entitled, "It Happened in Plainfield," the one which everyone saw in the making during the early part of last week, and the cast of which contains all local people, headed by charming Madeline Pennington as "Dot," and James Goodwin as the leading man. This novel attraction will be presented at Proctor's at every performance throughout the entire week, and will doubtless pack the spacious playhouse to its capacity at each show. In addition, today, Frank Daniels, Sis Hopkins and Ham and Bud each appear in a rip-roaring comedy feature. Tomorrow Douglas Fairbanks, one of Broadway's most favorite stars, and now one of the most popular players appearing on the screen, will be seen in his latest photoplay—the picture that created such a furore when shown recently in New York, entitled "The Path of Happiness." In addition, tomorrow, an uproarious Keystone farce, entitled, "A Bathhouse Blunder," will appear. "It Happened in Plainfield" will be a headline attraction, and the ninth episode of "Mary Page" will also be on the program. Wednesday features include, beside "It Happened in Plainfield," William Fox's first Western subject, entitled "Blue Blood and Red," a breezy romantic drama of the West, featuring George Walsh and Doris Pawn. On Wednesday, also, the tenth episode of "The Iron Claw," with Pearl White in the leading role, will also appear.

WESTERN UNION EXECUTIVE ORDERS FOR ITS PATRONS

The Western Union Telegraph Company announces that its offices are now prepared to execute small commissions such as the purchase of flowers, candy, fruit, cigars, books, etc., for the accommodation of patrons at distant points. This is in effect an extension of the Western Union Money Transfer service, and represents the latest developments in the policy of the management of that company to place its nation-wide organization at the disposal of its patrons.

Under the plan now in effect, any one who desires to arrange for the delivery of flowers or gifts, or remembrances of any kind, or for the transaction of any other small commission involving the disbursement of money at distant points, no longer needs to know someone at the distant point who will fill the order or execute the commission.

Among the uses suggested are the delivery of candy, cigars, books, etc., as birthday and other remembrances, the delivery of flowers on birthdays, wedding anniversaries and in cases of illness or death, the delivery of baskets of fruits to friends and especially those departing on ocean trips, the delivery of theatre tickets, etc., all with the card of the sender enclosed. But Manager Aldrich announces that the service practically covers anything that one may choose. In ordering anything that is not ordinarily delivered free of charge by local merchants, the delivery can be insured by paying 30 cents additional, for which sum delivery will be made by a uniformed Western Union messenger.

Start Boom For Root.

New York, May 1.—Active effort to promote the candidacy of Elihu Root for the Republican nomination for president will begin with the opening of Root headquarters at the Hotel Manhattan. Within the next few days Root headquarters will be opened in Washington, Chicago and other large cities, and systematic direction will be exerted upon the sentiment for Mr. Root in various parts of the country.

2,000,000 MAY GO ON STRIKE IN U. S.

Walkouts Are Likely All Over the Country.

Washington, May 1.—Notwithstanding the fact that wage increases aggregating $64,426,464 annually and benefiting 706,000 workmen throughout the country will go into effect this week, May day labor unrest is expected to involve an army of American toilers more than twice that size.

Officials of the American Federation of Labor, who have records showing that 336,550 workingmen are already involved in labor disputes, expressed the belief that this number probably would be increased by more than 1,500,000.

Reports from 110,000 international unions and 27,000 locals are said to show there is dissatisfaction with working agreements, wages, hours or conditions and that this discontent will find expression in one way or another on May day.

From Maine to California and from Florida to Oregon the federation has received reports indicative of unrest in various forms.

One of the strongest factors in the unrest, the federation officials say, will be the increases granted to the 606,500 men. There are 3,000,000 unionized workingmen in the United States. The 2,293,500 not affected by the increases are expected to voice their disappointment over not being included through the medium of strikes, walkout, presentation of demands or in other ways.

ROOSEVELT SATISFIED.

Says Middle West Is Enthusiastic For Preparedness.

Chicago, May 1.—Colonel Roosevelt left Chicago for his home in Oyster Bay firm in the belief that the middle west is filled with men who are widely awake to the necessity of preparedness.

So satisfied was he that the people of the Mississippi valley can be depended upon to go the limit that he withheld the formal statement he had planned to issue on political conditions. There was no need for it, he said.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—— The Tale of a Girl Who Dropped Her Spindle.

"Whom are you afraid of, child?"

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

"WE like once upon a time stories best, daddy!" cried the children.

So daddy began: "Once upon a time there was an old woman who had two daughters. One was beautiful and industrious and the other was ugly and lazy. Strange to say, the mother loved the lazy one best and treated the beautiful one like a Cinderella. Every day she had to sit by a well in the street and spin till her fingers bled. One day she stooped over the well to wash the blood off her spindle, and it jumped right out of her hand into the water. Crying, she ran home to tell her mother, who cried: 'You let the spindle fall! Now go into the water and get it!'"

"Was her mother hard hearted?" Evelyn asked.

"The girl went back to the well and in her distress jumped in after the spindle. Down, down, she went. She remembered nothing till she awoke and found herself in a beautiful meadow full of sunshine and blooming flowers.

"She walked about and soon came to a baker's oven full of bread. 'Take us out or we shall burn to a cinder!' cried the loaves to her. 'We were baked through long ago!' So she took the bread shovel and drew them all out. Then she walked on and came to a tree full of apples. 'Shake me!' cried the tree. 'My apples are all ripe and will soon rot.'

"So the girl shook the tree, and the apples fell like rain. Then she gathered all the apples in a pile and walked on."

"Didn't she eat one?" Jack wanted to know.

"The next thing she came to was a little house, and there she saw an old woman looking out of the window. The old woman had teeth so large that they frightened the girl, who turned to run away. 'What are you afraid of, child?' asked the old woman. 'Stay with me and do my work and I will make you happy. But you must be very careful to make my bed in the right way. You must shake it very thoroughly, so that the feathers fly about. Then down there in the world people will say it is snowing, for my name is Mother Holle.'

"The old woman spoke so kindly that her teeth did not seem so big and frightful to the girl. So she called upon all her courage and agreed to do Mother Holle's work and shake her feather bed every time it ought to snow down in the world," daddy finished.

"Was the old woman a good fairy?" Evelyn asked daddy.

"How should I know!" cried daddy. "And now give me a big hug, for the clock says five minutes past bedtime already."

So Jack and Evelyn hugged daddy and raced upstairs.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

A Youth About to Marry Does Not Care for Wholesome Parental Counsel.

"It's this way, mother, the position that the Scott-Frazee Co. have offered me is a very flattering one. They have opened up a new department in their business and have offered me the management of it. The initial salary is good, and if the new department pays I shall of course have a bigger salary as the business grows. It looks good to me, and I feel that I can make it pay. I am sure of it."

Ralph Gordon walked up and down the living room with his hands in his pockets. His mother followed him with a loving glance, filled with pride. His head was thrown back and the strong chin and firm mouth made her feel sure that he could bend the circumstances of his life to his purposes. She realized that it was not necessary for her to answer. In fact, the man was only half conscious of her presence.

"I shall go on at once and try the thing out, and if all is satisfactory and I get a long term contract, I can marry." An anxious look passed over the mother's face.

"You are young yet, Ralph," she ventured. "I would be in no hurry. A man cannot make much headway financially nowadays after he is married. Get a good start before you venture on that sea."

"A start! Well, I should say I would have a start. I shall be earning a good round salary. More than the majority of men of forty are getting," replied the son.

"I mean a bank account, a sum to fall back on in an emergency." Mrs. Gordon was conciliatory.

"You and father married without anything ahead, and his salary was nothing to brag of either. I have heard you say so." Ralph stopped in front of his mother with the air of one who has put forth an unanswerable argument.

"That is true," answered his mother quietly, "but my training had been very different from Ethel's. I had been brought up to work, to assume some responsibility. She has not. A wife who has been a butterfly cannot help a man to succeed. He must succeed in spite of her." Mrs. Gordon did not look at her son, for she knew any criticism of Ethel Mertage would provoke a storm.

"Let's not open that old subject," Ralph exclaimed petulantly. "You are so old-fashioned. You seem to think that a man marries a woman for what she can do. I can hire housework done and sewing done. I am not marrying a seamstress or housekeeper. I can earn enough money to allow my wife to be free from all such drudgery." Ralph had resumed his rapid march up and down the room.

"Therefore, there is need of a reserve fund for emergency, as I said before," replied his mother quickly. "Do be advised in this matter. Both of you are young."

"Mother, I am twenty-five and Ethel is twenty-two. I surely think we are old enough to know what we are doing. You act always as if I were a babe in arms. It is impossible for you to realize that I am grown up."

"Perhaps I might find it easier to realize it if you could outgrow the very youthful impatience to any opposition to your wishes." She looked steadily at him as she spoke. "The time will come when you will realize that your mother has only your best interests at heart and that she finds it hard to see you making what in her judgment seem mistakes, and not warn you and try to save you the expensive lessons of experience."

"Of course, mother, I did not mean to be impatient, but I guess after all everyone must live his own life and learn by his own experience." Ralph stooped and kissed his mother's cheek.

"I guess that is so," she sighed, smiling into his face.

BISHOP M'FAUL AT ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH

Confirms a Class of 129 Children and Adults at Impressive Service.

Rt. Rev. James McFaul, bishop of the diocese of Trenton, bestowed the sacrament of confirmation on a class of one hundred and twenty-nine children and adults, ninety-two of this number being from the borough church and thirty-seven from the Church of the Sacred Heart in South Plainfield, where Rev. Father Baldwin, chaplain of Mt. St. Mary College, officiates as rector. Confirmation took place at 3 o'clock in St. Joseph's church a procession preceding the ceremony. The bishop was escorted to the church from the rectory by a guard of honor composed of members of the Holy Name Society.

Mrs. Thomas Derrick and William McCullough acted as sponsors for the large class. Immediately after the ceremony, Bishop McFaul preached a sermon appropriate to the occasion and further instructing the members of the class on their Christian duties. The large edifice was filled to its capacity with relatives and friends of the members.

SURPRISE SHOWER GIVEN TO MISS ERMA ALLER

A surprise linen and miscellaneous shower was given by Miss Emma Aller in honor of her sister, Miss Julia Aller, on Saturday afternoon and evening at her home, 517 East Second street. The living and dining room were artistically decorated in cut flowers. The fifty guests enjoyed games and refreshments were served in conclusion. Awards were given to Miss May Deady and Willard Vliet, of Elizabeth; Wells Loveland, of Cranford; Miss Gertrude Westhoven, of Paterson, and Miss Gertrude Sharpe, of Plainfield. A feature of the afternoon was the hunt for the hidden gifts, in which Miss Aller was the principal participant, assisted by John Guker, of Cranford. Guests were present from Phillipsburg, Paterson, Rahway, Elizabeth, Westfield, Somerville, Scotch Plains, Cranford and Plainfield.

RECREATION NOTES

The West End Community Centre will hold a business meeting in the Washington School tonight. The Glee Club will meet in the kindergarten room and Miss Snyder's class will gather in the auditorium. The game room will be open for those who wish to enjoy themselves along this line. Tomorrow night the Zephyrs and Athenians will meet in the High School gymnasium.

Swimming classes will be resumed Wednesday night in the High School pool, both for men and women. The latter will occupy the pool from 7:45 until 8:30, at which time the men will have the use of it. Mr. and Mrs. George Keene will act as instructors for the men and women, respectively.

Forfeits New Automobile.

IRISH "REPUBLIC" LIVES 120 HOURS

Revolt Is Practically Under Government's Control.

707 ARE TAKEN PRISONERS

Leaders of Revolt Surrender—James Connolly, "Commander in Chief," Is Shot—Rebels in Enniscorthy Refuse to Believe Uprising Has Failed. Countess Among Those Captured.

London, May 1.—After a life of a little more than 120 hours the "Irish Republic" has passed into history.

Proudly, triumphantly, it set out on its short lived career last Monday, defying everything and everybody, making the world sit up and take notice of "Ourselves Alone;" unconditionally it resigned to its predestined fate of failure.

From the tops of a few isolated houses in the Irish capital there still flies the flag of the republic amid the clatter of snipers' rifles holding out to the last, but the banners are battered with bullets and reduced to mere rags, and the snipers are at bay. Small fires are still smoldering about the city.

The "army of the republic" has unqualifiedly surrendered the "seat of the government," the general postoffice on Sackville street is a heap of ruins; the "commander in chief," James Connolly, is dead, and the "president," Peter Pearse, is a prisoner in the hands of the government troops. The republic's newspaper, the Irish War News, has suspended publication; as such, at least, its dream of "our allies in Europe," the Germans, "conquering England" having failed to become a reality.

Leaders of Revolt Give In.

Briefly, this is the fate that has befallen the Sinn Feiners' revolt as far as Dublin is concerned. Officially the end of their reign of terror is described by the following summarized facts:

Immediately upon the rebels' unconditional surrender at the hands of the government troops who had practically "burned them out," the leader of the Dublin rebels sent out messengers to revolutionist bodies in the west and south, including the counties of Clare, Galway, Wexford and Louth, and those immediately adjacent to the Irish capital, and ordered them to lay down their arms and give up to the government troops. Priests and constables at once set about to spread the news broadcast to bring about a speedy end of all the outbreaks in Ireland.

When the message from Dublin reached the rebel leader in Enniscorthy it first fell upon dead ears. Persuasion by the messenger, however, finally succeeded in prompting the Enniscorthy "general" to order a truce and then to betake himself to Dublin in a convoyed motorcar to find out the true state of affairs for himself. Similar doubts were expressed by the rebel chief in Ashbourne, whence a deputation is now on the way to the leveled Dublin postoffice. In Galway the rebels heeded the order from Dublin and began disbanding.

In other parts where there were miniature outbreaks, as in New Cross, Gorey, Wicklow, Bagnalstown and Arklow, all is normal again, while quiet is also reported to prevail in Carlow and Dunlevin.

Says Back of Revolt Is Broken.

The text of the statement issued by the official press bureau is as follows:

The commander in chief in Ireland reports that the situation in Ireland is much more satisfactory. Throughout the country there is still much to be done, which will take time, but he expresses the hope that the back of the rebellion is broken.

Messengers were sent out from the leader of the rebels in Dublin to rebel bodies in Clare, Galway, Wexford, Louth and Dublin counties ordering a surrender. Priests and the royal Irish constabulary are doing their utmost to disseminate this information.

As regards the situation in Dublin rebels from the areas of Sackville street, the postoffice and the four courts are surrendering freely.

There were more incendiary fires in Sackville street, but the fire brigade is now able to resume its work. It is reported that up to the present 707 prisoners have been taken. This number includes Countess Markiewicz.

The rebels in Enniscorthy are reported to be still in possession of the place. A mixed column of cavalry, infantry and artillery, including 4.7 inch guns, has been sent from Wexford with the view to engaging the rebels.

Enniscorthy Is Skeptical.

Latest information from Enniscorthy shows that the head of the rebellion there does not believe the rebel leader's message from Dublin and has proceeded to that city in a motorcar under escort to verify the information.

In the meantime a truce exists. A deputation has been sent for a similar purpose from the rebels at Ashbourne to Dublin. The Galway rebels believed the message from Dublin and are disbanding. Few arrests have been made.

The situation at New Cross, Gorey, Wicklow, Bagnalstown and Arklow is reported normal. Quiet is believed to prevail in Carlow and Dunlevin.

A censored message by the Irish office from Secretary Nathan, assistant to Chief Secretary of Ireland Birrell, says that trouble has ceased in Wexford.

The same telegram says that peace was established in Dublin and that Secretary Nathan understands the complete surrender of the rebels took place, only scattered units of rebels holding out in other places, although these have been invited to lay down their arms.

"Anxiety has ended," the dispatch concludes.

The war office announced that additional casualties among officers commanding government troops in Dublin amount to five killed, twenty-one wounded and one missing.

At present 707 prisoners are reported to have been taken in Dublin. Among them is Countess Markiewicz.

Countess a Leader of Rebels.

Countess Markiewicz, notorious for years as a militant Socialist, played the role of the Sinn Feiners' Jeanne d'Arc in the just concluded rebellion, having taken active part, according to reports, in the fighting. Wearing the "republican" uniform, it is said, she inspired the rebels with spirited speeches and fiery battle cries.

It was the same countess whose outcry, "Three cheers for Larkin!" resultsulted in one of the most sanguinary riots during the street car strike in Dublin in 1913. Only last January her home was raided by the police, who seized a printing press and type alleged to have been put to use in spreading pro-German propaganda. The countess is the daughter of one of the Sligo Unionists, wife of a Polish painter, sister of Sir Josslyn Booth and cousin of the Marquis of Zetland.

To a woman who knows, this is perhaps the most astonishing piece of news in this newspaper tonight.

For a generation A. Kreamer's tinwares—and in later years, his copper, zinc, Russian iron and japanned wares—have been used in hundreds of thousands of homes all over the country.

It is the heaviest grade of its kind manufactured. It is the best wearing. One woman recently, in Washington, said that a Kreamer boiler she had was not entirely worn out, that is it did not leak, but as she had used it for 20 years she thought it was about time to buy a new one.

Kreamer's prices have always been kept standard—except when some store cut the price on a few leaders using them as "baits." "Baits," you know, are always chosen from the best standard grades at standard prices well known to the people.

But here—for the first time—are full assortments of A. Kreamer's wares at 40 per cent. discount.

Not a few pieces, but 200,000 articles.

Not a few sizes, but all sizes.

Not a low price on one thing and a high price on another—but sensationally low prices on all pieces—40 per cent. lower than current rates.

The sale comes through the settlement of the A. Kreamer estate. We advanced the money to pay off certain bequests and to concentrate the business in the hands of the sons—and for the money took our pick of the brand-new wares in the Kreamer factory in Brooklyn.

$70,000 Worth For $42,000

200,000 pieces (the quantity justifies emphasis)—making over one hundred double truck-loads in hauling it to the store.

More than fifty men worked overtime two weeks in the Kreamer factory just to pack and ship the wares.

Here scores of people have been busy ticketing and placing them on display.

Especially for brides opening new homes we have made up two compact assortments—one article packed within another—and offer them at $5 each. These, as listed here, and single pieces illustrated, give an idea of the great saving—but only a personal visit will enable any one to comprehend the scope and importance of the sale.

SOME OF AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS MEN ASK AID FOR DEFENDERS OF VERDUN

Prominent Bankers, Diplomatist and Educator Appeal for Funds in the Name of the Suffering Soldiers of France...

The National Allied Relief Committee, co-operating with the War Relief Clearing House for France and her Allies, is sending out what perhaps will be the most broadcast appeal yet issued on behalf of the war sufferers of Europe.

This appeal is for funds for the relief of the soldiers of France wounded in the fighting around Verdun.

What lends additional interest to this appeal is the fact that it is signed by six of the most prominent men in America. Those who signed it are: August Belmont of the banking firm bearing his name; Hon. Jos. H. Choate, Ex-Ambassador to England; Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University; A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank; Edwin G. Merrill, President of the Union Trust Company, and Henry L. Higginson of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Company, Boston.

It is anticipated that the contributions received from this wide-spread appeal will be devoted also to relief work among a large number of wounded resulting from the greatly increased activities of the contending armies.

The appeal is reproduced herewith.

AUSPICIOUS CITY LEAGUE OPENING FEATURED BY WELL PLAYED GAMES

Pleasant weather favored the opening of the City League Saturday, and the result was most encouraging to the circuit moguls. The lid was pried off in splendid fashion and plenty of fans were on hand to see the operation performed. Although it looked as though the opening services would be marred by the withdrawal of the Plainfield A. A., the timely substitution of the Farmers offset any chance of inconvenience.

The initial encounters were profitable ones for three teams, the lucky contenders being the Netherwoods, Hopes and Baptists. The victories recorded by all three teams were well earned and in every instance were the results of hard fought battles. The Baptists handed a 5 to 4 defeat to the Abstainers while the Netherwood champions treated the newly entered Farmers to a like dose. The Hopes had one big inning and that was too much for the Clintonians, who were forced to bow down to an 8 to 6 defeat.

The scores of all the games were kept by official scorers whose decision is final. At the present time Compton and "Curley" Taylor are high men in the battle for the batting honors and the Bernstein cup. These two men are closely followed by four or five others and their present percentage of .750 does not insure them an easy time for the rest of the season.

The Farmers, who took over the Plainfield A. A. franchise, played a good game and proved to the fans that they are of league calibre. It is thought, however, that the game will be "protested" by the other league managers. This matter of "protesting" is merely a formal investigation of the rights of the Farmers as City Leaguers. It is not likely that the new aggregation will be asked to leave the circuit, but, on the contrary, it is expected that at tonight's meeting, the league magnates will receive them with open arms.

BAPTIST TEAM HAS PAIR OF TY COBBS

Bats Wielded by Compton and Taylor Help to Lick the Abstainers.

Before a large crowd of royal rooters, the First Baptist baseball team defeated the T. A. B. S. nine on West End Field Saturday, the score of the encounter being 5 to 4.

The victory recorded by the Baptists was well earned and came as a direct result of timely bingling and tight pitching. The winners were there with the willow at all stages of the encounter, and hit the pill when hits meant runs. There were times, however, when men were left stranded on the bags, but this oversight, fortunately, amounted to nothing.

The Abstainers started off with a rush, annexing one run in the first canto and another in the second frame. Breezy bingles by Tony Denny and Denitzio were responsible for the registering. However, the losers failed to follow up the advantage and were unable to tally again until the ninth frame, when they started a belated rally, which fell short of victory by the narrowest margin. In this last frame, Brennan, the first man up, singled. Winters gained a life on an error and Lawton's triple registered two tallies. Art Kyle, who had taken Gleason's place, was an easy out, while Tony Denny hit a grounder to Stahl, who threw to first, discounting Tony. As the play was being made, Lawton, who was perched on third, received orders to steal home. It was a desperate chance and did not prove successful, as Burner's quick relay to Banks made the Tab effort count for naught. This out ended the game.

The Baptist outfit showed up splendidly and is not the Baptist team of last year. Compton and Taylor, the latter a new man with the Baptist forces, hit the pill all over the lot. Owing to this fact it was not deemed necessary to call on Dan Randolph, the pinch hitter, who, however, was on hand to do his duty should occasion require.

The individual stars of the day were both pitchers, Compton, Taylor, Tony Denny, Denitzio and Benny Rosenson.

SIX IN THE SIXTH GIVE HOPES A WIN

Chapelites Pull From Behind and Nose Out Clinton Ave. Clubbers.

The Hope Chapel baseball clan got together in the sixth inning of his Saturday game with the Clinton Avenues and managed to push six runs over the pan, thereby annexing its first league battle by the score of 8 to 6, the losers having produced their tallies at intervals during the conflict.

The Clintonians opened with a rush and rounded up three runs, holding the lead of 3 to 2 until the fatal sixth, when, although producing two more counters, they were snowed under by a six-run rally indulged in by the rival Hopes. The winners took to the Clinton hurlers like a duck to water and, although they felt subdued after their fruitful amusement, were able to drive home with victory stored away in the back of the "flivver."

The Hopes were the Hopes of old, and the Avenue lads were the stickers of last season. It seemed as if the winners were just fortunate enough to hit in unison, as no other reasonable alibi can be established for the Clinton defeat. Errors were few and did not figure prominently in the scoring.

For the winners, Harriman, ex-Saurer man, played good ball, while Gunzelman did fairly well for the victims.

RUBES GAVE SLOCUM PLENTY OF EXERCISE

Eleventh Hour Franchise Getters Made the Champs Hustle to Win.

The Netherwood team, champions of last season's City League race, had no easy time disposing of the Farmers on Emerson Field Saturday afternoon, although the said Champs were able to trot off the field with a 5 to 4 victory.

The Farmers played good ball and proved themselves capable artists, although their hitting ability amounted to very little. The winners pounded the pill at will and should have registered more tallies than they did. Lou Slocum was almost invincible and this fact, coupled with the fact that the Farmer errors came at delicate stages of the game, insured the Netherwood team its win.

Bill Dodd, the East End catcher, was high man with the willow and made his blows count. The Coughlin brothers were also there with the stick. Unfortunately not one of the losers could connect more than once.

Game on Hyde Oval Watched by Large Crowd of Fans—Dilts the Star.

North Plainfield High School welcomed its first victory Saturday afternoon on Hyde Oval, when the local team treated New Brunswick High School to a 4-2 defeat. Beside being inspiring because it was the initial victory, the defenders of the Maroon and Black gave the semblance of a strong baseball nine in their attack, both offensively and defensively, giving evidence of baseball ability which has been dormant in their previous contests. The game was watched by a large crowd of enthusiastic fans.

With Dilts in the box the invaders were practically harmless, although he was a trifle wild after a long rest. The local youth allowed only two hits, both of which were Texas leaguers, dropping right over the infield. "Luke" has been pitching great ball for the borough forces, being their mainstay in the box. In the four games played he has pitched thirty-one innings, and during that period he has struck out forty-five men, or practically twelve per game. In Saturday's contest thirteen were added to his previous list. The hitting of "Andy" McDonough was also a big asset to the winners, he getting two doubles and a single out of three trips to the plate.

DUNELLEN JUNIORS TOOK FALL OUT OF BEE TEAM

The Dunellen Juniors defeated the Bound Brook Scouts in decisive fashion on Maurer Oval, Dunellen, Saturday afternoon, taking them into camp by the score of 18 to 2. For the first five innings the game was as good an affair as one would care to witness, the score being tie at one to one and Dealaman and Forgach, the opposing pitchers, twirling guilt-edbed ball. Dealaman lost heart in the sixth when Cone, his center fielder, dropped an easy fly with men on second and third.

COUNTRY CLUB OPENS ITS ACTIVE SEASON

An 18 Hole, Medal Play Handicap Attracts Large Field of Players.

The active season was opened at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday with an 18 hole, medal play handicap, with prizes for the best gross and best net scores. A. J. Watson won both prizes, but decided to take the net trophy, allowing the other one to go to J. Whitney Baker, who had an 87 gross. Mr. Watson's net was 76 and his gross 84.

The weather was ideal for the opening and throughout the day the course was well filled with enthusiastic golfers anxious to resume the play of their favorite sport. The course is in excellent condition. The clubhouse was also opened on Saturday, full restaurant service being in operation under the efficient supervision of John Eke, superintendent. These scores were returned in the day's competition:

A. J. Watson, 84, 8-76; G. M. Holstein, Jr., 97, 19-78; T. S. Wheeler, 39, 13-80; J. Whitney Baker, 87, 6-81; Henry J. Cochran, 107, 25-82; Henry D. Hibbard, 99, 14-83; George A. Bomann, 108, 21-87.

Later in the month the house committee has arranged for the weekly dinner-dances which proved so popular at the clubhouse last season. Other special features will also be offered to the members.

P. H. S. FIFTH IN PENN RELAY CARNIVAL

Ralph Runyon Ties for Third Place in Pool Vault, Clearing the Bar at 12 Feet.

The Plainfield High School's relay team was not able to place in the Penn Relay Carnival at Philadelphia, Saturday. Ralph Runyon, a former P. H. S. boy, but now sporting the colors of Penn State, took third place in the pole vault with Rector (Dartmouth), Curtis (Syracuse), Haydock (Harvard) and Sewell (Pennsylvania) at 12 feet. Foss, of Cornell, and Newstetter, of Pennsylvania, tied for first with 12 feet and 6 inches.

The P. H. S. runners finished in fifth place. Ernest Hand, although he was not feeling well, insisted on running and was lead-off man for the local team, finishing sixth. Wilson Field cut the lead down to fourth in his quarter and Minor Trowbridge just managed to keep the place. "Bill" Daniels, the colored flyer and local's hope, started his sprint too soon in the final quarter and as a result could not prevent the West Orange man passing him on the home stretch.

HOBOKEN FORGOT TO COME.

West Hoboken High School had a bad case of forgetfulness Saturday afternoon and forgot to show up on Parker Field to play the P. H. S. outfit. Not wishing to disappoint the crowd that had gathered, two sides were picked and a merry-go-round was substituted for the regular game. The next game for the locals comes Wednesday, when they travel to Somerville.

WILLARD CAN'T FOOL ANYBODY

Moran Says So, and He Ought to Know.

According to Frank Moran, the main difference between Jess Willard and Jack Johnson as boxers is that Willard can't fool anybody.

"Don't misunderstand me to say that Willard can't box," Moran cautioned, "or that he can't hit as hard as anybody. He certainly can use his left well. But what I mean to say is that he telegraphs his wallops in advance, just as a green baseball pitcher by his awkward motions lets the batter know what he is going to pitch. Jack Johnson could feint me into a lead and fool me, but Willard could not. Every time he drew back his fist I knew just exactly where he would try to land."

Russell Ford a Free Agent.

Russell Ford, who three years ago was considered one of the best pitchers in the game, is now a free agent. Ford jumped to the Federal league from the Yankees and was turned back to that club by the Buffalo Federals because of the Federals' inability to dispose of him.

"Found Out"

Sermon of the Rev. William Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Saturday Evening.

People, I tell you, God's sun never shone down on a bigger fool than the man or woman who thinks they can gain anything by doing wrong. You can't. You sin against God, or against your neighbor or against yourself, and whenever you sin in any other way, and you'll suffer for your sin some time in some way or other. Don't make any mistake about that.

There's an old Oriental poem that goes like this:

"Aye, when thou hast drained a swallow's milk,
Seen rocks bear olives and sand pomegranates yield,
A harder task to try thy vaunted strength remains,
To shield a wicked man from retribution."

[illegible] only thing that will [illegible] character. It is the only thing that will damn your soul. Other things may worry you and grieve you and bring you heartaches, but when you sin, you show yourself a fool; for that's the thing that blights your character and blasts your life and eternally damns your soul.

And you can be dead sure your sin will always find you out. There are some things more certain than others. You think you will go down to your store or to your office tomorrow morning. You think the sun will rise in the east and set in the west tomorrow. It probably will. It has for centuries. But you are not even certain about that until you see him shoot his silver arrows through the gates of morning, ride in triumph through the sky and go down to do battle with the prince of night.

You May Not Die.

People say a thing is sure as death. But you are not even sure of that. Jesus Christ may break in upon this world with His mighty angels and judge it before you get a chance to die, because a lot of people are going to be living when He comes. But there is one thing you can be absolutely sure about, and that is, "Be sure your sin will find you out."

Now, I'm going to say three things, and God help you to listen. Your sin will find you out in the operation of man's law.

I. Take Man's Law.

It's really surprising how few criminals ever escape. It's wonderful how they catch them. A murderer left the print of his hand on a porch rail that had fresh paint on it. A photograph was taken of the impression and when the suspected man's hand was examined, the size of the hand, the lines and everything fitted exactly, and he was found out. Why, they have men who have international reputations as thief catchers and if your sin makes you liable to human law, though you hide the world around, it will ferret you out.

II. Then I said your sin would find you out in the operation of nature's law.

Take your physical nature, and look first at your own body. If you'll study this subject you will be surprised to find out how much of physical disease is due to one's own sin. You're nearly all strangers to me, but I could get down from this platform and go through this audience and tell what sin you're guilty of just by looking at you. I know that sometimes your disease comes by accident.

Your lip is a little cracked and you use a public drinking cup and some fellow with a rotten disease infected lip has used it just before you and you get the germ in your own blood and the harm's done. Or you dry your face with a towel and a man with the inside of his lips rotted like that; and nine times out of ten it's a disease of a social nature, and you rub some of it in your eyes and all the doctors on God's earth can't save them. You've got to have respect for the laws of sanitation or they'll damn you if you don't.

And then I know that some times you have to suffer for the sins of your parents. But as a rule, a man has nobody to blame for his disease but himself.

Why are there so many young men in Plainfield with broken bodies and shattered constitutions? It's because they transgress the laws of nature and of God. Say, young man, you can sneer at God and laugh for a while and look your neighbor in the face and never wince, but bye-and-bye the old devil will whip up his chargers and their hoofs will begin to cut their telltale marks in your face and the story of your sin will be out.

Take the rum fiend, with his bloated old body. Bring him up here and cut him in two, and when you have let two buckets of beer out of him, what will you find? Why, you'll find the inner lining of his stomach all eaten away; you'll find his kidneys all covered with ulcerated sores and his old liver about twice as big as it ought to be, pale instead of pink and all covered over with rough accretions like the bottom of a hobnailed shoe.

Take the Cigarette Fiend.

There never was a bigger fool than the fellow who puts this coffin nail proposition between his lips, this tuberculosis, blood-poisoning cigarette. How long have you had the habit? Ten years? No. Five years? No. Three years? Yes. Well, I'll tell you what I can do. I can take a lean, hungry, empty black leech and put it on your body anywhere and when he has sucked himself full of your blood, he'll go into convulsions and curl up and drop off on the floor dead.

It's the poison in your blood, you little fool!

Listen. Some years ago my friend Arthur J. Smith, a Y. M. C. A. secretary, was stationed at Castle Garden, or where Castle Garden used to be, to lend assistance to strange young men who arrived. One day he saw a fine young Scotchman. He approached him and asked him if he could be of any help to him. The young man said: "No." Then Smith asked him the inevitable question: "Are you a Christian?" And he said, "No." Smith asked him about his parents, and found they were Christians and were praying for him. Smith talked a little further and the young man got irritated and turned upon his heel and walked away. But as he did, Smith poured two passages of Scripture into his ears: "The wages of sin is death," and "He that, being reproved and hardeneth his heart shall suddenly be cut off and that without remedy."

One or two years after, when Smith had gone to Chicago to be secretary there, about 4 o'clock one afternoon the telephone bell rang and he was asked to come to the Cook County hospital and see a young man who was dying. He jumped on a cable car and arrived there about 5 o'clock. The warden met him and took him into the ward where the most awful cases were confined. Smith did not recognize the young man, but the Scotchman recognized Smith at once and he cried: "My God, Mr. Smith, just look at me; and all for one night of sin." And Smith said there was hardly a spot on his body big enough for him to lay his hand on if he dared to do it without touching some putrid, festering sore. The warden said: "Don't touch him," and Smith kneeled down about three feet away and prayed, but before he had finished the young man went off into a delirium, said something about home, mother and heaven, and died.

If you think you can go down the line and sow your wild oats and not suffer for it, you ought to take a trip out to the hospitals and the asylums of this country and see the horrible suffering there and get a little sense. God knows the lesson is all too dear to learn by experience.

No Need for Doctors.

There would be precious little need for any doctors at all if people would just stop sinning at the social point. Now, I like doctors; if any man ought to be paid for his work, it's the doctor. I like 'em all. When I get used up a little, it don't make any difference to me whether he be an allopath or a homeopath or an osteopath, I'm glad to see him. You know the old colored fellow when he was sick, asked for a doctor and they asked him what kind he wanted, an allopath, a homeopath or an osteopath, he said it didn't make any difference because all paths led to the grave.

But I say there would be precious little need at all for doctors if people would just stop sinning at this point, for you eliminate social diseases and most all other forms of sickness would vanish as if by magic. That's what all respectable doctors tell you. Immorality breeds disease. God promises long life to the righteous.

A man's a miserable fool to live in sin and yet you hate righteousness and you love iniquity, and you don't seem to know that you are damning yourself.

Then take your children. You live in sin and God will visit your iniquity upon your children upon the third and fourth generations.

I think a man is pretty low down when he won't keep himself clean and be a Christian for his children's sake. Blood tells. It tells in animals and it tells in men and women. In one of our institutions for the feeble-minded was a young girl of seven. Her parents came and took her away at the age of seventeen and a few years later she got married and afterwards four of her feeble-minded idiotic children had to be cared for by the same institution. Now what do you think about that? This makes me want to say something about marriage and divorce. Our divorce laws are a disgrace to the nation. Sam Jones, talking on the divorce question, said: "Let them get divorces; make them cheap; let them get them for a dollar apiece, but send every lecherous devil to the penitentiary for life who gets one." That might not be a bad thing for the kind of divorces Sam was speaking about, but I sometimes think it would be a good thing if we had a law providing for compulsory divorce in some cases. The trouble with our country in this respect is as much on the marriage side as it is on the divorce side. "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder." That's good, but here's another side to it that's just as important and it's this: "What God is trying to keep asunder let no man join together." Anybody can get married and that's just the trouble. If you've got tuberculosis, what right have you to go and get married? What right had that young woman to get married who came out of that home for feeble-minded and whose four children went there after her, and what right had a preacher to marry them? But you'll do it and then you'll stand up and ask God to bless the union, when you know He can't do it.

God pity you. You can go and laugh at God's laws and live in sin in spite of the red lights of danger hung out all along the way, you don't make any mistake about this. Your sin will find you out in your body and it will find you out in your children.

Take Your Moral Nature.

You sin, and every time you do it will breed a moral ulcer and destroy your character. You can just keep on agoing the way you are going and the time will come when everybody will know and you will know yourself as a sordid-minded, vile-hearted, characterless reprobate.

Do you mean to tell me that you can live in sin and not pay for it in your own virtue and not suffer for it in your own character? Do you think you can keep a woman on the side and not breed a moral cancer in your soul? And woman, do you mean to tell me you can sidestep your own virtue and not suffer for it in your inner nature? Man, do you thing you can lie to your wife, do you think you can steal from your employer and be an old dead-beat and not suffer for it in your moral makeup?

You can keep up appearances for a time, but your character suffers and you know it, and there are thousands and many of them living in Plainfield today whose hearts are like the catacombs where all the vile, wriggling, venomous serpents of lust and other hideous sins are holding high carnival over a rotting, ulcerating, putrid, festering character.

III. In the third place I said your sin will find you out in the operation of God's law.

They used to say in olden times that all roads lead to Rome; and do you know that whatever way a man's life takes, they all lead at last to the judgment throne of God and you'll find Him sitting there when you come?

I was reading in the papers about the capture of this man Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen. He was charged with murdering his wife. He had baffled his pursuers and had the detectives guessing. His companion was Miss Ethel Clair Leneve, and he disguised her as a boy, and the two of them, as father and son, got on board the "Montrose" over in England bound for Quebec. "Now, Ethel," he said, "we are safe, and when we land in Quebec, we can go to some nice quiet place and build our home and be together." But Ethel didn't walk like a man and certain other things drew suspicion. The wind raised her coat, and he discovered her trousers and vest fastened together in a very un-man-like way, with a safety pin, and Captain Kendall became convinced that the fugitive pair was on board his vessel. He got the operator busy on the delicate apparatus of the wireless and the little ether waves bearing the news of the criminals' whereabouts went rushing toward Quebec, and when Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve stepped off the ship and onto the dock the officers of the law were there to meet them with their crime.

Sin Travels Fast.

His sin had traveled faster than he had and he went to the death chair to pay for it. And it will be that way with you. You can sneer at God and laugh at Christ and pass His mercy up, but if you do, you'll pay for it, you can be sure of this. Your sin will beat you to the judgment. If you do not find your sin out and bring it to God for pardon, your sin will find you out and bring you to God for condemnation.

And now, in view of all this, what is the thing to do with your sin? Just one thing, and that is give it up. And for two reasons:

1. Because if you do, God will pardon you.

The State of Pennsylvania has had some of the greatest governors this country has ever produced, but none greater than Governor Pollock. During his administration a young man murdered one of his associates. He was condemned to be executed. His friends pleaded with the governor to pardon him, but he said: "I can't do it." The boy's mother came at last. The strain had broken her down and she came weak from loss of sleep and food. She almost staggered into his presence and as the hot tears rolled down her pale face, she threw her arms about the governor, and said: "Oh, governor, don't kill my boy; don't hang him; let me go behind the bars; let me die for him." The governor felt he ought to uphold the law and he took her arm from off his shoulders and said: "Mother, I can't do it; I can't do it," and as the big tears rolled down, he asked that she might be taken away, for he couldn't stand it.

He turned to his secretary and said, "John, if I can't pardon him, I can at least go and tell him how to die," and he took his Bible and went to the young man's cell and read to him and prayed and talked about Jesus and left him with God.

When he had gone the guard said: "Did you know what that man was?"

"No."

"Why, that was Governor Pollock."

"My God," cried the condemned man. "Governor Pollock! The governor here and I didn't know it! Why didn't you tell me it was the governor and I would have thrown my arms around him. I would have buried my fingers in his flesh and I would have said: 'Governor, I will not let you go until you pardon me. I will not let you go.'"

Let Him Pardon You.

Oh, men and women, let Jesus pardon you tonight. He's here to do it.

When you stand before the judgment, it will be too late then.

You can't say then, "Oh, Jesus, you were in Plainfield, trying to save me and I did not know it. Oh Jesus, you came to my home and wife and all the children took you in, but I didn't know it. Oh, Jesus, you were down in the Tabernacle in Plainfield Saturday night, April 29, and I didn't know it."

Let Jesus save you tonight. Let Him do it now. He's able to do it and He's waiting to do it now.

2. Because you will be sorry if you don't. There was a bridge keeper on the Albany railroad. He knew it was time for the incoming passenger train, but he thought he could turn his bridge and let a tug pass up the river and he did so; and just as he started the bridge back to the place he heard the shriek of the approaching express. He turned just in time to see the train with its cargo of precious living freight go plunging over the precipice ninety feet down below on the rocks and into the foaming waters. His hair turned white and his reason reeled and tottered from its throne and until a few years ago, when he died he walked the floor of the insane asylum and the only thing he said was: "Oh, if I only had; Oh, if I only had." God forbid that you should say "No!!" to Jesus Christ tonight and when you have run your earthly career through and gone out into eternity be compelled to cry out throughout its long, unending night: "Oh, if I only had; Oh, if I only had." Give up your sins and do it now, and Christ will save you from its power and from its curse.

"Almost Lost--But Saved"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

"All hope that we should be saved was taken away."—Acts, 27:29.

I tell you when hope's gone the jig's about up. You know the story of Pandora. The gods gave her a certain box full of blessings for man and told her not to look into it. They ought to have known better than to talk to a woman like that. Pandora thought she'd put one over on them and so she raised the lid and all the blessings escaped but one, lucky for Pandora and all the rest of us, was hope.

We are never beneath hope while above hell. I don't know who said that, but it's true.

This whole 27th chapter of Acts is given up to the story of a shipwreck. Paul was on his way to Rome, a prisoner in chains to stand before Caesar. They had reached Fair Havens, a beautiful port, and instead of sailing on as they ought to have done while the weather was favorable, they hung around in the harbor until one day the captain gave orders to get ready for departure.

But Paul knew it was about time for the equinoctial storms and he knew the old vessel they were sailing in wasn't fit for a rough sea and he advised the captain to remain in port for a better sailing season. He said, "Sirs, I perceive this voyage will be with much damage." Now Paul knew a thing or two about the sea himself. He'd been shipwrecked three times already. He traveled a good deal by sea and so life among the jibs—flying jibs and outer jibs—among the topsails, capstans and yardtackels and cross-jacks and mizzen tops and all the rest of it was no new thing to him.

But the captain would have his way. "This landlubber of a preacher may do very well for a pulpit but he doesn't know a square yard from a lug sail when it comes to a ship," and he gave command to weigh anchor and cast off and in a short while they were out to sea.

But Paul Was Right.

But Paul was right and the captain was wrong. It says, "Not long after there arose against them a tempestuous wind called Euroclydon," a regular nor-easter, and it caught the vessel and tossed it like a cork from wave to wave. And when they found they couldn't control the ship they struck sail and let her drive. Every hour the storm increased; the elements vied with each other to see which could do their worst. The winds howled on and the waves clapped their hands in fiendish delight; the moon and the stars went out and they were lost in darkness black as Plutonian night. And then the lightning flashed. It struck the waves with jagged sheets of flame as if to lash them on in their fury and lent them a lurid ghastly smile like fiendish devils gloating in the work of destruction, and then shooting back to heaven left the darkness deeper still and all hope that they should be saved was taken away.

It doesn't say that every man prayed to his God or not but I'll miss my guess if they didn't. That's what you did when you got in trouble and then said, "Good-bye" to God when you got out. No time for God when the sun shines, but let the storm come and then knees begin to bend, and as Mrs. Browning says:

"Lips cry, 'God be merciful.'
That ne'er said 'God be praised.'"

And then Paul came to them and said that his God, the God he knew so well, the God for whom he had suffered so much and for whose sake he was ready to die under the lash of the ocean's fury or by decree of the imperial Caesar, it made no difference,—his God had said to him that there should be no loss of life.

But still the vessel drives on and when they dropped the sounding lines they found the sea only fifteen fathoms deep. Driving headlong upon the rocks—276 souls. It did look as though the old grizzly whiskered preacher was talking through the back of his head.

Lighten the Ship.

But one thing was left to do. Overboard with the cargo? Lighten the ship! Let her ride as high as possible! And away they go like chaff before a cyclone, steering straight for a little inlet just in sight. She strikes, and smash, bang, comes the thundering surge against the larboard and the whole stern end goes to pieces, and then no one knows just how it happened, but leaping from timber to plank, going down beneath the hissing waters as if never to rise again, swimming, floating on boards and broken pieces of the ship, they came to shore and climbing out they wrung their dripping beards and dried their briny garments, and when the count was made, 276 souls, every last one of the whole crowd from whom all hope had been taken away that they should be saved were safe and sound. "And so it came to pass that they all escaped safe to land."

But this is enough about shipwreck. It's a wreck of another kind I want to talk about tonight. A wreck that's a good deal sadder than the wreck of any ship.

"Far sadder sight than eye can know,
Than proud bark tossed or seaman's woe;
Than battle, fire, or tempest cloud,
Or prey bird's shriek or ocean shroud,
Is the shipwreck of a soul."

Paul said to the captain after it was all over. "You should have hearkened unto me, and done what God told you to do and stayed in port." But the captain was an opinionated old codger and he thought Paul didn't know "straight up." And what difference did it make to him anyhow what God said. He thought he knew and that Paul didn't know and he was determined to have his own way anyhow. And that's what has damned every soul in hell tonight.

You go and talk to some fellows about being a Christian and living the way God wants them to and they'll swell up and tip back on their heels and say, "Oh I've got my own opinions." Yes, and your own opinions will wreck your soul and sink it into hell long before you ever reach the port in safety.

A fellow's opinions are not worth very much anyhow till you find out how he got them, and some of you fellows got yours mighty easy. What right have you got to call yourself an infidel? How much time and thought have you given to the word of God and the things of God? And nine-tenths of these little slant-heads that are standing around on the curbstone or spitting around in a booze joint and blowing off at the mouth about their infidelity are just like you are. You're not a student. You've got your stuff second-handed and you don't know any more about the word of God than a crocodile knows about roller skates.

Repeated Lord's Prayer.

You know as much about the word of God as a couple of lawyers knew about the Lord's prayer. One of them said he knew more about the word of God than the other one did and the other one said, "Why, I'll bet you five dollars you don't even know the Lord's Prayer." The first one said, "I'll call your bet," and he commenced. He said,

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord ——"

"Hold on," said the other one; "you don't need to finish it; here's your money; I didn't think you knew it."

You talk about being an infidel. Why, you're not an infidel. You haven't got brains enough to be one.

A fellow tackled me in a hotel out in Streator, Ill., and commenced to shoot off his mouth against Christianity. I didn't want to argue with him because I saw he didn't have sense enough to follow a logical line of argument and pretty soon he said, "Why, the Bible is just full of contradictions."

And I thought it was about time to call him. I knew most of these so-called contradictions that some of these Godless believers are spouting about and I could explain everyone of them and if there was one in there that I didn't know about I knew that nine chances out of ten he didn't know and so I called his bluff.

I said, "I'll give you $200 for every contradiction you can find in the word of God."

And he tore around there and said, "Well, I'll get every dollar of money you've got; just wait till I get a Bible and look her through awhile." And he went a tearing out of there and I've never seen him since.

Talk about being an infidel. You're not an infidel. You're just a little "infer-hell;" because that's where you are headed for if you don't quit treating God the way you have.

One of these curbstone infidels, one of these felows who "had opinions of his own," went into the army with his opinions, and he got a bullet through the breast, and as they carried him back to the rear, he cried, "Oh, God, give me time to repent." It took just one bullet to knock the infidelity out of that little fellow. And that's the way with most of them. You can take any of these little boosting, bragging infidels and give them a little talk about the undertaker and then turn them loose and they'll hit the ground running every time.

Two Things That Are True.

Now you listen to me and I will tell you two things that are God Almighty's truth. One is that if you play with fire you'll get burned and if you trifle with sin you'll be damned.. God will bring you into Judgment for it. The wages of sin is death. You play your soul into the hands of the Devil and he'll make it hot for you in this life and make it hot for you in the life to come. Go on and laugh at the Bible and give the church the go-by and sneer at Jesus Christ if you wish, but some day you'll say, "What a rare fool I've been.

And there are some of you here tonight who have trifled with sin so long, and fed your passion and entertained your doubts until you have gone so far that you feel about yourself like the storm-tossed people of the text, that all hope is taken away that you'll never be saved.

My God, how many people have I had come to me, men and women, young men and young women, some of them dressed in silks and jewels flashing on their person, and you'd never dream what was wrong, and they'd say, "My God, why didn't I throttle that passion twenty years ago; why didn't I, in the days that were full of hope, kill the thing that has crept so insiduously into my life, but now it's too late; there's no use to talk to me; all hope that I shall ever be saved is gone."

Ah, but you make a mistake; for there's another thing I'm here to tell you, and that is that God's grace and God's power can save to the uttermost the uttermost sinner of all the world.

Listen to me tonight, I beg of you in Christ's name.

Outside of the Christians there are just three kinds of people here tonight.

First, there are those who are held by some passion or appetite.

Second, there are those who are utterly indifferent to Jesus Christ and their own condition.

Third, there are those who are skeptical about the claims of Christ and the reality of the Christian religion. Tonight, if you are not a Christian, you belong to one or the other of these three classes.

One of These Classes.

1. Take the first class. There are men with a fire in their bosom that burns like some volcanic blaze; men who are bound like Prometheus to the rock while the black vulture of passion eats out the very vitals of the soul.

I was walking out in the back yard one day and I saw a grasshopper jumping around from bush to bush having an easy-going old time. But pretty soon he lit into the web of a huge spider. He was one of those big yellow-backed fellows that makes your flesh creep when you run on them suddenly. And say, if that old spider didn't get that grasshopper's goat quicker than I can take to tell it, then I never saw anything done in a rush. He shot down that silken thread, and getting his cords from some unseen quarter, he rolled that struggling grasshopper over and over like a circus juggler with a globe on his feet until he was wrapped so tightly that he couldn't move a limb, and the old spider went back and waited till supper time. And I've seen men bound with sin like that, who have struggled all in vain against a power that held them in its grasp, until up from the depths of a despairing soul they have cried, "There's no hope for me."

Did you ever hear the story of John G. Wooley, the great temperance orator? He was one of the brightest lawyers of the Northwest; he had a nice home; two sweet little children and a wife who was a veritable queen in the home and yet knew how to be a mother. Not one of these high-heeled, pencil-eyebrowed dames of society that think more of a poodle dog than they do of the salvation of their child if they've got one. If our home had mothers in them instead of fashion worshippers and society gadders and bridge whist players, we wouldn't have so much trouble to keep our boys and girls from going to hell the way they are.

There are thousands of boys in this world like the tramp; when somebody asked him how long he had been an orphan, he said, I was born an orphan; never did have any mother. Take your sleeveless-dressed, decolited, manicured, befrizzled and bepowdered society sister and give us back the oldtime bread-baking, sock-darning, trouser-mending, praying mothers of Israel and our homes will be saved. I wouldn't give one of the last for a whole cargo of the others.

Well, Wooley began to drink and by degrees the habit mastered him. He lost his practice, he lost his honor and he lost his home.

And that's what the dirty, hellish beast of a saloon will do for any one when it once gets you in its power. It is the sum total of all hell's concocted fiendishness; for with it goes every crime in the category. No wonder the decent towns and cities are fast kicking it back into hell, where it came from.

Wife True as Steel.

But Wooley's wife was true as steel. She prayed for him and never gave him up. He tried to win out, but he couldn't, and at last he said he would go away from his old companions and make a man out of himself yet. His wife took the two little ones and followed him down to the train, and putting her hand upon his arm, she said, "John, God can save you." And Mary was right. For John couldn't do it. And he went deeper and deeper into sin until John G. Wooley found himself a drunkard in the gutter in the great city of New York, and all hope seemed to be taken away that he ever could be saved. But God can save a man like that.

I got a friend, Edward Card. They call him "Old Glory Face." You ought to see his face and know his life and you wouldn't wonder. And on his calling card just below his little picture, he's got it printed, "No case too hopeless for Jesus."

You're not a drunkard, but some of you here are the slaves of sin just the same. It's some other kind of a sin. And I expet some of you are discouraged, but I am here tonight to say to you in the name of Christ that there's all the hope in the heavens for you, if you'll only confess your sin, and be sorry for it, and be willing to let God come into your life and have His way with it. Jesus is mighty to save. Say, just try Him once.

John G. Wooley said, "God doesn't care for me," and he went lower and lower. But one day he went to the postoffice and there was a letter from his wife. She wrote every two or three days, whether she got an answer or not, and she said, "Dear John, I have little Janie in my arms and Carrie is in bed. I've been praying all day for you. Don't rely on yourself John."

That's just where some of you are making your mistake today. You think God can't or God won't or that you don't need God. And all hell's laughing at you.

Home After God's Model.

And Wooley thought of his Christ-like wife and the little babies and he said, "Well, maybe God does care for me yet," and he went to his miserable lodging place and something said, "kneel down and pray." And he did, and the great Christ of God came to him and touched him with a strength he'd never had before. He got up from his knees with the hot tears rolling down his cheeks; he telegraphed his wife the news. I'd like to have been there and heard the shout of thanksgiving; and they have got a home after God's model today, all because a man without hope had let Christ come into his life.

You know the rest of his story; how he has gone up and down this land, marvelous orator that he is, and poured the hotshot of his eloquence and burning truth into the ranks of the distillers and brewers and saloonkeepers until they have damned him to hell with their dirty mouths a million times over.

Men, it's a great Christ who can save like that. Stop trying to save yourself. Checkmate the devil by calling into the game some one who knows more about it than he does. Don't lose your soul and go to hell just because the battle's hard. Faith in Jesus Christ will do the business every time.

Now look at the second class a minute. There are some of you who are indifferent. You don't care about the claims of Christ and you don't care about your own soul.

You're not a slave to any passion; you're not an antagonist, but you just don't care—you are indifferent to the whole thing. But, say, I'll guarantee that with most of you there was a day when you did think a little about this matter, and just because you've trifled with it so long and smother the feeling you had you're in the condition you are today.

Paul says some people are "past feeling," and that's the road some of you are traveling on. In earlier days you felt the touch, but you hardened your heart and you've gone on until you've almost stifled the voice of God in your heart and hell will be your portion if you are not pretty soon aroused out of your stupor and out of your unconcern.

Still Hope For You.

All hope that you'll ever be saved seems to be already taken away from some of you, but, thank God, there's hope even for you. I know a man who knelt at the altar and said, "I've had no thought of Christ for thirty years, but my heart has been touched," and God saved him then and there.

Listen, "A new heart will I give you, and I will take away the heart of stone, and I will put my Spirit within you."

Oh, man and woman, tonight unconcerned about sin and righteousness and judgment to the pleadings of the Holy Spirit, indifferent to the bloody sacrifice of the loving Christ, indifferent to the tender interest, the agonizing prayers and burning tears of your loved ones, indifferent to the thought of eternity, while eternity, with all of its issues of heaven and hell, is crowding closer upon you than possibly now you think. God grant that the Holy Spirit may touch your heart tonight.

And now look at the third class for a minute before we finish. Those of you who are skeptical. You say you've been so long in doubt that you find it impossible to believe. You have tried to understand the supernatural and found you could not, as if man by searching could find out God! Can't you give God credit for having a little more sense and intelligence than you've got? And so, because you couldn't understand, you've gone searching for something that would appeal to you as being rational and you've gone drifting out into the seas of unholy untruth—into theosophy, into spiritualism, into Behaism, into Christian Science, into pantheism, into deism, into agnosticism and rationalism, so-called, and other ism — until people who have been concerned about you have commenced to wonder if all hope that you should be saved was not taken away forever.

"Well, it's not strange that you're doubted. Greater minds than yours have done that, too. It's no disgrace to doubt, if you are only honest about it, but the trouble with the most of you is—you're not honest about it. You don't give, and you won't give the religion of Jesus Christ a fair test.

Trouble With the World.

The trouble with this world is—it don't want to test anything. It's just like as if I was at the top of a hill and you were down in the valley. And I say, "Friend, come up here; there's a light just over the top of the hill here." And you say, "No there ain't; prove it to me." I say, "Come up here and see." You say, "Well, I ain't a-coming." And I go down and take you by the hand and drag you up to the brow of the hill and say, "Look." But you turn your face around toward the valley. And I take your old head and twist it around so you can see the light. And you shut your eyes so you can't see. And I pry your eyes open and then the truth comes out of your old heart and you say, "I don't want to see; it may cost me something to see that light."

Yes, and that's what's the matter with more people than most of them are willing to admit.

It may cost you something. No doubt it will. It'll cost some of you a little humiliation of your pride; and some of you a little condensation of your intellect, and some of you forgiveness of your enemy, and some of you the whiskey bottle and the card deck and some of you your Godless dissipation on the Lord's day.

If you're skeptical and all in doubt, I don't know how you are ever going to find your way out unless you are ready to surrender your will to God and obey Him as far as you see the way, and when you are ready to do that it don't make any difference how deep into skepticism you have gone, God will bring you out.

My brother, there's all the hope in the world for you if you'll only surrender your will to God and live up to the light as it comes. If you only had the tiniest speck of light and didn't follow that as far as it took you, you can't be dead sure God would never give you any more.

Suppose you stood out here in front of this tabernacle with a lantern in your hand and some one said, "Where are you going?" and you say, "I'm going home," and he says, "Well, why don't you start?" and you say, "The light don't shine far enough; I'll never take a step till the light shines all the way from the spot where I am now clear to the door of my house," and the man would tell you that you could rot in your tracks before you ever get home.

The Greatest Discovery.

That light will never shine one inch further, but you take the one step that shines before you and the light will shine into the darkness just as far as the step you take as from the spot where you stand. A lot of you fellows are standing around waiting for light, but you'll never get it until you are willing to use it as it comes.

If ever there was a man in Egyptian-soul darkness it was that marvelous-minded scientist — Romanes. He hadn't prayed for twenty-five years because his mind wouldn't let him. And do you know what he did. He fought his way back by a process of pure reason. But he was willing to experiment by faith as he went along.

And here's what he says. Listen to him, the man at whose intellect the whole world marveled: "The doctrines of the Incarnation and the Trinity seemed to me most absurd in my agnostic days. But now I see in them no rational difficulty at all."

When Lord Kelvin was nearly ninety years old, he was the recognized master of science in the British realm and say of the world. Some one asked him, one day, what he considered his greatest discovery, and he said, "The greatest discovery I ever made was that Christ Jesus came into this world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." And you can discover it, too, if you want to, but you'll have to find it out in the way he did, and you'll have to begin with a humble mind.

It's a pretty hard thing for the reporter of this column to decide how to arrange the items of interest pertaining to the wonderful meetings of Saturday and Sunday, as anyone who was present at any one of the meetings, or all of them, will agree. One suggestion from this department, however, is that the reader, if he has attended any of the meetings, is that he should go and see for himself. The meetings are becoming more interesting, the great chorus choir sings better, the expenses of the campaign have been raised (that means no more offerings except for special things), and last, and most wonderful of all is that over 3,000 people have walked the sawdust aisles declaring themselves for God and all that is righteous and good altogether.

On Saturday night, Rev. Mr. Bailey; Sunday morning, Rev. Dr. Strong; afternoon, Rev. J. McKelvey; and in the evening, Rev. J. Y. Broek led in the opening prayers.

"Mac" had the chorus choir doing gymnastics Saturday night as they rehearsed a new song. It was amusing to watch some of the members as they seemed to have ideas of their own.

This last week has been a hard one for all hands, and we vouch that a great many have drawn a deep breath of satisfaction for this rest-day and are pulling together for what Dr. Biederwolf promises to be a great week.

Councilman Richard A. Claybrook made a fine suggestion Saturday night that a minute's grace be given between the announcement and the taking of the offering, to give the men a chance to get into their inside pocket to get at their wallet. Too bad it had not come earlier in the campaign; nevertheless, Dr. Biederwolf thinks he will profit by the suggestion for his future campaigns.

The National Male Quartet were kept busy at all of the services preaching the gospel in song.

Wednesday afternoon, "Mac." will meet the High School boys in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium after school.

Dr. Biederwolf complimented Plainfield by stating that for the first time in his experience the matter of clearing up the Tabernacle debt was done by others instead of himself.

By-the way, do you know that $5,650 was raised in thirteen minutes?

When Charles McCutcheon came upon the platform to raise the money for the payment of the Tabernacle debt he brought forth great applause when he made the statement that the mayors of both of the Plainfields were standing shoulder to shoulder saying "Down with booze." (He did not mean down by the way of the throat either.)

Mr. McEwan has been kept busy using that great tenor voice for solos at all of the services.

One of the many inspiring sights was witnessed as the delegations representing the various Bible-schools marched into the Pine Temple yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Brake will meet the High School girls in the First Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 3:15.

The sight which was witnessed by those present in the afternoon as the hundreds of boys and girls, young men and young women, and older ones, who came forward resolving to live a Christian life, was one which will be carried by every onlooker to his grave. Many people were moved to tears as they saw their children or their brothers or sisters strike out so bravely and declare themselves for Christ and the church.

William Danner, of Norristown, Pa., will give an interesting talk on "The Lepers of the World," on Wednesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock.

The chorus choir sang last night as they had never sang before, and even when they sang "Come Over on the Other Side," waving their red, white and blue "rags," as "Mac" called them, it was a means of affording a joke for him. He turned to the audience and asked them to wave their handkerchiefs as they sang the chorus of the song. Having done this, he said, with a solemn face, "Now you'll all get the grippe."

Mr. Sluyter will hold a children's meeting in the First M. E. church, Dunellen, at 3:45.

The Knights of the Golden Eagles will be present in delegation Wednesday evening.

Dr. Biederwolf announced another victory for Plainfield when he said that last night was the first Sunday night in his experience that no offering was taken.

Mr. Braider took the baton in his hand last night and led the choir to victory in one of their fine choruses.

Dr. Biederwolf announced that a delegation of people from Norristown would be present next Saturday night —about 200 or 300 are expected to come by special train. He said that it was the custom in cities where he had been to send delegations to other cities where he was holding a campaign. Then came the smiles as he said they would be in San oJse, Sacramenta and a few other places not far from here, and that he would be glad to welcome a delegation from Plainfield.

Mr. Heaton sang "The Wayside Cross," assisted by the members of the quartet and Mr. McEwan, with the electric cross effect.

Another marvelous sight was witnessed at the close of the service last night when the scores came forward, shook the evangelist by the hand —thereby publicly confessing Christ as their Saviour—knelt in the sawdust and prayed the penitents' prayer, and finally walked out of the Tabernacle in the newness of life, saved.

COTTAGE PRAYER MEETINGS TOMORROW

Cottage prayer meetings will be held Tuesday at 10 a. m. in the following homes: Mrs. Geore E. Volk, 280 Watchung avenue; Mrs. T. R. Gregory, 508 East Second street; Mrs. A. H. Stiles, 78 Sandford avenue; Mrs. H. D. DeMott, 56 Somerset street; Mrs. H. R. Ramsay, 104 Jackson avenue; Mrs. Trimmer, 511 Washington street; Mrs. David Dunavan, 333 East Front street; Mrs. A. J. Whitford, 442 Lenox avenue; Mrs. George Mantz, 951 Union street; Mrs. W. C. Hubbard, 111 West Fifth street; Mrs. I. N. West, 412 West Sixth street; Mrs. C. Zabriskie, 11 West End avenue; Mrs. Fred Willett, 28 Craig place; Mrs. E. Anderson, 327 Stebbins place; Mrs. N. Brouard, 1003 West Seventh street; Mrs. A. D. Thompson, Hillside avenue, between Martine and Evergreen avenues; Mrs. James H. Andrews, 429 East Fifth street; Mrs. Theodore Mantz, 732 Carlton avenue; Mrs. L. T. Stryker, 28 Manning avenue; Mrs. Charles Vincent, 944 West Fourth street; Mrs. George H. Karner, 112 Plainfield avenue; Mrs. Louis Neuman, 601 John street.

BIEDERWOLF CAMPAIGN

tions, saying he wanted two at least. Within a few minutes one of the ushers called out, "A Friend, $500," and the work was on. One other gave $500 as "A Friend," and Mr. McEwan announced that the chorus-choir would give $500. Dr. Biederwolf, who sat on the platform through the entire solicitation, said they were certainly good friends to have Mr. McCutcheon come to $300 donations and getting none, on to those of $25s. There was one of this class, two of $200 and three of $150 each, all from "Friends," not one of whom would give his or her name. Seven individuals in the audience gave $100 each, and a Bible class of the First Baptist church gave $100. The $50 givers totaled fourteen, and there were thirty-nine who gave $25 each. When it came to $10 gifts they were handed to ushers faster than they could be cried out and put down on an adding machine.

Not a $5 subscription was needed, and Mr. McCucheon stopped the solicitation before they were reached. Many who wanted to give $5 and had their money ready, dropped it in the pans when they were passed a few minutes later, but it was the first time in the history of the Biederwolf party that solicitation stopped before $5 gifts were reached.

While voices all over the house were calling out "$5 from a friend," "$5 from a friend," Mr. McCutcheon stepped to the front of the platform and said in a low voice, "The papers are closed and my heart is too full to thank you."

All the money that is left over when the expenses of the campaign are paid will be given to local non-sectarian charities, Chairman McMurray, of the campaign committee, announced. Mr. Murray helped to bring forth the golden harvest of yesterday by a short appeal, as did Arthur M. Harris, another member of the committee.

In expressing his apreciation of the response to the appeal of Mr. McCutcheon, Dr. Biederwolf said that was the first time in all his experience that such a collection had been taken by local men.

Dr. Biederwolf preached for only a few minutes yesterday morning on the text, "They First Gave Their Own Selves Unto the Lord." He said that selfishness was the cause of much of the misery and suffering and sin in the world, and that those who used their lives for selfish purposes, denying their talents and their time and their money to God were doomed to eternal perdition. While he was talking of the value of time wasted by some people, Mrs. Brake came forward and recited one verse of "The Wasted Hours of Youth." Dr. Biederwolf said that it was a shame the way people spent their money when the church of the Lord was crying for sufficient funds to carry on its missionary work and even to fulfil its duties at home. Modern society, he said, was suffering from a terrible case of the "empties," and he mentioned expensive balls in honor of dogs, dog marriages and dog funerals. He held up a photograph of a dog graveyard, and on one of the tombstones was carved an epitaph that ended, "In the Hope of a Blesed Immortality." He also told of a dog funeral in the home of a Hyde Park woman during which she said that she "hoped to meet her beloved again."

"We muust cry a halt on this waste of lives," said the evangelist, "or I am afraid the judgment of God will come upon us."

"Man, when you spend more for tobacco than you give to the church, you're not treating God right, and woman, when you spend more on one afternoon reception than you give to your church in an entire year you're not treating Him right."

The evangelist ended with a plea for a more consecrated life that brought 69 to sign cards pledging Christian living.

The Tabernacle was filled at the services of yesterday afternoon when pupils from all the Sunday-schools in Plainfield attended. They heard a short address from Dr. Biederwolf, after which 434 walked down the sawdust aisle to take his Christian pledge.

The text for last night's sermon was "Almost Lost—but Saved," and the evangelist said that there was hope for every human soul above hell because of the promise of God to give eternal life to all who believed on Him. There is even hope for those who call themselves infidels, he said, although most of them have no right to call themselves this. "What right have you to call yourself an infidel?" he asked. "How much time and thought have you ever given to the things of God? And nine-tenths of these little slant-heads that are standing around on a curbstone or spitting around a booze joint and blowing off about their infidelity are just like you are. You udon't know any more about the word of God than a crocodile does abut roller skates."

..Dr. Biederwolf told the story of John G. Wooley, one of those who felt that there was no hope for him, and who had fallen to lowest depths of sin, yet was lifted even from there, and finally became one of the greatest temperance orators of his time. He had a wife, he said, who was true blue to him and was a real mother for her two children, and here the evangelist exclaimed, "Take your sleeveless-dressed, decolited, manicured, befrizzled and bepowdered society sister and give us back the oldtime bread-baking, sock-darning, trouser-mending, praying mothers, and our boys and girls won't be going to hell in carload lots like they are now." ..

No man can be saved by his own efforts, the preacher said, and he urged his hearers to stop trying this and call into the game someone who knows more about the fight than the Devil does. "It may cost something," he admitted. "No doubt it will. It'll cost some of you a little humiliation of your pride; and then some of you a litle condensation of your intellect, and some of you forgiveness for your enemy and smie of you the whisky bottle and the card deck, and some of you your Godless dissipation on the Lord's Day."

His appeal brought 207 down the aisles to kneel and follow him in the penitents' prayer.

LUDOVICI GETS REWARD FOR 25 YEARS' SERVICE

William E. Ludovici, local agent for the Prudential Life Insurance Company, was Saturday presented with a handsome gold medal, diamond-studded, in recognition of twenty-five years of consecutive service in the employ of the company. Mr. Ludovici started with the Prudential in the New York office as an inspector of agents twenty-five years ago last week. He served in this capacity in New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Dover, New Brunswick and Plainfield, coming to this city in January, 1912. That his service has been honorable and efficient is shown by the public recognition. The gold medal contains the figures "25" and they are made of twenty-five separate diamonds. Mr. Ludovici is very popular with all agents and other employes in the local office and his reward for service is pleasing to them.

South Plainfield.

WILL ORGANIZE RIFLE CLUB AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

Steps have been taken by several residents of South Plainfield to form a rifle club. William Everhardt, who formerly served in the U. S. Cavalry and the Pennsylvania State Constabulary, is promoting the club. Others who are interested include Edward Teeple, William Norman, William Hamilton, Justice P. F. Kaine and George Rolande. It is hoped to establish a range near the Spicer factory. Anyone wishing to join the club is requested to communicate with Mr. Everhardt.

John Farrell, of Metuchen, has returned home after spending the week-end with his grandmother, Mrs. Mary McDonough.

Miss Florence F. Gordon, who is ill at her home with scarlet fever, is improving.

Miss Marjorie Soper, of Jersey City, has returned after spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Soper.

Newark's 250th Anniversary Celebration to open with Impressive Exercises, Parade and Inspiring Music Festival

ON MONDAY, Mayday, all Newark begins to wear its 250th Anniversary smile. On this day the great industrial and business center of New Jersey starts the five months' celebration of its founding by Robert Treat. There is to be a great military parade in the morning, formal civic exercises and ceremonies in the afternoon, and at night there is to be the first of six great music festival performances marking the opening.

So Newark will show a smiling front, even as cheerful banners on her main thoroughfares adjure her populace to do until next Autumn, by which time it is believed that the Newark smile will have become a permanent civic institution.

The events of the opening day are only the beginning of scores upon scores of important features noted in the official program between May 1 and next October. No such civic celebration has ever been held in America by any municipality. Newark is not only expending $250,000 in cash raised by the public-spirited subscriptions of her business men, but the community raised also, by means of a public bond issue, $1,500,000 for the erection of a magnificent memorial building, commemorating the epoch. Other millions will be spent by her citizens and visitors to the city in the course of the celebration of the protracted municipal birthday party.

The first performance of the Newark Music Festival at the First Regiment Armory on Monday night will be an impressive tone feast. It is expected that there will be an immense audience. The soloists are to be Anna Case, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Merle Alcock, American contralto, and Antoine de Vally, tenor. The three choral works selected in the $500 prize American cantata contest are to be performed.

The other Festival performances immediately to follow are of great interest to music lovers. On Tuesday, children's night, in addition to the school children's chorus of 3,000 voices and the pupils' orchestra of 150, the soloists will be William Brennan, boy soprano; Joseph Stoopack, boy violinist, and Christine Miller, American contralto. Miss Louise Westwood, supervisor of music in Newark's public schools, is to be the conductor.

Ethel Leginska, English pianist, assisted by the Festival Orchestra, will present a program at the symphony concert on Wednesday afternoon. At the evening performance the soloists, assisted by the great local chorus and the Festival Orchestra, will be Frieda Hempel, soprano; Margarete Ober, contralto; Riccardo Martin, tenor, and Allen Hinckley, bass, all of the Metropolitan Opera.

Julia Culp, Dutch contralto, and George Hamlin, tenor of the Chicago Opera Company, are to be the soloists at the popular concert Thursday afternoon, May 4. The Festival will close the same evening with "Tri-City Night," when the soloists will be James Harrod, tenor and Arthur Klein, the Newark boy pianist, who was adjudged the winner in the contest in which eighteen local soloists competed. A feature of this program will be the presentation of Berlioz' celebrated "Requiem Mass," sung in Latin by a chorus of 3,000 voices, assisted by an orchestra of 150; the festival choruses of Paterson and Jersey City being brought to Newark in special cars to unite with the Newark singers. This monumental work, in addition to the full orchestra, requires the use of four brass bands in the "Tuba Mirum" passage.

The directing genius of this mammoth musical congress will be C. Mortimer Wiske, for many years chorusmaster for the late Theodore Thomas, and formerly conductor of the Brooklyn Choral Union, Brooklyn Amphion, Brooklyn Choral Society, Brooklyn Cecilia Society, New York Schubert Club, New York Orpheus Club, New York Chorus Society, Passaic Glee Club, Paterson Orpheus Club and Paterson Symphony Society. This year will mark the second Music Festival conducted by Mr. Wiske in Newark, his first in Jersey City, and his fourteenth in Paterson, his present place of residence.

Following the musical events will come a cycle of attractions, many of them of national importance. Newark's contemporary and historical entertainments will be of a nature long to be remembered. In many ways they will surpass those of the famous Philadelphia Centennial of 1876. Newark's Industrial Exposition is to be re-opened on May 13, on "President's Day," by President Wilson, and will continue three weeks. Newark has 2,200 factories engaged in the manufacture of 252 distinct lines of goods and having an annual output of $259,000,000. Newark is the eleventh city in the United States in the aggregate value of products annually.

Commemorating the stature to which their city has come and the important rank it has taken as a commercial and residential community, the people of Newark as a whole have given not only their money for the actual celebration and the memorial building, but have given largely and unselfishly of their time and personal services. Thousands of young men and women have aided in the work of preparing for the great pageant to be given on the nights of May 20-21 and June 1-2, other thousands have worked hard for the music festival. Earnest women have long given their loyal services to the making of costumes at Pageant House. One of the most remarkable things in connection with the whole celebration has been the wonderful, cohesive public spirit of the people of the city of Newark.

The festivities for the five months contemplate a series of more than one hundred highly interesting civic events, known dates for fifty of which have been announced officially. There will be scores of parades, conventions, special ceremonies, sports, tournaments, concerts, church mass meetings, theatricals, automobile gymkhana and tests, military exercises, charitable surveys and school exhibits. The leading athletic events of the world for 1916 will be provided at a cost of $40,000, in competitions and exhibitions at intervals throughout the celebration.

The historic pageant is to be under the direction of the American expert, Thomas Wood Stevens, chief of the dramatic division of the Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh, who after a year's research wrote the book of the pageant. Mr. Stevens directed the big St. Louis pageant in 1914 on the most magnificent scale ever attempted. But Newark's pageant will be the finest thus far presented in America.

The sum of $60,000 is being spent on this one affair, which will employ the dramatic services of 3,150 persons in costume. A seating capacity of 40,000 will be provided in Weequahic Park. Half of the capacity will be free to first-comers at each performance. In other half will be reserved at an average price of a dollar a seat. All standing room will be free.

It is expected that at least 50,000 persons from far and near will view each of the wonderful night performances, for which new and scientific lighting devices and effects of an unusual nature are to be employed.

It will thus be seen how Newark is to spend so much money in the development of the permanent civic spirit of her people. She is creating a liberal community life, a social solidarity and a dynamic and co-operative business energy amongst her industrial interests.

Newark believes this to be a good investment in merely material values, but a far better investment in its civic, educational, social and aesthetic aspects.

On the practical side, although the celebration was by no means determined upon as a means of advertising the city, Newark has nevertheless attracted attention to her enterprise, public spirit and the united civic genius of her people, in the nature of the case.

The city hopes to derive great good and hasten projected improvements as a result of the celebration, which has centered the attention of other cities in all parts of the United States.

SAYS WE BECOME CRANKS ON HOT WATER DRINKING

Hopes every man and woman adopts this splendid morning habit.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness.

If we all would practice the drinking of phosphated hot water before breakfast, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of thousands of half-sick, anaemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms ptomaine-like poisons in the bowels which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but it is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.—Adv.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

ELKS' SHOW A GREAT SUCCESS

Initial Performance of "The Mystic Rose" Given An Ovation.

SOLOISTS ALSO SCORE

Miss Juliette Brancati, as "San Kura," Accorded High Honors—"Kiddies" Make a Hit in the "Butterfly Ballet."

There were many novelties to impress pleasant recollections upon the audience which viewed Plainfield Lodge of Elks' production of the Japanese-American light opera, "The Mystic Rose," at the Plainfield Theatre last night, but after all had been forgotten, there will be one thing remaining clear in the memory. This will be the sight of the hundreds of little "kiddies" who executed the ballet of the flowers and butterflies. It was a refreshing bit of stage work devolved from nothing, as one might say, a fact which made its remarkableness all the more pronounced. Nothing like it has probably ever been seen locally before, and the picture presented by the great collection of youngsters from the kindergarten age to sixth grade importance will ever stand out as one of the biggest hits of this latest undertaking of the energetic lodge men.

To be exact, there were about three hundred of the juveniles in the ballet. They were "discovered" asleep on a hillside when the curtain arose, and after the awakening they marched to the front of the stage in groups of twenty-four. They represented roses, violets, shamrocks, forget-me-nots, goldenrod, lilies, fireflies, dandelions and butterflies. Each group sang its own little song and performed its own individual steps. The old folks in the audience beamed with expectancy and applauded wildly after each number. Of course some of the little "tikes" were somewhat dazled by the brilliant spotlight and the sea of faces in front of them, but it only made the effect all the more characteristic. Every group sang splendidly, keeping perfect time with the big stringed orchestra, and when at the finish the entire troupe went to sleep again, while roses and petals rained upon them, the scene was applauded till hands smarted. Those "kiddies" will surely be remembered for a long time.

"The Mystic Rose" was composed by Robert P. Skilling, who personally produced and conducted last night's performance, the first of three to be given. It has just enough plot in it to keep the interest of the audience without any flagging, and is replete with catchy song numbers, special dances, elaborate costumes and beautiful scenery. The chorus work is one of the most commendable features of the operatic portion of the program. At times the one hundred assisting artists sang as harmoniously and as effectively as a professional organization that had been on the road for a full season.

While all of the principals did splendid work, it is easily the concensus of opinion that first honors should be awarded Miss Juliette G. Brancati, who portrayed the leading feminine role of "San Kura," a Geisha girl. Although little more than of age, Miss Brancati possesses a beautiful soprano voice, clear and full of strength. Its sweetness was noticed particularly in a love scene duet with William J. Tallamy, as tenor, and its volume was fully established in the finales, where her singing was pitted against the entire assemblage. Her stage presence was also commendable, all of her lines being spoken forcibly

COURT WOULD NOT NAME A RECEIVER

Judge Rellstab Denies Complainants' Petition to Restrain A. O. U. W.

AGREEMENT REACHED

Judge Newcorn Representing Lodge Succeeds in Having Restraining Order Removed—Members to Have Chance to Withdraw.

The rule to show cause why an injunction should not be granted restraining the Grand Lodge of the A. O. U. W. of New Jersey from continuing to do business in the State of New Jersey and a receiver be appointed to wind up the affairs of the organization, came up for argument before the judges of the United States District Court yesterday in the District Court chambers at Trenton, Harvey T. Carr, of the firm of Wilson & Carr, of Camden, represented the complainant, Daniel H. Gomersall and Judge William Newcorn, of this city, and W. Holt Apgar appeared for the defendant. The case was heard by Judge Rellstab.

Before the argument commenced, Judge William Newcorn, representing the lodge, stated that he desired to enter a special appearance for the purpose of objecting to the jurisdiction of the court upon two grounds, the first, that the amount involved in the complainant's action was not sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon the court, he being the holder of a two thousand dollar certificate, the second ground being that the act of 1893, under which the defendant was doing business, provided that all proceedings for an injunction and the appointment of a receiver against a fraternal organization must be brought upon the request of the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance of the State by the Attorney General of the State.

The court held that the first objection was a good one, but permitted the complainant's solicitor to amend his bill by adding several more complainants in order to make up the jurisdictional amount necessary to institute suit in the United States District Court, and on the second ground held that the State act would not interfere with the Federal jurisdiction over the case.

The case was then argued by Mr. Carr in behalf of the complainants, who went over the history of the order from the time Mr. Gomersall became a member, the various changes in rates, and then asked that the affairs of the order be wound up, the assets distributed, a receiver to be appointed and an injunction to issue restraining the order from doing business any further.

At the conclusion of the presentation of the complainant's case, Judge Newcorn read the answering affidavits of the defendant, which denied the insolvency of the organization by showing that they had met every death claim as fast as they came in within a period of four or five days after same had been presented and had paid since the year 1892 the sum of four and a half million dollars to the widows and orphans of the deceased members; that the legislation enacted in March, 1916, for the raise of the rates was fair and reasonable, as it made each member pay for the cost of the protection that the organization was carrying and that while Gomersall had paid into the order $1,081 during his thirty-four years of membership, it cost the order for his protection about $1,800, leaving him a debtor of the order instead of a creditor to the extent of about seven hundred dollars and that the same rule applied to all of the old members of the order.

The affidavits of the actuaries showed that the order was solvent and gave

SURVEY REPORT FOR TAXPAYERS

Council Will Have 1,000 Copies Printed for Free Distribution.

MAYOR EXPLAINS IT

Three Members of Board Oppose Publication as Unnecessary—All Departments Covered by Experts, Who Recommend Improvements.

Members of the Common Council last night received the report of experts of the New York Bureau of Municipal Research who recently made an investigation of all departments in this city and suggested many important improvements for the consideration of local officials. The report contains 250 typewritten pages.

It was decided to have 1,000 copies of the report printed at once for distribution among local taxpayers.

The survey was paid for by the Plainfield Taxpayers' Association and was therefore submitted to officers of that organization. It was sent to Mayor Calkins and he in turn submitted it to the Council with a recommendation that copies be printed. Councilman Babcock last night submitted a resolution calling for a minor appropriation for this purpose, and it passed, but only after serious objection had been raised. Councilman Cose opposed the appropriation on the ground that he did not believe fifty people would read the report no matter how many copies were printed. He said that, so far as he knew, no member of the Council knew what the re-

CONFER MONDAY ON THE LYLE REPORT

All Members of Council to Deliberate Before Action is Taken.

A conference of the Common Council as a whole will be held Monday night, May 8, for the purpose of deciding on a report to be made on the recent investigation of the management of the fire department at the burning of the Lyle home on West Seventh stret.

At last night's meeting of the Council, Mr. Booth brought the matter up by asking Chairman Cose, of the fire committee, what had become of the "Lyle investigation." Mr. Cose explained that a conference had been called for Thursday night of this week, when all members of the Council would be present. Mr. Hamilton reminded him that the conference had been agreed on for Friday evening, and said he could not be present Thursday. Mr. Cose admitted his mistake, but explained that he would be forced to be out of the city Friday and asked that the date be changed. All members of the Council agreed to the change, excepting Mr. Hamilton, who insisted on the original agreement being kept, as his wife was going to have a tea party Thursday evening and he had made arrangements to attend. Tuesday, May 9, was suggested but President Blatz said the local Elks were going to hear Dr. Biederwolf that night, and Monday was finally agreed on.

Councilman Hamilton also asked Mr. Cose whether or not action had been taken on the purchase of an engine for Netherwood. He was told that the matter had been delayed unavoidably but that a report would be ready at the next meeting of the Council.

CHRISTIAN F. KOCH WEDS MISS SADIE MAY STELLE

Miss Sadie May Stelle, daughter of Mrs. George B. Stelle, of North avenue, and Christian F. Koch, son of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Koch, of Schenectady, N. Y., were married at 11 o'clock this morning by Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, at the parsonage, 111 East Ninth street.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for Schnectady, where they will visit the bridegroom's parents. Mrs. Koch is well-known here, where she has many friends. She is a member of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Mr. Koch is a machinist employed at the Pond Machine Tool Work. The couple will reside at 44 Mariners place.

ROUTINE BUSINESS.

Only routine business was transacted at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Health held last evening. Arthur A. Cannon, the new member, was present. It was announced that the new plumbing code is being enforced. The general health of the borough was reported good. There are only two contagious cases.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature recorded at the State Trust Company today was as follows: 9 a. m., 72 degrees; 11 a. m., 77 degrees, and 1 p. m., 74 degrees.

AUTO INDUSTRY MAY LOCATE HERE

Business Men's Ass'n Trying to Bring Ferguson Motor Co. to This City.

PROSPECTS ARE GOOD

Plainfield Capital to Be Invested in Plant Which Will Employ About 1,000 Men—Committee Named to Meet Designer of Car.

The prospects of bringing another automobile plant to Plainfield seems to be exceedingly brought, according to reports received at the meeting of the Plainfield Business Men's Association last night. It was stated that Joseph Ferguson, of Belfast, Ireland, a widely known automobile engineer and designer of a new car about to be put on the market, is planning to build a plant in the metropolitan district and he has a number of Plainfield friends who are anxious to bring him to this city.

Mr. Ferguson is now on his way from Ireland to this country and is expected to arrive in New York tomorrow and the association appointed a committee of five, comprising Morris C. Van Arsdale, Max Tepper, J. D. Loizeaux, A. E. Force and John S. Johnston, to meet him and see what can be done toward inducing him to come to Plainfield. There are several local men who are to invest considerable capital in the industry and they are also quite anxious that Mr. Ferguson should come here.

There are now two samples of the car to be built by Mr. Ferguson in this country and experts declare it to be several years ahead of anything in the automobile line. The concern would want five acres of land to start with and an additional ten acres that would be avavilable later on as the business increasesd. The Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce and Citizens' Committee will also lend their efforts to bring the plant here.

The members of the Business Men's Association were most enthusiastic over the proposition and all agreed that everything possible should be done to induce Mr. Ferguson to build in Plainfield. It was stated that the proposition would mean the employment of a large force of skilled mechanics who would be a benefit to the city.

The name of the concern is the Ferguson Motor Company of America, incorporated. It is proposed to employ between 750 and 1,000 men and the plant must have railroad siding facilities. The proposition was presented to the association by J. D. Loizeaux, who knows Mr. Ferguson.

The association also discussed the question of public comfort stations, and J. J. Varley, Max Tepper, Louis Preger, J. L. Bennett and W. M. Marchant were appointed a committee to take the matter up for consideration. The question of plural memberships was considered, but nothing definite resulted. Under this plan a member unable to attend a meeting would be privileged to send one of his employes to represent him.

C. L. RILEY VISITS COMMUNITY CENTER

West End Civic Body is Highly Complimented for Its Excellent Work.

Encouraging reports were received at the monthly meeting of the West End Community Centre held at the Washington School last night. It was stated that there is now sufficient funds on hand to meet all indebtedness and leave a surplus in the treasury, all of which has been raised since last November. It was voted that no business meetings would be held during July and August, all matters affecting the organization to be taken care of by the executive committee.

Champlain L. Riley, the new president of the Public Recreation Committee, was present last night and informally addressed the community centre. He expressed his pleasure over the excellent progress being made and the promising outlook. He offered his assistance and co-operation in every way in helping to make the live organization a success.

All recreation activities in the city will be invited to attend the "Jersey Day" entertainment to be given at the Washington School on Friday night, May 12, at which time the prize song to be composed by some Plainfield High School pupil will be sung. The center has offered a $5 prize for this song. It is hoped that former Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield, will be able to make an address on that occasion and there will be other attractive features.

I. C. S. FRATERNITY MOVES.

Abraham Lincoln Chapter, I. C. S. Fraternity of the World moved its quarters last night from the First National Bank building to the Frost building on Park avenue. During a subsequent meeting Arthur L. Grisley was elected chairman of the exevutive committee.

TOO MANY SHOWS ON BORDER LINE

Mayor Calkins Says Objectionable Ones Are Growing Frequent.

MAY REVOKE LICENSES

Some Parents No Longer Feel Plainfield Theatres are Reliable Places for Young People—Council Approves Policy as Outlined.

That many parents in Plainfield no longer feel that local theatres are reliable places of amusement for young people was declared by Mayor Calkins in an official communication to the Common Council last night, when he outlined a policy declaring for the stopping without notice of all future performances not unequivocally clean and wholesome.

Mayor Calkins called attention to the increasing number of "objectionable or border-line" exhibitions, some of which have been stopped at his request; and said that there was some question as to the responsibility for such performances which he wanted to settle, and he proceeded to show that, by law, all responsibility rests upon the exhibitor or manager, and that the penalty for showing an immoral or indecent performance of any kind is withdrawal of the license.

The Council, by resolution, indorsed the policy as outlined by the mayor. His communication follows:

"From personal observation as well as from reports from reliable sources, I am satisfied that many

NAME ARCHITECT FOR NEW CITY HALL

New York Man Gets Honor—Plans Will Be Shown Here Soon.

Peck & Bottomly, of New York, have been selected as architects for the new city hall to be erected by Plainfield during the current year. The selection was made by a jury made up of Mayor Calkins and Councilman Hylan, acting as a sub-committee from the councilmanic building committee, and working with three noncompeting New York architects. Members of the Common Council last night approved the selection.

Eleven architects entered into the competition. Second choice was awarded Wilder & White, of New York and Plainfield, and with this was a prize of $200. Third choice, carrying a prize of $100, went to E. D. Litchfield, of New York city. The other architects who submitted plans for the local building were Tracy & Swarthout, Marsh & Gette, Parish & Schroeder, Hill & Stout, Delano & Aldrich, Robert D. Kohn, Armstrong, De Gelleke & Wendehack, and Warren & Clark.

The drawings that won the competition will probably be used as the general plan for the city hall, but the building committee has power to modify and change these, also to use all or any parts of the plans submitted by the architects that won second and third prizes.

All of the designs submitted in the city hall competition will be brought to Plainfield Wednesday and will be placed on public exhibition for one week. They will be shown at the Evergreen School between the hours of 10 a. m. and 5 p. m., except on Saturday of this week when the hours will be from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 10 p. m.

How the selection was made is told in the following report of Mayor Calkins, who served as chairman of the committee:

"The competition closed Monday, April 24. The drawings of all competitors were anonymous and were received and opened by this committee. In each package was a plain sealed envelope containing the name of the author. Each envelope was given a number corresponding with a number placed upon the drawings with which it was enclosed. These sealed envelopes were not opened by the jury until after the award was made. Before any drawings were opened, each member of the building committee affirmed that he had absolutely no information, direct or indirect, as to the authorship of any of the drawings. We therefore report to you that the competition was strictly anonymous, and fair and straightforward from start to finish."

POSTPONE MEETING.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Netherwood Reformed church will meet Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Horace G Adams, on Johnson avenue. This meeting was to have been held Thursday night, but has been postponed because of the Biederwolf revival.

CLAIM VIOLATIONS OF EXCISE LAWS

Judge Bergen Delivers Strong Charge to Jury Upon Opening of Court.

URGES INVESTIGATION

Alleged Selling of Liquor at Country Clubs on Sunday is Also Commented Upon—James F. Buckle is Chosen Foreman of the Jury.

One of the strongest charges given a Union county Grand Jury in many years was made this morning when Judge James J. Bergen presided at the opening of the May term of the Union county courts in Elizabeth. Violations of the excise laws, principally by Elizabeth saloonkeepers, were primarily responsible for the judicial denunciation, and he called upon the jurymen to find indictments if sufficient evidence was presented. Judge Bergen also referred to the allegation that country clubs throughout the county are serving liquor on Sundays, and declared that those responsible should be punished if it was learned, after sufficient probing, that persistent rumors are correct.

In his address to the grand jurors, of which former Mayor James F. Buckle, of this city, had previously been named as foreman, the presiding justice stated that his attention had been called to open selling in Elizabeth on Sunday by saloonkeepers.

"If the evidence that has been brought to the attention of the authorities is found to be bona fide," declared Judge Bergen, "those responsible for such a state of affairs should be brought to justice. It has been asserted that superior officers in the police department and officials high in municipal authority have openly countenanced flagrant infractions of the excise statutes, and there should be no discrimination in finding indictments against them."

Another matter which Judge Bergen touched upon in his charge was the proper auditing of the books of the late county clerk, James C. Calvert. The Justice stated that the county auditor should go further in his examination of receipts and disbursements than he had done, and that if any laxity is discovered the proper legal remedy should be applied.

Beside Foreman James F. Buckle, the Plainfielders on the grand jury are Frank Weed, William R. Causebrook and Alvin E. Hoagland. John Z. Hatfield will sit from Scotch Plains. The list of local cases for trial at this term is as follows:

First National Bank vs. Frederick Harrington, First National Bank vs. Frederick Harrington Company; Isaac P. Runyon, attorney for plaintiffs, and Sidney W. Eldridge, for the defendants.

Anton Schmid, trustee, vs Berfelden Mills; Clifford L. Newman, for the plaintiff, and William Newcorn, for defendant.

Benjamin W. Brown vs. A. C. Thompson Auto Co.; A. B. Archibald, for plaintiff, and W. D. Wolfskeil, for defendant.

William E. Cook vs. Vitaphone Company; Cory & Zimmerman, for plaintiff, and V W. Nash, Jr., for defendant.

FRENCH GAIN IN NEW OFFENSIVE

Paris Receives News of Night Victory With Great Enthusiasm.

GERMAN NOTE DELAYED

Berlin Suggests That King Alfonso Be Named to Arbitrate Submarine Controversy—Lipton's Yacht is Sunk by Mine.

Paris, May 2.—French war statement:

The War Office announced today that in the attack against the Germans north of Douaumont on the east bank of the Meuse, French troops had occupied five hundred yards of the enemy's trenches and taken 100 prisoners. This gain on Verdun's northeast front is the largest made in any of the recent French counter attacks. In the offensive operations that the French launched on the west bank on the night of April 29, they succeeded in gaining control of 1,000 yards of the German trenches in the vicinity of Dead Man's Hill.

No news from the Verdun front since the beginning of the Crown Prince's offensive has aroused such enthusiasm in Paris as the publication of today's communique.

The official statement was taken to mean not only that the German drive has been definitely checked, despite repeated German assaults on Sunday, but that the offensive has now passed to the French armies, which are pushing back the German lines.

The French advance last night was made between Fort Douaumont and the village of Vaux, on the northern fringe of La Caillette woods in which much severe fighting has occurred. The positions captured by the French were first line trenches. One hundred German prisoners were taken.

No German Reply Today.

Berlin, May 2.—The Lokal Anzieger, in an inspired satement, says that discussions on the American note concerning submarine warfare are being conducted with gravicy and earnestness. A reply is, therefore, improbable for several days.

More Russ. Troops in France.

Marseilles, France, May 2.—The fourth contingent of Russian troops arrived here today. They were enthusiastically cheered when they disembarked and marched through the streets.

Turks Die on Transport.

Saloniki, May 2.—The Turkish transport Chirketi Mairie, has been sunk off Rodosto, in the Sea of Marmora, by a British submarine, it was announced here today. Hundreds of Turkish soldiers on the ship are believed to have perished.

Ask Alfonso to Arbitrate.

Amsterdam, May 2.—It has been suggested in German political circles says a despatch from Berlin today, that King Alfonso of Spain has been asked to arbitrate in the dispute which has risen between the United States and Germany over the latter's submarine warfare.

Yacht Erin is Sunk.

London, May 2.—The armed yacht Aogusa, which the Admiralty announced last night had been sunk in the Mediterranean by a mine with the loss of six men, was formerly the Erin, the famous yacht of Sir Thomas Lipton, it was learned today.

Von Buelow Aids U. S.

Paris, May 2.—Having returned to Berlin from Switzerland, Prince von Buelow, former Chancellor of Germany, has joined the moderate party in urging full acceptance of the conditions imposed in President Wilson's note on submarine warfare, according to Geneva despatches.

Belgian Relief Ship Sinking.

London, May 2.—The Swedish Fridland, a Belgian relief ship, has met with disaster and is sinking, according to an announcement issued by Lloyds. The first report gave no details. The Fridland recently sailed from the United States for European ports.

Conference with Von Jagow.

Berlin, May 2.—A conference is planned between Foreign Minister Von Jagow and Ambassador Gerard as soon as the American envoy returns from his visit to the Kaiser. The Ambassador is expected to arrive this afternoon, but his train has been delayed.

Two Steamers Sunk.

London, May 2.—The Brazilian steamer Rio Branco has been sunk. The British steamer Rochester City has also been sunk. One life was lost in the destruction of the Rochester City.

MAYOR GOES TO TRENTON.

Mayor Calkins is in Trenton today attending a meeting of the executive committee of the Mayors' League of the State of New Jersey. He will return to Plainfield this afternoon.

DAILY PRESS TOOK 300 ON GREAT TRIP TO AMERICA'S GREATEST PLAYHOUSE

Outing to See "Hip, Hip, Hooray" Most Successful of Its Kind Ever Conducted—Train of Central Railroad's Best Cars Used—Second Edition of Big Hippodrome Success More Spectacular Than the First.

Nearly three hundred representative Plainfielders were the guests of the Plainfield Daily Press last night at the New York Hippodrome, the excursion under the newspaper's auspices being the largest and most successful of its kind ever conducted from this State to a metropolitan playhouse. Five of the Central Railroad's finest vestibuled cars were provided for the occasion, and not a hitch occurred to mar the pleasure of the evening from the time the train left Dunellen at 5:54 until it returned shortly after 12:30 o'clock this morning. The production, "Hip, Hip, Hooray," was shown at its best last night, Charles B. Dillingham, as publisher, issuing a second edition of the great success. The first edition came out last autumn.

With the help of R. H. Burnside as managing editor, John Philip Sousa as musical editor, Charlotte as sporting editor, and a staff of other editors, which included Nat Wills, Miss Belle Storey, Charles T. Aldridge, Toto and Powers' elephants, Mr. Dillingham had used the blue pencil freely in the first edition, and the new "Hip, Hip, Hooray," came out with the latest things in music, comedy, skating, war news and animal tricks.

New numbers were scattered through the whole performance, from new dances in the Kat Kabaret to new whirls, curves and pirouettes on the ice in "Flirting at St. Moritz." Miss Storey had new ragtime songs written by Irving Berlin. Mr. Sousa had new numbers of his own composition for his concert, including a march, "The Pathfinder of Panama," which the band played as it marched out on the stage with the bandmaster at its head, and "A Day in Camp," a medley of bugle calls and patriotic and other well-known airs. Nat Wills had new songs and jokes. Toto had new tricks and so had the ele-

SEVERE CENSURE FOR CONTRACTOR

Mayor Latham, of Dunellen, Tells H. K. Corbin He Must Fix Streets at Once.

PLAN IMPROVEMENTS

Council Will Make Streets Near the Railroad Attractive to Those Passing Through Borough—Janitor of Firehouse Wants a Raise.

Many matters were considered at last evening's session of the Mayor and Common Council, at which all of the councilmen were present. A communication was received in which A. F. Conant, Hervey B. Walters and R. P. Greaves, residents of Washington avenue, thanked the Council for filling in the holes on Orange street, between Washington avenue and New Market road. They then went on to say that this had not improved the condition, however, as stagnant water is still standing along the thoroughfare. They attributed this to the fact that the ground hadn't been leveled by the sewer contractors after laying the pipe and also because the tile drains which had been cut through by the contractor had not been replaced. They asked that these conditions be remedied. Mr. Corbin was present and stated that his men had replaced the drains. As to leveling off the surface of the road he said that this would be attended to at once.

In a communication the Defender Fire Company asked the Council to furnish it with 250 feet of hose. Harry S. Shugars, who has been caretaker of the firehouse and apparatus for the past eight years, asked for an increase in salary from $4 a month to $10, which was referred to the fire and water committee. Mayor Latham said that he thought Mr. Shugars had asked for too large a raise. Mr. Shugars in requesting an increase said that his duties had increased with the growth of the borough.

In making its monthly report of the sewer work, the firm of George W. Fuller, the borough engineers, stated that the North avenue sewer is constructed to a point within 350 feet west of Washington avenue, together with the house connections, which are practically completed from the pumping station on Bound Brook road to Lincoln avenue; that the sewer on Mountainview terrace lacks about 500 feet from being completed on the block from Lincoln to Madison avenue, with the house connections carried as far as Madison avenue; and that the remaining stretch of sewer on Madison avenue between Fourth street and Mountainview terrace has also been finished. The estimate of the value of the sewer work completed to date was set at $107,172.59.

A recommendation from the Board of Trade that the streets which can be seen from the railroad be put in good shape so as to give those who pass through the borough a good impression of the place was favorably commented upon by Mayor Latham, who said that he had that very thing in mind and that the matter would be attended to as soon as the sewers are completed.

In this connection the Mayor asked Mr. Corbin when he was going to commence rolling the streets along which the sewer work has been completed. Mr. Corbin said that as soon as the roller came, which would be within two weeks. The Mayor severely cencured Mr. Corbin for his delay in the matter and told him that he couldn't expect good treatment from the borough if he didn't reciprocate. He told Mr. Corbin that he wanted him to start the work within a week. "If the roller you are waiting for doesn't come within that time you will have to get another," he said, "or the borough will go ahead with the work itself."

Councilman Richard M. Ryan called the attention of the Council to the fact that garbage is being emptied between one of his houses and that of William Brokaw. That and other matters relative to overflowing cesspools were referred to W. S. Frederick, of the Board of Health, who was present. The conditions of the cesspools about town Mr. Frederick said attest to the need of sewers. The Board of Health meets tomorrow evening.

Bids were received from the Standard Oil Company for the contract of oiling and sweeping the streets of the borough, covering approximately 38,000 square yards. The bid for oiling the streets was one and a half cents per square yard and that of sweeping the streets one-fifth of a cent per square yard.

It was voted to have the law and ordinence committee draw up an ordinance relative to laying sidewalks on Sandford avenue.

The bad condition of some stretches of sidewalk about town was discussed at length. A. F. Todd, a prominent citizen, called the attention of the Council to the condition of the sidewalk on North avenue, between Washington and Jackson avenues, where there are a number of bad holes in the walk. He also said that the sidewalk along the west side of Jackson avenue, between Front street and Dunellen avenue, needed attention.

The report of the treasurer for the month of April was as follows: Receipts—Balance in bank, $894.79; taxes from collector, $107.13; interest, $6.77; recorder's fines, $5; W. R. Arnold, treasurer, $794.75; note (interest on collecting sewerage bonds), $1,825; note (interest on North avenue drain), $928.49. Total receipts, $4,5461.93.

Disbursements—Street improvement and maintenance, $158.64; maintenance and extension of fire department, $8.65; salary of borough officials, $75; printing and advertising, $75.38; maintenance of Board of Health, $55; support of borough poor, $5.50; extra help in collector's office, $51.08; miscellaneous expense $21.80; maintenance of police department, $114.50; maintenance of borough hall, $11; lighting of streets and buildings, $184.01; interest on collecting sewerage bonds, $1,375; interest on joint sewerage bonds, $450; North avenue drainage, $953.99; Madison avenue drainage, $10; note (First National Bank), $133.40. Total disbursements, $3,682.85. Balance in bank, $879.08.

Mrs. J. F. G. Kinney, who has been ill with pneumonia, was able to sit up today.

Mrs. A. L. Barton and Miss Lettie Barton, who spent the past week in the borough as the guests of Adam Herlich, returned home by automobile Sunday afternoon.

AFTER MORE HELP.

Superintendent J. B. Kersey of the sewer work went to New York yesterday to endeavor to hire twenty-five of the fifty Spaniards, who were scheduled to land at Ellis Island. Labor is very scarce and it is with difficulty that Superintendent Kersey can get or keep his men although the salary wage is $2.25 for a nine-hour day.

No objections were offered by the property-holders at the meeting of the Front street drainage commissioners held Monday evening.

INJURED HIS FINGER.

Francis Teeling is incapacitated with a finger injured while performing his duties at the Hall Press Works Saturday. Mr. Teeling was working on a lathe and his finger was caught between the tool and the job. He will be unable to work for several days.

EPWORTHIANS ELECT.

At a meeting of the Epworth League held at the home of Mrs. Ella Kennedy last evening, the following officers were elected for the year: Howard Townley, president; Miss Adelaide Ramsey, first vice president; Roy Smith, second vice president; Miss Estelle Eick, third vice president; Miss Gertrude Hughes, fourth vice president; Miss Ruth Seals, secretary; Mrs. R. J. Fisher, treasurer, and Miss Winnifred Schenck, pianist. There was a very good attendance at the meeting. Following the business of the evening a social time was enjoyed and refreshments served.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Cooke have moved into their home on Second street, which they recently purchased from the Watchung Investment Company.

Mrs. W. S. Fredericks is suffering from lumbago.

Ralph Parker has taken a position with the Apgar Construction Company.

MUSICAL PROGRAM AT TABERNACLE

Tomorrow Mr. Danner Will Talk on Lepers of the World.

A special musical program will be rendered at the Tabernacle tonight, consisting of selections by the National Male Quartet, a solo by Judge Runyon, a reading by Mrs. Brake and a duet by Mr. McEwan, with himself. Tuesday evening's musical services have already proven popular with Plainfielders and it is expected that the Pine Temple will be crowded.

The delegation invited tonight is from the Knights of Pythias.

Tomorrow afternoon William C. Danner will give a lecture on the "Lepers of the World." Mr. Danner is engaged in missionary work among lepers and he has many startling facts to disclose concerning lepers in this country. He recently quoted a prominent physician as saying that there were 3,000 lepers in the United States, many of them being hid by their physicians because there was no place to care for them outside of two States. The delegation tomorrow night will be the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

Thursday afternoon Dr. Biederwolf will give his famous lecture on "Christian Science." At night the delegation will be from the Somerville Commercial Travelers. There will be another afternoon meeting Friday and on Saturday afternoon there will be a chautauqua hour, with songs, solos, readings and musical instruments. Saturday is to be community day and there will be services at the Tabernacle throughout the entire day. Saturday evening a big delegation will come from Norristown, Pa., and it is promised that at least 300 will come. Dr. Biederwolf will preach to men only Sunday afternoon.

REFUSES TO NAME RECEIVER

their reasons for it, and also that the plan adopted by the Grand Lodge was reasonable and equitable and would perpetuate the order even though there were no further additions to the order.

The argument took up the balance of the day and at the conclusion of the argument the court stated that he would not feel justified in appointing a receiver and prohibiting those who were desirous of continuing the organization from doing business and made a suggestion whether in a spirit of equity it would not be well for those members, who like the complainant, desired to withdraw from the order, to permit them to pay all their assessments up to date and receive from the order their pro rata share of the reserve fund, which was estimate would amount to approximately about seven dollars for a five hundred dollar certificate, fourteen dollars for a thousand dollar certificate and twenty-eight dollars for a two thousand dollar certificate.

Counsel then left the court room and arrived at an agreement, and an order was made denying the appointment of a receiver, and removing the restraint, restraining the order from paying any further death claims, and providing an option to the members of the order who desire to withdraw, the amount to be fixed upon a basis of the court later on. Notice of this option to be sent to all of the members and the case continued until June 5 in order to permit the membership to exercise this option if they desire, in the menatime every member of the order must pay his assessment under the rates adopted by the Grand Lodge at the March session, or exercise one of the other options enacted in the said legislation.

As a result of the suit any of the members who are dissatisfied with the new rates will have the privilege of withdrawing and receiving such sum of money as might be ascertained is due them. In the meantime the order under the new rates and plans, which is conceded by all actuaries to be the only safe method for a fraternal organization to do business, will give a new lease of life by making provisions for the payment of all future contingent death claims and for the growth and development of the order upon a sound basis.

and bits of "business" executed without any amateurist uneasiness. The solo work of Miss Sadie Lee and Miss Marie C. Schafer were other distinctive numbers and the comedy of Miss Josephine Murphy produced continuous laughter. Miss Murphy had a bunch of lines spiced with wit and she had the happy faculty of putting them across the footlights with a "punch." She represented an Akron, O., girl in search of a recreant lover, and her breezy American language was a decided contrast to the Japanese demureness. More comedy was contributed by Harry N. Blimm, who has long been a favorite in Plainfield Elks' affairs; his side partner, Edward J. Harding, Jr., and Joseph C. Martin. John J. Campbell had the principal male singing role and did himself proud, his splendid baritone voice having never been heard to better advantage. William J. Tallamy had one of the catchiest songs of the whole show, a tenor solo, "Love Makes the World Go Round," and William G. Smitth registered a big hit with his characteristic song number, "You're the Girl Worth While." Charles F. Kreger, as "Gin Riki," a tea house proprietor, added no small quota to the excellent singing, and was also very well liked in his portrayal of the part. The cast of principals in full includes the following:

"San Kura," a Geisha girl, Miss Juliette G. Brancati; "Miss Brant," a tourist, Miss Marie C. Schafer; "Akron Sue," with a mission, Miss Josephine Murphy; "Yet Go," a tea girl, Miss Sadie F. Lee; "Oya Koo," a tea girl, Miss Bessie Gunzelman; "Mr. Harkins," a scientist, William J. Tallamy; "Okama," Priest of Shaman, John J. Campbell; "Bun Jan," a fisherman, Joseph C. Martin; "Izzy Wright," adventurer," Harry N. Blimm; "Willie Wynn," adventurer, Edward J. Harding, Jr.; "Percy Cartish," of London, William G. Smith; "Spots," a detective, William C. Mulvey; "Gin Riki," tea house proprietor, Charles F. Kreger; "Genii," Master Robert Blair; "Herald," Samuel R. Taverner; Japanese Guards, Geisha Girls, Tourists, Villagers, Soldiers, Dancing Girls; C. V. Smith, prompter.

Beside the principals' numbers there were specialties by the Geisha double sextette; the tourist double septette, the dancing tea girls and the Boola-Boola boys. Robert Blair, appearing as Genii, had the youngest of the speaking parts and delivered his lines in a masterful way. The little fellow could be heard distinctly in the furthermost part of the theatre and he had the right sort of gestures at the right time to show that he was a genii in every sense of the word. Those taking part in the specialty numbers were the following:

Geisha Double Sextette—Miss Irma Waldorf, Miss Evelyn W. Buckley, Miss Zaira L. Brancati, Miss Edith Little, Miss Lyle Smith, Miss Gertrude I. Blimm, John P. Causbrook, Harold K. Phifer, Arthur R. Perrin, Elmer Blimm, Daniel McNamee, Charles H. Baumann.

The Tourist Double Septette—Miss Emma H. Ryno, Miss Ethel Runyon, Mrs. Arthur J. Utzinger, Miss Anna Wiedenhaupt, Miss Helen Johnson, Mrs. Neale Mackinnon, Miss Bessie Swann, William P. Taylor, Lemuel B. Woolston, Jr., F. Porter Gore, William Jung, Herman Kling, John P. Causbrook, Thomas A. Moore.

The Dancing Tea Girls—Miss Zaira L. Brancati, Miss Elinor McCarthy, Miss Anna, Wiedenhaupt, Miss Elsie Moulton, Miss Grace Harding, Miss Irma Waldorf, Miss Margaret McCarthy, Miss Betty Mara, Miss Mary Donnolly, Miss Evelyn W. Buckley.

The Boola Boola Boys—B. Harrison Fahn, Pasquale Caruso, John L. Lindabury, G. Elton Greenleaf, E. P. T. Smith, R. R. Hudson, E. A. Sprowl, A. E. La Porte, John Richards, L. B. Woolston, Jr., Herman Kling, David C. Patterson.

Too much praise cannot be accorded Mr. Skilling for his remarkable success in coaching the artists and chorus and also to Mrs. Skilling for the great results obtained from the children in the ballet. Last night's performance showed that they had been working incessantly for a long time. The manner in which everything passed off and the enthusiasm of the audience was a partial reward for all the labor expended. Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Skilling were members of the Elks committee, composed of William C. Mulvey, Edward J. Harding, Jr., Joseph Martin, John H. Cose and C. F. Stout, all of whom labored industriously for the past two months and are entitled to a full share of commendation. The show will be repeated tonight and tomorrow night. For tonight's performance there are only a few seats left, and indications point to a capacity audience. There are a few choice reservations left for tomorrow night, but it is highly probable that they will be all called for before twenty-four hours have passed.

MAY ELECT FREEHOLDER AT MEETING OF MAY 22

A date for the election of a freeholder to succeed the late J. Hervey Doane was not set at last night's meeting of the general Council. The clerk of the Union County Board notified the Council that a vacancy existed and that an election should be held at the earliest possible moment. The communication was referred to the finance committee and an election will probably be held at the special meeting of May 22.

The Newest and Choicest at Prices That Emphasize the Tepper Leadership in Value Giving

The warm weather is here now, and to stay, and the time is real ripe for buying wash and white goods. The Tepper store, ever watchful of the immediate needs of its patrons, presents to the thrifty women remarkable values in that line.

You will find here tomorrow a big stock that is so varied and comprehensive as to include anything you may desire from the lowest popular price to the higher grade and more expensive fabrics.

As to the prices, we fully believe they are the lowest in town. It has been our great fortune to make our purchases early, and for this reason, we are able to offer you merchandise at the price we would have to pay for it wholesale, were we to buy it now.

DAVID LAMAR.

"Wolf of Wall Street" Must Serve Sentence.

The supreme court has affirmed the conviction of David Lamar on charges of impersonating a congressman over the telephone with the alleged intent of defrauding. He is under sentence to serve two years in the penitentiary.

AVERT COAL STRIKE BY WAGE INCREASE

To Sign Agreement Carrying Long Truce.

New York, May 2.—The tri-district committee representing the United Mine Workers of America in the Pennsylvania anthracite mining districts unanimously ratified the agreement of wages and working hours made by a subcommittee of miners and mine operators at the Union League club. The committee met at the Hotel Continental and registered its vote, the result of which, with a copy of the agreement, will be submitted today to the miners in convention at Pottsville, Pa.

This means that a strike of 170,000 coal miners that a few weeks ago seemed unavoidable has been prevented, and as the agreement is to be signed as binding on all parties for four years, it will be a guarantee of peace in the anthracite mining district for that length of time.

But the agreement calls for a wage increase to miners which will increase the operators' payrolls by from $9,000,000 to $12,000,000 annually, which increase, it was said, would fall, in part at least, upon the consumers. Various mine operators estimated that the price of coal would rise in consequence as much as 40 cents a ton and perhaps more.

JOY RIDE ENDS IN GIRL'S DEATH

Speeding Automobile Hits Brick Building.

FOUR OTHERS BADLY HURT

Late Trip From Perth Amboy to Newark Results in Killing of Young Woman—Driver Loses Control and Smashes Into House Close to Road.

Perth Amboy, May 2.—A young woman was killed and two other young women and two young men were injured in an automobile accident here.

The young woman killed was Elizabeth Fr[illegible] Those injured are Margaret Hc[illegible], one of whose hands is so crushed it will have to be amputated; Miss Marion Wustefeld, whose skull is fractured; John Deliman, who has a broken hip, and John Bayles, who has a fractured skull.

Louis Bartos, the sixth member of the party, escaped with bruises. He is held a prisoner, and the case probably will be referred to the grand jury. He drove the car, which belongs to his stepfather, but so far as known the young man did not have permission to take it out; also, the police say, Bartos did not have a license to drive a car.

The six young persons, all between eighteen and twenty years old, went for a ride to Newark. They spent the evening in that vicinity and were on their way home when the accident happened.

From what the police learn, the car was going along Amboy avenue at a high speed. It overtook another car and tried to pass. In turning Bartos went too far, and the flying car smashed into the side of a brick house. Miss Eagan seems to have been hurled against the wall. Her neck was broken.

MOTORCYCLE HITS WOMAN.

Victim Taken to Hospital—Riders Escaped From Police.

Jersey City, May 2.—Mrs. Mary Styles of 54 Nelson avenue, this city, was seriously injured when hit by a motorcycle while at the Hudson County boulevard and Congress street. According to the woman's son, John Styles, who reported the matter to the boulevard police department, the driver of the machine speeded up after the accident. He and four others who saw the incident stated that the number of the motorcycle was 7,587.

Mrs. Styles was taken to her home, and a physician advised her removal to a hospital. Lieutenant Hanley of the boulevard police instructed the men under him to keep a watch for the machine, but it was not located. In the meantime Lieutenant Hanley got into communication with Motor Vehicle Commissioner William L. Dill to trace the owner of the machine.

LABORERS OUT AT PRINCETON

Work on Rockefeller Institute Is Halted.

Princeton, May 2.—The strike of 150 laborers here has tied up work on the Rockefeller Institue For Medical Research, the Princeton university dining hall and the Lambert mansion. The Matthews Construction company has the three contracts, and the laborers want an increase in pay from 23 to 28 cents an hour and an eight hour day.

The Rockefeller institute contract involves over $500,000, and the contract is under a time restriction. The Lambert mansion, which is under construction for General Lambert, a wealthy chemical owner, also totals over $500,000 outlay.

HURT IN AUTO SMASH.

Man's Hip Broken When Three Cars Meet In Collision.

Cedar Grove, May 2.—Thomas McClave, a lumber dealer, of Harrison is in the hospital at Glen Ridge with a hip broken, the result of a triple automobile smash here.

McClave had barely avoided running down Miss Isabel Mosher when a car driven by M. K. Bash of Trenton crashed into his auto. A car driven by S. M. Denjis of Newark a moment later crashed into the McClave car.

KILL PHILIPPINE BILL.

House Rejects Clark Amendment by 213 to 165.

Washington, May 2.—By a vote of 213 to 165 the house sounded the knell of Philippine independence for the present at least, by rejecting the Clarke amendment, providing that the islands be turned loose within four years.

The administration forces were hopelessly routed. The triumphant Republican minority, aided by thirty revolting Democrats, discarded the entire senate measure and substituted for it the old Jones bill; which contains an expression of purpose on the part of the United States to grant the Filipinos independence as soon as a stable government has been established.

Jaw Broken by Twelve Foot Fall.

Kenvil, May 2.—Foreman Charles Ball, fifty years old, who has dared the perils of nitroglycerin thirty-five years at the Hercules powder plant, fell twelve feet from the second to the first floor of the nitroglycerin house and sustained a broken jaw.

No Shirt, Shoots Himself.

Phillipsburg, May 2.—Because his wife, it was said, refused to get him a new shirt Carl Gotonsira, twenty-seven years old, of 11 Pine street fired a bullet into his head behind the right ear. He is at the Easton (Pa.) hospital in a serious condition.

INSTRUCTS ASSESSORS AS TO THEIR DUTIES

President W. A. Coddington Explains the Law to County Officials.

The Union County Tax Board met at the courthouse in Elizabeth yesterday and organized by electing William A. Coddington, president of the Board for the ensuing year, and John Connolly, secretary. All of the members of the Board were present. Upon Mr. Coddington's election he made an address to the county assessors, who were present, numbering about forty in all. He expounded the law in relation to assessments and taxes, and gave positive instructions to the assessors throughout the county that if any of them during the ensuing year failed to make assessments according to law, complaint would be made against any assessor or assessors to the State Board for their removal.

The object of the law, he explained, was to bring about equalization of assessments throughout the State, and this could not be done unless the local assessors acted under the instructions given them by the County Board and not listen to any of the local officials in reference to their making assessments. He called particular attention to the low valuations of Rahway, Summit, Union and some other taxing districts in the county, and warned these assessors that unless they brought their valuations up on an equality with the valuations of other taking districts in the county, he would see to it that the County Board would take proceedings to eliminate any assessor or assessors who failed to do their duty in that regard.

A representative of the State Tax Board met in conference with the Union County Tax Board, and after discussing several matters of a taxing nature, it was decided that the policy of the Union County Board will be to act along the same lines as are now promulgated by the State Board.

BEGIN OBSERVANCE OF "MOSQUITO WEEK"

Children in Local Schools Will Be Shown How the Pests Are Exterminated.

"Mosquito Week" will be observed throughout the whole metropolitan district of New Jersey, New York, Long Island and Connecticut. All the mosquito-fighting organizations in these districts are co-operating to inform the public in this area, who number nearly nine million, as to the best methods of getting rid of the mosquito pest which is troublesome over the whole section.

A letter from J. K. Johnson, the Union county superintendent of schools, addressed to school principals, designates Wednesday, May 3, as Mosquito Day. Prior to that date the commission in Union county will deliver in the schools a pamphlet of instructions for each teacher, a leaflet for each pupil and an exhibit for each class room, the latter consisting of a jar containing mosquito larvae, showing how mosquitoes develop.

The parochial and private schools will co-operate in the same manner, in the anti-mosquito campaign.

Dr. Thomas J. Headlee, State entomologist of New Jersey, says that more than one hundred thousand acres of salt marsh, from Hackensack to Cape May, have been ditched for draining, to eliminate mosquitoes. This includes practically all the salt meadows excepting a small portion in Bergen and Hackensack counties, on the northern two-thirds of the Atlantic coast side of New Jersey.

In the present season extermination work will be done in Union, Hudson, Bergen, Essex and Atlantic counties, including an area of 1,500 miles, with a population of one and a half million people. The complete appropriation for these counties is $155,000, which represents a per capita tax of ten cents per individual, or ten cents on each thousand dollars' worth of taxable property. This seems insignificant in comparison with the millions of dollars lost to the State through the reputation the State has acquired as being pest-ridden by mosquitoes, which now, through intelligent work and co-operation of all the people, will result in the gradual elimination of the mosquito.

The householders all over Union county are requested to clean up their yards, remove all cans, pails and other receptacles that hold water. Barrels of rain water should be tightly covered or screened with fine wire or netting. Chief Kiely, of the local police department, has instructed the patrolmen to report all places that are holding water and liable to be a breeding place for mosquitoes. The Board of Health inspectors have located a number of vacant lots which have been used as dumping places for all kinds of rubbish and the owners have been notified to have these places cleaned. With the co-operation of the public Plainfield can be a mosquitoless city.

more objectionable or border-line exhibitions are given at our public places of amusement than used to be the case. Not that shows are generally or habitually of a low standard I believe the contrary to be the rule. But occasionally, and of late with growing frequency, there will be exhibited a show or a picture so coarse, to say the least, that many parents no longer feel that our theatres are reliable places of amusement for young people; in fact, a considerable number of fair-minded and broad-minded citizens have said to me that many performances otherwise interesting and amusing, are wholly spoiled for them by short scenes injected here and there for no apparent reason whatever except as an appeal to a low order of imagination, or even worse. There is no law against mere vulgarity. But on a few occasions I have found it to be necessary to ask for the withdrawal of advertised performances on account of their immoral tendency. The managers have invariably complied promptly with my requests; and I have so far had no criticism to make of their attitude towards the city authorities. But there appears now to be a field which, in fairness to the managers as well as to the public, ought to be closed once for all against possible future misunderstanding. It is for that purpose and no other that this statement of policy is made.

"To a certain extent it seems to be assumed that a show or picture which has been given elsewhere may be presented here. It has even been suggested that the authorities ought to watch out for the advance notices of all performances, investigate them, and in case of objection promptly notify the theatre managers so that they may have time to advertise the substitution of others. It is argued in substance that a manager, by advertising a show, puts the city authorities on notice; that his responsibility ends for the time being; that the burden shifts to those responsible for the enforcement of the law, and if they wish to be in a position to interfere later with an exhibition which may turn out to be objectionable, they must immediately inquire into it, learn where it has been given and how received, whether it is in all respects the same show advertised for this city, and decide whether it is to be permitted or not.

Is Not Practicable.

"The mere statement of such a proposition nearly suffices to show its utter impracticability. Suppose a film is advertised, at once investigated by the authorities and found to be objectionable, and the manager promptly notified. If he thereupon proceeds to announce another show, the authorities are again put on notice and must investigate all over again. There might be a week between the first advertisement and the date of the performance, but only a day or two intervening after the second notice. What should be done in such circumstances

"The title of a play or picture, unless it is well known or has excited prominent protest elsewhere, is not a sure criterion of its nature. In practice, the authorities would be obliged to inquire into every show advertised to be given. The tendency would be to remove from the managers and proprietors of theatres a responsibility which properly is theirs. If we should ever have an unscrupulous manager in Plainfield, he could advertise a show which he might know to be objectionable according to local standards; and unless the authorities immediately began an investigation and happened to discover its real character and succeeded in objecting in time to enable him to advertise something else for the stated date, he would be in a position to claim the right to go on with it. Thus to misplace the responsibility would result in intolerable confusion.

"As a matter of law the subject is equally free from ambiguity. Shows and exhibitions of an immoral nature or tendency are prohibited. The law nowhere requires the authorities to investigate. The responsibility is placed squarely upon the proprietor, manager or other person conducting the performance. His obligation to the public is somewhat that of an insurer. Of course, if he advertises something which the authorities know or suspect to be objectionable they ought to act promptly to stop it. But they would do so in pursuance of their duty to be vigilant in the prevention of unlawful exhibitions and not because they owe it to the manager to save him the embarrassment of disappointing his patrons. Their obligation in this respect is to the public and not to the licensee.

Will Revoke the License.

"In Plainfield, theatres and moving picture places are licensed under an ordinance authorized by the general law which enables the mayor, when satisfied after a hearing that a show or exhibition of an immoral nature or tendency has been given, to revoke the license. Our theatre managers are well aware that the standards by which we measure such matters are higher than in some of our larger centers of population. Shows are permitted in New York and other cities which would not be tolerated here. There are films passed by the National Board of Censors which local sentiment undoubtedly would regard as needlessly close to the border-line of decency. The managers know this and are in a position to prevent the exhibition of any picture of a questionable character.

"Therefore, instead of the city being under obligation to investigate and file advance objection with the managers, it is for the managers to satisfy themselves that objection will not be made. If in doubt whether a picture will be regarded as objectionable, it is easy for them to request that it be viewed in advance. There is no law compelling the authorities to do this, but I think I can safely promise that the managers will be accommodated.

"It follows that the first business of a local manager is to acquaint himself with the attitude of the authorities respecting the character of exhibitions which may be given. I have been asked, as in the case of 'The Birth of a Nation,' to interfere on account of alleged historical inaccuracy. I have been asked to stop shows which are coarse and cheap. But the law does not compel people to be refined, or, generally speaking, to be accurate. The remedy in such cases lies with the public to say whether exhibitions of that sort shall be made to pay or not. It may be regretable that so wonderful invention as the moving picture is not put to wider use in educating the people, but there is no law to prevent if the public would rather be amused than instructed.

Vulgarity Not Indecency.

"On the other hand, the authorities are given broad discretionary powers in determining what is and what is not of an immoral tendency; and since the views of good people sometimes differ in such matters, exhibitors are not entitled to assume that the standards of other communities or the opinions of some few individuals here, will justify exhibitions which the authorities, according to their best judgment and in the performance of their duty, may condemn. I do not believe that the people of this city stand for shows which are not unequivocally clean and wholesome, and performances will therefore be stopped on short notice or without notice unless our standards are rigorously maintained. Since there is not always a clear line of demarcation between vulgarity and indecency, the former may be indulged in only at the risk of the exhibitor. The safe way to avoid the latter is to give it a wide berth. A license will promptly be revoked on a showing that an exhibition of an immoral tendency has been given. It will not be accepted as an excuse or defense that shows and pictures come into Plainfield by circuits or schedules not arranged by the local managers. The city has nothing to do with any such arrangements, and will hold the licensees responsible for whatever is exhibited. They may not avoid such responsibility by entering into contracts with outside parties under which their full control of the situation is waived or in any manner lessened. Local managers who are agents for proprietors not familiar with the Plainfield policy, can readily make it clear to those for whom they act.

"There is but one alternative to the policy above set forth: namely, an ordinance requiring that all shows and exhibitions of whatever character be viewed and censored locally before they are given. I hope it may not come to this, because it is my belief that it would not be to the interest either of the proprietors of show houses or of the public to have municipal censorship. Logically this leads to public censorship of everything written, published or presented, including art generally. I do not think the people are yet prepared to choose censors to decide for them what they may see and what they may read. Public morality is adequately protected by laws which make it a crime to publish libelous, indecent, impure and immoral pictures, shows and reading matter of any kind.

"I have forwarded copies of the foregoing to the Plainfield theatres and moving picture places, in order that they may have a clear statement in writing of the degree of responsibility to which they will be held. The same principles will apply to other kinds of public shows and exhibitions.

BAGDAD OBJECTIVE FOR RUSSIANS NOW

Two Separate Forces Are Reported Near City.

Petrograd, via London, May 2.—A Russian army is now approaching Bagdad and has repulsed Turkish forces thrown out to oppose it. This statement is contained in the official bulletin issued by the Russian war office.

For the first time Bagdad is mentioned in the official statement as an objective of one of the Russian armies which made its way into Turkey through the mountain passes beyond Kenonshah, in Persia. The last heard of the army was about two weeks ago, when Kerwind, on the Turko-Persian frontier, was captured. Amara, the scene of the capture of the surrounded army of General Townshend, will co operate with the Russian forces.

Another Russian army is advancing on Diarbekh, with the probable intention of taking Aleppo and reaching the Mediterranean.

"PANS" PUT ONE OVER THE CRESCENTS' PAN

Slugging Bee Netted Fifteen Hits and Fifteen Runs for the Victors.

The fast P. A. N., of this city, defeated the Crescent A. C., Saturday afternoon by a score of 15 to 2. The Crescent A. C. played well up to the fourth inning, when the "Pans" found Johnson's curves and there wasn't anything to it after that. Jim McCarthy played a crack game at first and batted as well. The pitching of Newell and the sacrifice hits of Keating also need comment. For the losers, F. Shoeman and A. Martin played a great game.

Then came novelties in the spectacular skating act. George Kerner, Miss Hilda Renckert, Miss Katie Schmidt and Miss Cathleen Pope danced and skated effectively, and then Charlotte gave an Oriental dance on blades, and followed it with "The Moth and the Flame," in which she whirled and spun among lighted candles.

The Plainfield party at the conclusion of the show was willing to be classed among Mr. Dillingham's subscribers, and it is not unlikely that the Press will conduct a second outing to the monster playhouse again next spring. At least there was a general demand for it on the return trip, all aboard the big special voicing words of praise for the manner in which the unusual feature was conducted, and expressing a unanimous wish that it might be made an annual event for Plainfield theatre lovers.

Included on the special were excursionists from Dunellen, Fanwood, Scotch Plains and other nearby points. The run to New York was made in about 45 minutes, and returning the trip between Jersey City terminal and Netherwood took just twenty-two minutes. This reflects with credit on the railroad management that co-operated with the Press in arranging for the outing. The train was given a clear track both ways, and not a stop was made between Fanwood and Jersey City; in fact, the train didn't even hesitate betwen these points.

The best seats in America's big playhouse were at the disposal of the Press party, and Charles A. Goettler, representing the New York Hippodrome, assisted the representatives of the paper in providing every comfort for the guests. The pleasure-seekers attracted considerable attention in New York, particularly at the Hippodrome, were reporters from metropolitans papers swooped down upon the excursionists.

All of the carrier boys employed by the Press were provided with Hippodrome and transportation tickets and went as the paper's guests. A number of the youngsters, as well as some of the grown-ups, had never seen New York before and looked with wild-eyed amazement at the sights along the route and in the playhouse.

ALL REBELS IN DUBLIN YIELD

One Thousand Insurgents Are Taken Prisoners.

GIVE UP UNCONDITIONAL.

Four Hundred and Eighty-nine Sent to England—City Reported Safe and Quiet — Enniscorthy Revolutionists Have Abandoned Fight — Sniping Parties Gradually Surrounded and Forced to Lay Down Arms.

London, May 2.—Following the example of the main body in Dublin, which succumbed to the government troops after death and destruction had reigned in the Irish capital throughout the past week, the remnants of the Sinn Feiners' rebel army have surrendered unconditionally.

One thousand rebel prisoners were counted in Dublin. Isolated groups of snipers who held out in their well hidden haunts long after the capitulation of the main body surrendered one by one. Of the 1,000 insurgents taken in Dublin 489 were sent to England. A boatload of 250 prisoners arrived at Holyhead. There were no wounded among them. Most of them were young men and boys. They were immediately put aboard a train for prisons in the interior of England.

Sir John French, commander in chief of the government's forces in Ireland, reported officially that all the rebels in Dublin have surrendered, that the city is "quite safe" and that the revolutionists in the country districts, too, have accepted the government's term of unconditional capitulation.

The rebels in Enniscorthy, who had made a particularly stubborn stand, were reported to have given up. The Sinn Feiners in Queenstown endeavored to dicker with the government, offering to surrender their leaders and arms if the rank and file should be allowed to go free. The offer was refused, the government's answer being that unconditional surrender was their only chance. The rebels finally yielded.

Order Being Restored.

Wicklow, Arklow, Dunlevin, Bagenalstown, Wexford, New Ross and the counties of Cork, Clare, Limerick and Kerry are generally quiet.

The whole of Ulster is reported quiet.

The greatest disturbance during Friday and Saturday occurred in County Meath, north of Dublin. There the rebels had succeeded in surrounding and disarming a small detachment of Royal Irish constabulary headed by an inspector. The county authorities telephoned to Dublin for aid, which promptly arrived in armed automobiles. A young rebel "lieutenant" with a party of followers, hearing the news of the "army's" surrender, marched to Dublin castle, where he saw what had become of his brethren. Pearse told him it was "all up," and the rebel leader went back to his followers to order surrender.

The final stages of the Sinn Fein rebellion in Dublin were confined to sniping on the part of isolated groups of insurgents, prompted partly by sheer defiance "to the last," partly by disbelief in the reports that the "main army" had unconditionally surrendered. Each of these small groups of snipers was eventually compelled to give up, and throughout the day rebel parties were seen marching in the direction of Richmond prison.

Many hundreds of rebel rifles were laid down at the foot of the Parnell monument at Sackville street. Richmond jail harbored nearly 1,000 Sinn Feiners, most of them in green uniforms, a few in the volunteer garb and the others in civilians' clothes.

The government is taking no chances. To render impossible a rekindling of the still smoldering revolt large contingents of troops are kept in the Irish capital. Corkhill and King Edward streets are particularly well guarded, and every passerby is challenged. Martial law is still in force throughout Ireland.

The intense suffering, especially from hunger, to which the civil population has been subjected as a result of the week's reign of terror has exactly the opposite effect from what the rebels intended—instead of general sympathy there is a city wide bitterness against them among the populace.

Senate Passes Rittmann Bill.

185 PIANOS of Remarkable Excellence Priced from $85

146 RE-BUILT PIANOLAS. Many Popular Models of this Finest of all Players. Priced from $390

44 PLAYER PIANOS, all Aeolian-Built and Aeolian-Guaranteed. Priced from $195

THIS entire stock of three hundred and seventy instruments, representing a value of more than $250,000, has been reduced 25% to 50% in price to induce quick and certain clearance.

Never before have we offered a finer collection either of pianos or players. Nor have we ever before felt justified in marking such excellent exchange instruments at prices so exceedingly low.

The great prosperity and tremendous business of the past few months has brought us an overwhelming number of fine pianos and player instruments—taken in exchange for the Pianola, the remarkable new Duo-Art Pianola and other of our highest grade instruments which have been sold, during this recent period, more extensively than ever before in the history of our organization.

The high quality of the instruments sold is an indication of the value of those taken in exchange. The present instruments are not old, worn-out specimens "traded in" because no longer useful—on the contrary every one is in the prime of its excellence. Every one would have continued to satisfy its previous owner for many years had he not felt a desire and an ability to purchase a finer and more expensive instrument.

Scores of the pianos and players are new in all but the technical sense of the word—some models in discontinued styles are new. Almost without exception the entire number are like new. For our shops, working to capacity since December, have taken care of every detail of refinishing and renewal of parts.

In fixing prices, however, we have had to disregard the unusual quality of goods and the fact that we are dealing practically with a stock of new instruments.

We cannot crowd our warerooms with this stock. We cannot give up space in our storage houses to accommodate it. Clearance must be immediate.

Our prices have been calculated to accomplish this purpose within a six-day period—the period of your opportunity.

IMMIGRATION TOTALS RISE.

33,000 Arrived In March Against 24,000 In February.

Washington, May 2.—Immigration is quickening after months of stagnation caused by the war. Figures published by the immigration bureau show that 33,000 foreigners reached American shores in March against 24,000 in February and 17,000 in January. Each of the months showed a large increase over the corresponding month of the previous year.

Italy is sending the greatest number, with England second, and the Scandinavian countries third. Italian immigrants in March numbered about 3,000.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, MAY 2, 1916.

PLAINFIELD KNOWS HOW.

Some weeks ago, prior to Dr. Biederwolf coming to Plainfield, the Daily Press predicted that ours would do as well as any other city in the matter of cleaning up any indebtedness incurred in connection with the campaign. Sunday's contributions proved that this city appreciates the work which this splendid man has done here, and does not intend to let him worry any longer about the debt. In thirteen minutes $5,360 was pledged to the cause, and before the day was over nearly $7,000 had been given, thus clearing up every dollar that was due for the necessary expenses of the campaign, including the erection of the Tabernacle. It was a great record, and like several other features here, the greatest that Dr. Biederwolf has ever received in any one day.

Plainfield has never failed to do the right thing in any philanthropic or religious movement. The residents of this city are liberal, big hearted, typical Americans, and the kind of which any community can be proud. Dr. Biederwolf has already done a great work, but he will do twice as well now that the knows that Plainfielders are back of him in every way.

The people of the city are to be congratulated upon having undertaken this campaign, and again upon the successful raising of all the expense incurred after but three weeks' effort. There certainly was a surprised crowd Sunday night, when the information went forth that no collection would be taken. As we understand it, all collections taken from now to the end of the campaign will go to various charities, except on the last Sunday, when every dollar given goes to Dr. Biederwolf. And we again make a prediction. It is that the clergyman who has reawakened the morals of this good city will receive as big, or a larger, free will offering than he has ever received since he started his wonderful work.

MOSQUITOES SOON DUE.

Mosquito week is upon us. During the first few days of May, according to a bulletin issued by the Bureau of Public Health and Hygiene of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor in New York, this is the most important time of the year to take precautions at home to prevent the raising of the pests. Every resident who wants to lessen the evil would do well to look around and see to it that no breeding places are left for them. It has been proven beyond a doubt, by the result of the experiment last year, that no mosquito commissions, or other organizations can effectively stop them in a season which has a lot of rain fall, but they can be greatly lessened by a few simple precautions. Here are ten things recommended in the bulletin mentioned which will help:

(1) Mosquitoes swim for 10 days before they fly; (2) in the water they look like very small caterpillars and are called "wrigglers;" (3) all mosquitoes do not come from the fresh and salt water marshes; look to your own premises; (4) are they swimming in your own obstructed yard drain, blocked roof gutter, imperfect drains for ice boxes, empty cans or in the puddle in your cellar? (5) a pint of standing water may breed a hundred; (6) Get rid of standing water; (7) a little oil—any kind will do—spread on water that can't be drained, will kill them before they grow up; (8) window and door screens are worth the trouble, where mosquitoes are bothersome; (9) the baby suffers most—protect it by netting—7 cents a yard; (10) oil of Citronella, at any drug store, will keep the mosquitoes from biting you.

HEALTH FIRST.

The Atlantic City Review says that educators are awakening to the fact that there is little use in drilling the school child in the three R's unless a fourth R is added—an R that stands for Right-living.

It is self-evident that the mental development of the child cannot be secured through education unless it has sufficient physical vigor to perform the acts required by the educative process. A rather exacting process in this present day.

Nature is concerned first of all in maintaining life, and demands that the energy of the child be directed primarily to that end. The normal child is endowed with more energy or vigor than is required for nutrition and growth.

This "factor of safety" may be regarded as the margin to be utilized by the school for intellectual development.

If vigor be deficient on account of inadequate nutrition, imperfect breathing due to adenoids, constant combating of germ poisons from infected tonsils or decayed teeth there is less margin left to be utilized in getting "education."

The margin of physical vigor in excess of bodily needs is the capital which the child has to invest in education.

It is the first business of the school to see that this capital is as large as possible.

The school, therefore, should give primary attention to the health of the children, not only for the sake of health itself, but also to the end that education may be more effective.

The 250 or more Plainfielders who went to New York last night on the Daily Press special to take in the Hippodrome performance all declared that they had a grand, glorious, happy time. The train service was good, the show gave everyone more than their money's worth, and the entire affair was a success from start to finish. It gave great pleasure to arrange the outing for our readers, and we wish to thus express our thanks for the many kind things that were said last night.

• • • • • •

The reason that the great majorty of the people want Teddy for President is that they know that if he is put into office our army and navy will be brought up to the high standard which it showed when he was assistant secretary of war and later as President. Three years of Josephus Daniels seems to have successfully lost to it all the efficiency and marksmanship which characterized the fleet at the time it sailed around the world.

• • • • • •

Are we behind the times in this city? Every exchange that comes to our desk contains references to clean-up week in municipalities all over the State. Nothing has been heard about one for Plainfield. Last year the Board of Health arranged it and attended to all the preliminaries. Certainly there is no idea that one clean-up a year is too much. It is not too late yet.

--Astor Theatre--

Devotees of motion pictures have frequently observed that in selecting scenarios, the producers are prone to depend upon one woman to lead the story to its conclusion. This is the logical outcome of the "star" system in stage productions, and it will continue to be the rule unless some radical changes are made in the manner and method of theatrical presentations. While in a large majority of cases the leading woman is of supreme importance, there occasionally arrives an exception to the rule. One noteworthy example is due to arrive at the Astor Theatre today when "Tangled Hearts" will be presented in the Blue Bird series of photoplays. Louise Lovely is the star in this problem play, with Lon Chaney featured as her leading man; but there are two other women in the cast who will divide with Miss Lovely the honors and responsibilities of the performance. Agnes Vernon and Marjorie Ellison have roles in "Tangled hearts" that bear importantly upon the outcome. Louise Lovely plays the more gracious and pleasing role of a young widow whose mission in life seems to be the soothing of troubled spirits—one of those likeable creatures who is ever ready to serve a friend in any sorrow. The less agreeable role of a woman who has supinely fell in the battle of morals before a designing man has been allotted to Miss Ellison, and she has cleverly fallen in with the fitness of things in her artistic method of portrayal. Very handsome is Miss Ellison, and an actress of great force and delicate shadings in her artistry. Agnes Vernon is an actress of convincing talents, and she has a role to command both sympathy and admiration. In the three-cornered contest of artistry, Miss Vernon, Miss Ellison and Louise Lovely will display widely diverging shades of acting, with all three working to the cumulative strength of the story in building up to a converging and satisfactory conclusion. It will be a long time before such clever actresses will find a medium for their coincident appearances upon the screen. Tomorrow, Pallas Pictures presents Dustin Farnum in the greatest triumph of his career as a screen artist in "The Call of the Cumberlands," from the popular book and play by Charles Neville Buck, full of heart-gripping human interest and thrills. Always a big bill at the Astor Theatre; nothing sensational, always a clean moral program. Our motto, "Quality, Not Quantity." We give Travelstamps.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

"Standing in front of the battalion of the Industrial School for Colored Youths at Bordentown recently, Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, former State Senator from Somerset county, quickly demonstrated that he had not forgotten any of his military training. As president of the State Board of Education, the former Senator was at the school to preside at memorial exercises in memory of the late James A. Gregory, the first principal of the institution. The battalion of cadets had been lined up on the campus, and the principal of the school asked Senator Frelinghuysen if he would drill the boys for a few minutes. The Senator stepped in front of the battalion, and after admonishing the boys that they should all stand erect, with shoulders thrown back, he put them through the "school of the soldier" with the ease of a West Pointer. As colonel and personal aide of former Governor Stokes during his term, Senator Frelinghuysen took an active interest in the military affairs of the State. In the Spanish-American War he served through the campaign in Porto Rico as a lieutenant in Squadron A, the famous cavalry outfit of New York city, and was recommended by General Henry for brevet first lieutenant for conspicuous service."—Newark Sunday Call.

THAT TELLTALE HAT

REPORT FOR TAXPAYERS

port contained and therefore they could not know whether or not it was of sufficient importance to warrant publication. He suggested that a copy be placed on file in the clerk's office, where it would be available to taxpayers.

Councilman Graves announced that his position on the report was the same as that of Mr. Cose.

Councilman Bird wanted to know why the Taxpayers' Association did not furnish extra copies and save the city the expense of printing.

Mr. Babcock explained that the cost of printing 1,000 copies would be about $215, and that the sum was too small to start a controversy over. However, he insisted on the passage of his resolution, declaring that the report was needed by every department head and that, as it was likely to effect every taxpayer in the city, each had the right to demand a copy.

Councilman Hylan was of the opinion that aside from the merits of Mr. Babcock's resolution, it would be discourteous for the Council to refuse to print the report after the Taxpayers' Association had expended $1,200 or more in having the survey made. The resolution originally read "from 1,000 to 2,000 copies," but on suggestion of President Baltz it was changed to read "not more than 1,000 copies" and was passed.

Councilmen Cose, Bird and Graves voted against its passage.

In submitting the report of the survey to the Council Mayor Calkins explained its contents in the following letter:

"I have received from the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association the report of the Bureau of Municipal Research of New York city, on a survey of the government of the city. This comprises a very complete report on the department of finance, including accounting, auditing, purchasing, assessing, and collecting methods; a report on the police and fire departments; a report on streets and public works; suggestions regarding the health and poor departments, and public charities, and a short chapter on the charter, with reference to possible amendments or supplementary legislation at some future time, for greater efficiency of administration.

"This report as you know has been presented to the city, and paid for, by the Taxpayers' Association. Many citizens made contributions to that organization or became members solely that the city might have the benefit of an analysis by experts of our administrative methods and machinery, with recommendations based on the most approved standards as tried out elsewhere. There is no commitment on the part of Mayor or Council to a single change of method; nor, if any changes are made, to the adoption of any of the recommendations except after a thorough study of the report and a deliberate decision by the governing body that improvements can and should be made.

"In order, however, that all the city officials and heads of departments may have an opportunity to make practical use of this report, and in order that citizens who have contributed to its cost may likewise have access to it and thus become familiar with the details of the administration of their public affairs and with these suggestions for greater efficiency therein, it would seem advisable to have it printed for general distribution. I so recommend, and also the adoption of a resolution expressing to the Taxpayers' Association the appreciation of the Council for their interest and help.

"Many of the recommendations are entirely in line with our own conclusions and thus serve as an expert check on plans already formulated by us for improvements in the service. As to the others, the report if printed will be available for reference as we consider from time to time the various matters discussed and to what extent, if any, our organization and methods can be improved."

- Proctor's Theatre -

As freely predicted, Proctor's was the mecca for the majority of Plainfield amusement seekers yesterday, when both Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen," and the initial appearance of the big local photoplay, "It Happened In Plainfield," were the headline features, the spacious theatre being jammed with enthusiastic humanity at every performance. Today also equally as great attractions are presented headed by Douglas Fairbanks, the noted Broadway favorite, and the peer of all screen stars in comedy-drama, who is featured in his latest Triangle production entitled, "The Path of Happiness," an engrossing story combining both pathos and comedy, dexteriously handled by Mr. Fairbanks, whose personality alone is a shining light in this wonderful photoplay. "It Happened In Plainfield," the big local photoplay with Madeline Pennington and James Goodwin playing the leads, assisted by a host of local people, also appears today and will continue throughout the remainder of the week. Added features include "A Bathhouse Blunder," and extremely amusing Keystone comedy, and the latest episode of "Mary Page," with Henry Walthall and Edna Mayo co-starring. Wednesday, William Fox presents his first western production for the perusal of local film fans, entitled "Blue Blood and Red," a breezy and compelling drama of the wild and wooly west with George Walsh and Doris Pawn featured. In addition Wednesday to this feature and the local movie, the tenth episode of "The Iron Claw" will also be presented. Thursday's program includes Jane Grey, who scored such a host of friends in her initial Triangle picture entitled "Let Katty Do It," will appear in conjunction with William Desmond in "The Waifs," a delightful comedy drama produced in artistic fashion. Thursday's program also includes genial Fatty Arbuckle, the peer of all Keystone comedians, in "His Wife's Mistake," a rip-roaring comedy creation in two parts. Friday dainty Marguerite Clark will star in what is conceded to be one of her most successful pictures entitled "Still Waters" and there will be a strong supporting program of features in connection with this masterful production.

German Attacks Fail.

Paris, May 2.—Four powerful attacks in close formation were launched by the Germans against the French positions on the west bank of the Meuse—one directed against the positions retaken by the French recently north of Dead Man hill (Le Mort Homme), the three others against a trench wrested from the Teutons north of Cumieres. All four onslaughts, according to the war office statement, broke down with "enormous losses" to the attackers.

Changes

in the

Old A. T. Stewart Store

An Old Store Full of Life Blood

The conspicuous growth and advancement of the character of everything about the old Broadway corners adjoining Grace Church have compelled a top-to-bottom movement of interest to the public.

New York City is today the leading city of the world!

It always plays fair in business, as the old world has recently proved.

It is plain to be seen that whoever wrote "a change came over the spirit of my dream," wrote a line clearly applicable to the spirit of the people (tradesmen and others) who gave out that "Stewart's" store is too far down town.

The public will please take notice—

For months past, by study and preparation involving the moving of many stocks, we have reached a "reduction to order," and relinquished in both buildings the floor below the street to the

Payments May Be Arranged

There will be no trading stamps, no clubs, no installment plans, no subterfuges of banking schemes of credit. But special time for payments can be arranged in this new store, in its own Credit Office on the floor, by young heads of families and others of good character, charging the same price as if gold were laid down on the spot, to which usual interest will be added for such time as is desired at time of settlement for credit given.

Off He Flew to Give Out Invitations.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Elves Send Out Invitations To Their Party.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

"THE elves, the elves, daddy!" clapped Jack and Evelyn.

So daddy took the armchair and told them: "Once upon a time the old elf king decided to give a grand party for the goblins. So he sent his housekeeper, an old maid elf, to the night jar with a big bunch of invitations to be delivered.

"'Who's to be invited?' the night jar asked the elf lady.

"'Well, almost anybody, even humans, may come to the big ball—anybody, that is, who can talk in his sleep or do something else after our fashion. But the invitations for the grand feast will be very limited. We will have only the most distinguished persons for that. I had a regular battle with the elf king about this, because I think we should not ask even the ghosts. The merman and his daughters will be asked first. I suppose they don't enjoy dry land much. But I shall at least have a wet stone for them to sit on. Then there will be all the first class old demons with tails, the river god and the wood sprites. And I think we should not overlook the grave pig and the church grim. They are all good friends of ours and call on us often.'

"'Croak!' said the night jar. And off he flew to give out the invitations."

"He was the postman," said Jack.

"Already the elf maidens had begun their scarf dance. For those who care for this sort of thing the effect was beautiful. Their scarfs were woven of mists and moonlight. The great hall in the middle of the elf hill had been thoroughly polished for the occasion. The floor was washed with moonshine and the walls rubbed with witches' fat. This made them shine with many colors, like a tulip petal. The kitchen was full of frogs on spits, stuffed snake skins and salads of toadstool spawn, mouse snouts and things which are good for the appetite. Then there was lemonade made by the marsh witch and sparkling wine from elfish vaults. Among the kickshaws were rusty nails and church window panes.

"The old elf king wore his golden crown polished with pounded slate pencil. It was a head boy's pencil, too, and they are very hard to get, you know. In the bedroom they hung up fresh curtains and fixed them with the slime of snails. Yes, indeed! It is no wonder that the lizard family heard a humming and a buzzing down in the elf hill. 'Now we will fumigate with horsehair and pig's bristles. Then I can do no more,' said the old elf servant."

"Oh, daddy, please go on!" begged Evelyn.

Then daddy kissed Jack and Evelyn good night.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel Waves the Danger Signals, but Ralph is Too Blindly in Love to See Them.

"After I have given the work a three months' trial and we have found that everything is mutually satisfactory and is likely to be permanent, with the prospect of a good salary, we can be married at once, can't we?" Ralph Gordon caught the hand of the girl at his side in his own.

"What, live in that little town?" asked Ethel Mertage disdainfully.

"Why, if the town gives us our living we will naturally have to live in it," replied Ralph, smiling.

"But why do you get your living there? There is plenty of business in cities," replied Ethel with conviction.

"I might suggest to the Scott-Frazee Co. that they move their manufacturing plant to a larger place," laughed Ralph. "I am sure they would want to when I told them that you objected to living in Fairport."

"Well, I guess the Scott-Frazee Co. is not the only business firm in the world," pouted Ethel, looking archly into the glowing face above her.

"But they offer me the most money, Puss, and money is a necessity for such a luxury-loving little creature as you."

"But what could we do with money in a slow little town?" purred the girl, leaning her head on his shoulder.

Ralph threw back his head and laughed aloud. "From what I have been able to observe of your habits, I should say that you would not find it difficult to get rid of money even in a small place."

"You know what I mean, Stupid." She drew away from him. "There would be no theatre, no opera, no big parties, no——"

"There would be the picture show," interrupted Ralph, teasingly. "You are fond of movies."

She tossed her pretty head and ignored the interruption.

"There is no use of having lovely party dresses with no place to wear them," she continued.

"Don't you care enough for me to give up some of these things in order to be with me?" asked Ralph, becoming serious.

"Love in a cottage never exactly appealed to me." She looked straight into his eyes. "I have an idea I would not be very attractive even to you without my setting."

"Your setting! Why, your setting would be your home." Ralph looked anxiously at her. "I had not planned to have your nest a cottage. If there is nothing there to suit I would build a house for you."

"I'd like that." Ethel's face lighted up. "And if we were married soon I could begin having my showers and getting my clothes ready. All the girls will be envious. They are crazy about you." Ethel did not add that the attitude of the girls toward Ralph constituted one of his chief attractions in her eyes.

"I shall go next week," added her lover, after a pause.

"So soon? I do not want you to go so soon," pouted the girl.

"But I must." The tone was final. She had learned what that tone meant, so said no more.

Temperance

NEWS AND VIEWS

Conducted by

THE W. C. T. U.

That evidence is in the possession of the federal government showing that the real censors of moving pictures in this country are the organized brewers and liquor distillers, is the startling statement made by the North American of Philadelphia.

It goes on to say that "the government evidence shows that one of the most important concessions made to the brewers and distillers in return for their political corruption funds is the control of the moving picture censors in twenty-seven States, including Pennsylvania.

"This evidence further shows that this control has been exercised to suppress picture displaying the demoralizing effects of beer and rum, and even pictures preaching temperance lessons.

"All reference to drunkenness as a vice and every other motion picture demonstration which might hurt the distillers is and has been censored ruthlessly.

"How the brewers and liquor dealers control the moving picture censors has been traced through the 'standards' adopted by the various boards of censors. The 'standards' are declared to have been dictated by the brewers and liquor dealers so far as their business is concerned.

"The 'standard' excuse made by all State censors for shielding the liquor traffic against moving picture exposures is that it is not wholesome or edifying for children to view exhibitions of drunkenness or its sordid results. Under this pretense of shielding the children, the liquor-controlled censors in reality shield the liquor people from attack on their trade.

"In this connection it is shown that no censors have forbidden bar-room scenes from comics or from any pictures in which drink is merely shown as adding to the joviality of the scene. The censorship against bar-room scenes or drink has been employed almost exclusively to forbid moving picture producers from showing drink in its true light, in its debasing effects and as a vice.

"Anything tending to discredit the liquor business has almost without exception been censored by the twenty-seven liquor-controlled State censors of moving pictures. The organized brewers and liquor distillers, however, kept records of their censorship control. State censors appear even to have been anxious to notify the liquor people concerning the services they were rendering in the liquor people's fight against temperance.

"Records of the brewers and liquor people, at any rate, are filled with reports of successfully suppressed temperance pictures and equally successfully suppressed moving picture attacks on the drink habit and its results. Many of these records are now included in the government's evidence of moving picture censorship control exercised by the brewers and distillers. A glaring instance of the brewers' control was brought out at the recent Pittsburgh investigation of the brewers' political corruption funds. A moving picture firm took a film of the Pittsburgh grand jury before which the brewers were obliged to plead the constitutional privilege of not testifying because they might incriminate themselves.

"The brewers did not court publicity about their humiliating position and the film of the grand jury was promptly suppressed by the censors. Determined protest was entered by the firm which took the pictures and finally the censors and their brewery bosses reconsidered their action and, perhaps, decided that it might be unwise to show their hand so clumsily. The film, at any rate, was released by the censors."

Hon. W. N. Ferris, governer of Michigan, in the recent campaign to keep the saloons out of Mecosta county, in which is situated his home town of Big Rapids, through the columns of a local paper sent the following urgent appeal to his fellow citizens to use their vote and influence to prevent the return of saloons:

"Taxes throughout the State have increased in both wet and dry counties. Loyal and patriotic citizens are not willing to dodge legitimate taxes by putting the burden on mothers and children through saloon license fees that impoverish, degrade and contribute to crime.

"Remember that you live in Mecosta county. The most careless observer knows that our four years of dry experience have contributed to increased thrift, sobriety and a more loyal citizenship.

"Can the wets point to one valuable or decent thing that Mecosta county has lost by being dry?

"In my hundreds of personal interviews with prisoners, seventy per cent. voluntarily admit excessive use of intoxicating liquors. A large number of prisoners say, 'Drunkenness led to my downfall.' What wide-awake citizen wishes to take a chance of injuring his neighbor by encouraging the maintenance of the saloon?

"Fellow citizens, when and where has the saloon founded a school, a church or any other institution for the uplift of humanity? Where is the man or woman who gives credit to the saloon for his motive, for his inspiration to render splendid service to his family, his city and State?

"Vote dry; in other words, vote for your mother, your wife, your children, for the American home. Safety First."

WHY NOT?

CLERICUS DISCUSSES TEMPERANCE SUBJECTS

Prohibition, Local Option and Total Abstinence Considered at Meeting Here.

Prohibition, local option and total abstinence were the topics for discussion at the meeting of the Plainfield Clericus held at the home of Rev. C. H. Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest yesterday. Rev. Oscar S. Michael, of Fanwood; Rev. W. N Jones, of Perth Amboy; Rev. Edward P. Little, of Elizabeth, and Rev. Mr. Mallery led in the discussion, bringing out the various points regarding the subject.

It was the opinion of the clericus that prohibition, local option and total abstinence were to be commended; that each had excellent points which should be supported by Christian people as well as others. Following the meeting the members of the clericus were entertaind at luncheon at the home of Mrs. J. O. Stevens on Clinton avenue.

The next meeting of the clericus will be held with Mr. Michael at Fanwood on June 5. This will be the annual meeting, and officers for the coming year will be elected, after which the organization will call off further meetings until fall.

Y. W. C. A. TO ATTEND TABERNACLE SERVICES

The members of the Y. W. C. A. will meet at the association building at 7 o'clock tomorrow night, and will march together to the Tabernacle. All those who cannot meet at the association at that time will join the delegation at the door of the Tabernacle. It is understood that sixty-five of the Y. W. C. A. members are singing in the choir or taking some other active part in the meetings, and they will not be expected to leave their positions; but every other woman and girl of Plainfield and the vicinity who is in any way affiliated with the Y. W. C. A. is called to show her loyalty by her presence.

500 WOMEN IN CAMP.

To Take Two Weeks' Course of Preparedness Training.

Washington, May 2. — At Chevy Chase, Md., a few miles from the district line, 500 young women are encamped in a tented city, entering upon a two weeks' course of training to fit them for service in possible warfare.

This preparedness camp is known as the "National Service school" and is being conducted under the direction of the wives of several high officers of the army. Among those who have enlisted are young society women of Washington, New York and other cities.

OFFICIAL SCHEDULE FOR ELKS' BILLIARD TOURNAMENT ESTABLISHES A RECORD FOR ENTRIES IN PLAINFIELD

Chairman George York, of the Elks' Club billiard committee, today made public the official schedule for the tournament to be conducted during the spring months for members of the organization. Considerable interest has been manifested in billiards of late at the Watchung avenue clubhouse, and some excellent players have come to light. Constant practice has made experts out of some of those who recently broke into the game, and the contests in the tourney should be keenly fought and interesting.

The committee has allotted a list of handicaps that put all of the competitors on an even basis, the advantages running from 100 points down to 65 points. Some fine prizes have been secured as an incentive to keep up the interest throughout May, June and July, the months included in the schedule.

Never before has such a long list of good players been signed to compete in a Plainfield billiard tourney, and some of the finest cueists in the city are chalking their cues preparatory to engaging in the tourney events. The handicaps follow: Westcott, 100; Ayres, 100; Staats, 100; Boos, 100; Holden, 100; York, 90; Reed, 90; Harkins, 85; Boylan, 70; Andrews, 70; Force, 70; Townley, 70; Geiger, 75; VanEmburgh, 75; Vail, 70; Crist, 65.

FARMERS TAKE PLACE LEFT BY PLAINFIELDS

All is Now Quiet Along the City Baseball League Circuit Following Meeting.

Final settlement of the controversy existing over the vacancy occasioned in the City Baseball League circuit by the sudden withdrawal of the Plainfield A. A. came up at a meeting of the organization last night and resulted in a franchise being authorized for the Farmer A. C., a club that filled in last Saturday at a moment's notice and made the playing of a complete schedule of games possible on the opening date. President Walter C. Dobbins, who presided at the meeting, explained the necessity for immediate action regarding this matter and urged the delegates of the various clubs to arrive at a decision last night as to what club would succeed the Plainfield A. A.

Considerable comment has been going the rounds during the past few days regarding the possibility of Dunellen being brought into the circuit and the agitation came to a head last night when Warry McLaughlin, the veteran twirler who is looking after the destinies of the Dunellen club, appeared at the meeting. McLaughlin came up with the expectation of seeing Lou Dixon, his magnate partner, there to, but Lou failed to show up. As a result McLaughlin declined to present a formal application fof admittance and the selection naturally rested exclusively with the Farmers. This organization had previously filed an application and has been on "pins and needles" for weeks past anxiously awaiting an opportunity to leap to the fore.

Little other business was transacted at last night's session other than to receive reports from managers of Saturday's games, all returns being indicative of a good start and foretelling a prosperous season. Hope Chapel officials announced that Hand, Roseberry and Maritz had been dropped from their list of eligible players and that the names of Millar, Overland and Porter had been substituted. Clinton Avenue will use Dilts instead of Morely and Lou Dixon replaces his brother John on the Tabs.

The list of places filed by the Farmers follows: Ryan, Campbell, Garrison, Kachelries, Burns, Marsh, Randolph, Nichols, A. Anderson, N. Anderson, Ford, Frille, Stites, Jaeger and Morely. The official scorer is P. Leigh.

PLAINFIELD TENNIS STARS INVITED TO TAKE PART

Forty-three of the leading women tennis players, including Miss Natalie Farley and Miss Edna Wildey, of this city, have been invited to compete in the third annual tournament at the Pelham Country Club, at Pelham Manor, which will start on Tuesday, May 23. The entries close on Saturday, May 20.

The events will be women's singles, women's doubles and mixed doubles. The singles will start on May 23, the doubles on May 24, and the mixed doubles on May 25.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON WILL TRY TO "COME BACK" IN BOX

Christy Mathewson, who for many seasons was the Giants' mainstay in the box, has been so much encouraged during the last few days with his work in practice that he has decided to try out his arm against the Boston Braves at the Polo Grounds on Thursday. Mathewson was unable to pitch much last season because of neuritis in the back of his left shoulder. He has been undergoing a course of treatment for some time, and believes that the disorder has been eliminated.

Hereafter the National League games at the Polo Grounds will begin at 3:40 instead of 3:30. The change is made because a newly-scheduled express from the downtown district arrives at the grounds at 3:35.

SHIFTS MAY STRENGTHEN N. P. H. S. FOR WESTFIELD

Westfield High School will be the opponents of North Plainfield High School tomorrow afternoon on Hyde Field for the first time this season and in six years. The boroughites were forced to cancel the first contest, due to the fact that they could not muster enough men during vacation. The local nine has apparently struck its stride if the manner in which it performed in the last two contests is to be taken as a criterion. The borough players are anxious to meet this aggregation as an opportunity to compare its strength with that of Plainfield High School will be given, the city team defeating the Mt. Ararat nine lately by a score of 12 to 11.

Several switches have been made in the lineup of the boroughites which have tended to strengthen it materially. Mair, who was catching at the beginning of the season, has been removed to first base, where he fills that position admirably, while Andy McDonough has been sent behind the plate, where he is holding up the receiving end in great shape. Peter Van Mater and Al Seidel are sharing the vacancy in right field to perfection. Dilts will once more be in the box for the Maroon and Black team, while Dixey will do the honors for the visitors.

N. P. H. S. TRIMS HIGH BRIDGE BUT IT TOOK FOUR LONG YEARS TO DO IT

Now the Boroughites Are Ready to "Close Shop"—Old Rivals' Star Hurler Didn't Have a Thing the North Plainfielders Couldn't Hit—Dawe Started Game With a Double Decker and Trio of Boroughites Crossed the Pan in First Canto.

After a conquest of four years, North Plainfield High School invaded High Bridge yesterday afternoon and came home victorious by the score of 12 to 5. The delivery of Dorland was hit to all corners of the lot.

Dorland has pitched the last three years for the up-State team. His previous victories over North Plainfield teams and the record of four straight games which he had established for the present season did not disconcert the borough players in the slightest. In the first session they mangled his delivery for four hits, including a double by Dawe, the leadoff man, which were responsible for three runs.

"Iron Man" Dilts reigned supreme in the box for the visitors, the local twirler never exerting himself. Only five hits were garnered from his delivery, two of which came in the last two innings.

Seen and Heard on the Street

Energetic woodpecker, boring into an old tree at Arlington avenue and Arlington place with a noise not unlike that of a compressed air rivetting machine, drawing a curious crowd of watchers and causing many inquisitive rubbernecks to call out from nearby houses what it was all about. It happened Sunday afternoon at 5:50.

Local man who came off a train from New York chaperoning a lovely "bun," Sunday afternoon, mistaking the front steps of the North Avenue station for a boudoir and enjoying a two-hour nap before an unkind friend aroused him from his dreams to chase him home.

Positive evidence that the importation of Greeks has been curtailed by the Balkan War when the Hellenese proprietor of a North avenue bootblack parlor has to hire a colored man to help him out.

Devoted young suitor who comes all the way from South Manchester, Conn., to call on a North Plainfield girl appearing Saturday minus a moustache that he had been cultivating for many months because said North Plainfield young woman had remarked on a previous visit that Jersey girls detested "fur-bearing animals."

Overheard Saturday afternoon at the ball game between the T. A. B. S. and Baptist teams on the West End avenue grounds: First young lady rooter: "Goodness, I wish I could see the Giants play this afternoon." Second young lady rooter: "Why, my dear, what do you know about machinery?"

Sinking into a comfortable seat in a West Front street store yesterday noon, and forgetting for a moment all thoughts of the attack on Verdun, the Mexican fiasco and the Dublin uprising, "Cleve" Howard unblushingly relieved his mind of the following: "A friend of mine was to make a visit in a distant city, but owing to a railroad accident was compelled to send the following telegram at the last moment: 'Cannot come; wash out on the line!' The man receiving the telegram thought the operator had neglected to space his words properly and sent this message in return: 'Buy another shirt and come anyway.'" When the stupefied audience had recovered its equilibrium, "Cleve" was hurrying out of sight with a malicious grin spreading all over his features.

JUNIOR JOTTINGS

By "S. A. B. G."

"Brud" Deady is a mite of a lad whose one ambition in life is to pastime with the major leaguers. "Brud" is an outfielder by choice and can eat up flies as readily as Sam Crawford.

Barney Sachar wishes to inform the public that he still retains his batting eye and is willing to lend his ability to the Hebrew A. C., whenever those notables desire to make use of him. In other words, Barney is unconditionally released by someone.

They do say that "Hub" Hickey is a good baseball player. He is recorded as being an infielder of note and good with the willow. He sports the blue-and-white of St. Mary's and is a comparatively new man on the local lots.

Cyril Poling has a baseball team which he calls the P. A. N. S. This team is only half a "junior" aggregation and should get only half mention in this column. But as the mainstay of the outfit is Joe Newell, a junior pitcher, comment seems necessary. Poling has centered about Newell a classy bunch of artists, and is already booking games. The Pans will use Hope Common for all home games.

Bill Reasoner regrets that his team lost the first two battles engaged in. Bill cannot assign any reason for the double defeat and is not one to produce alibis. Inasmuch as Bill took upon himself the role of pinch hitter and failed, he is of the opinion that he has no right to comment.

Francis Connolly, who would rather play baseball than eat, is responsible for the statement that he will lead a band of youthful balltossers in this year's Parker Field League. Francis states that he has gathered together a formidable band and that the team will be a uniformed one.

The lads living in the vicinity of Laramie Park have reorganized their baseball team and have chosen Morris Roddy as a leader. This team will also enter the Parker Field League and should be a first division contender.

Louis Feiring is now a manager. His team is considering a jump to the majors and will retain Lou as manager.

"Ipper" Witteman is improving as a catcher. Until very recently "Ipp" had a habit of standing to one side of the plate. Everything the twirler pitched was a ball and no one placed the blame on "Ipp" until he discovered the mistake himself. Now, they say, that each and every ball pitched to the diminutive catcher is a strike.

Our Hall of Fame for today contains the name of Bill McCann. Bill is too young to realize the intricate side of the game, but he is about ready to assume control of the West Third street stars.

Look for this feature on Wednesday. Submit any suggestions you deem fit, Mr. Manager.

NELSON BACK IN THE GAME.

Walter Nelson, former Rutgers and Plainfield catcher, returned to backstopping duties as a Rutgers representative on the alumni team against the varsity yesterday afternoon. Bob Searle did the pitching. Among other alumni who played were Twing, Gillman, Howlett, Haney, Steedle and Al Leeds.

WEIGHT FOR PRICE RULE SUGGESTED FOR CADDIES.

There has been so much talk about the undue loading up of small caddies with heavy bags of clubs, that perhaps it would be a good thing to have a weighing machine at the first tee, where the weight of the clubs could be determined, the caddies being paid in proportion to the weight carried. It is manifestly unfair to pay a caddy who carries a bag with ten clubs in it no more than the boy who has only five clubs to carry.

The appeal that has been made to club members and competitors in tournaments not to load down caddies would not be necessary if players had to pay according to weight. Then self-interest would induce them to take out the clubs they did not need.

Once down Garden City way, a certain golfer had about twelve clubs in his bag as he started a round. "Great heavens, man," remarked a friend, "you don't want all those clubs. You won't have occasion to use them."

"Maybe not," was the reply, "but it gives one an air of importance to have a dozen or so of clubs. Onlookers won't know I never use but half of them."

This sort of chap is just the one who would be reached by a caddy based on the weight of the bag and clubs. There is a lot of this sort of imposition on caddies, and it would receive a decided check if the weight idea were adopted as the basis of compensation.

DAREDEVILS ENTERED.

Twenty-one of the fastest automobile drivers have entered for the Metropolitan Trophy race at Sheepshead Bay on May 13. The list of competitors assures a brilliant opening of the 1916 Eastern racing season on that date. In addition to the 150-mile event there will be three other races, the Queen's Cup, at fifty miles; the Coney Island Cup at twenty miles, and a consolation race for the William E. Kemble Cup, at ten miles, handicapped for non-winners.

CO-ED BASEBALL RECORD.

Miss Gladys Palmer, of Oak Park, Ill., a co-ed at the University of Wisconsin, yesterday threw a baseball 217 feet 6 inches, surpassing the intercollegiate record for the event by 14 feet 6 inches. The former record was held by a Vassar co-ed. Miss Theresa McCullough, of Plainfield made a similar throw of 150 feet at the feminine athletic meet held here last fall.

COUNCIL WILL NOT MOVE EMBANKMENT

Resolution to Improve Midway Avenue Fails by One Vote.

An amendment to the budget ordinance carrying on appropriation of $2,500 to be used in removing the old railway embankment from Midway avenue, between Emerson and Leland avenues, failed of passage by one vote at last night's meeting of the Common Council.

Councilman Sminck introduced the of the finance committee, presented the budget ordinance for first and second readings, and in speaking for it he said that the city was guilty of maintaining an eyesore and a nuisance in this embankment. He congratulated the finance committee on the work that had been done in making up the various estimates and appropriations for the coming year, but asked that his appropriation be legalized. There were five votes for the amendment, which was a majority of those attending, but lacked one of being enough to pass. Those who voted for it were President Blatz, Councilmen Bird, Cose, Graves, and Sminck. Councilmen Edgar and Cox were absent.

The buldget ordinance was passed on the second reading.

The finance committee reported that the estimate for street lighting for the year of 1916 was $9,500.

By resolution the salary of the overseer of the poor was raised from $66.66 a month to $75, effective April 1.

The resignations of Patrolmen Neylon, Strayer and McIlyre were accepted.

A communication from the National Septic Process Company telling of contest suits touching on patents covering the system to be installed in the purifying plant here and asking for an appropriation to defend was referred to the corporation counsel for a report back to the finance committee.

A resolution authorizing a $30,000 bond issue to pay for the East End school was passed. These bonds are to bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent., payable semi-annually, and will fall due between 1955 and 1965.

The report of the inspector of building showed that 28 permits were issued in April.

The report of the overseer of the poor showed an expenditure of $782.48 for last month.

The report of City Judge De Meza showed that 310 cases were tried during the last quarter and that fines amounting to $289 were collected and turned over to the city treasurer.

The report of the street commissioner showed that nine permits were granted during April.

There were no taxpayers present to protest against the extension of Stelle avenue.

The application of A. H. Sears for the city to lay a storm sewer on Randolph road, near Arlington avenue, was received and referred to the sewer committee.

W. F. Gano sent a communication to the Council urging that Williams street be accepted as a public thoroughfare and macadamized.

Upon motion of Chairman Cose the application of the Park Avenue Auto Supply Company to install a gasoline tank in front of 330 Park avenue was granted, while that to install a pump was refused.

A request from Carrie De Graff, of 998 Arlington avenue, that she be permitted to move her home to an adjoining lot was referred to the street committee, as was the request of John E. Dunn that the city vacate Oxford place. Mr. Dunn owns all property along this street.

Mrs. H. D. Hibbard and other officers of the Kenyon Garden Association asked that the sewer on Stelle avenue be extended 200 feet so as to reach a bungalow that is to be built on the property of that association. This was referred to the sewer committee.

A notification from the local lodge of Elks that its officers would appear before Judge Connolly Tuesday to ask for a renewal of license was received and referred to the license committee.

Upon rsolution of the finance committee $100 was appropriated to be used by Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., in the decoration of graves on Memorial Day.

Application of the Netherwood Residents' Association for the installation of a light on Berkeley avenue, between Denmark road and Park terrace, and the moving of one on Helena avenue was referred to the lights committee.

The Walter Scott Company was granted permission to install a gasoline tank in front of its property corner of South avenue and Richmond street.

Request of Willard H. Cook, of 220 Morris street, to connect with the West End sewer extension was referred to the sewer committee.

Application of the Standard Investment Company to lay 573 feet of sewer from Front street along Emma place and connect with the main sewer was granted, the company to pay all expenses of the work.

The Council adjourned to May 22.

LIDGATE MAKING GOOD.

Eugene Lidgate, the popular Fanwood ball player and well-known here, has gotten in soft with the fans of Media, one of the towns in the Delaware County League, already. In the league opening, Saturday, "Lid's" two-bagger brought in the winning runs, and later in the fracas, his single was responsible for another. In his third trip to the plate he walked, thus getting a perfect batting average for the day. He scored two runs himself, made eight assists and did some nice pegging to second base. From present indications his berth as Media backstop is assured as long as he wants it.

U. S. TROOPS NOT TO QUIT VILLA HUNT

Demands of Obregon to Be Ignored, Says Secretary Baker.

Washington, May 2.—The Administration's policy in Mexico has been strengthened by the decision not to withdraw troops at the present time, despite the request of the Carranza government. Secretary of War Baker would not admit today that new instructions have been sent to General Scott to guide him in his conference with Obregon, but it was made clear that the administration is definitely resolved to continue its pursuit of Villa for the present at least.

New Mexican Mining Law.

Mexico City, May 2.—Mexico's new mining law which has been awaited for months by holders of Mexican properties was promulgated last night by a decree issued by General Carranza and calls for a general increase in taxation on all large properties. The new tax goes into effect July 1, while an export tax will take immediate effect on all bulion shipped out of the country.

DEPICT THE LIFE OF RUSSIAN WOMEN

Miss Elizabeth Reynolds, of Columbia University, Addresses Club.

"Great Russian Women" was the subject of the lecture given by Miss Elizabeth Reynolds, of New York, at the meeting of the literature section of the Monday Afternoon Club yesterday afternoon in the parish house of the Congregational church. Miss Reynolds, who is a member of the faculty of Columbia University, proved to be an interesting speaker and held the attention of her listeners throughout her discourse. Thoroughly familiar with the subject in hand, Miss Reynolds depicted the life of the Russian woman from the earliest days until the present time. After graduating from the University of Paris, Miss Reynolds spent a number of years in Russia, thereby learning of the customs through her contast with the inhabitants.

In the early days of the great empire, the conditions of living among the people were of the poorest and uncivilized nature. At the time of the Turkish influence brought to bear upon the government, the women lived in greater seclusion and it was not until the accession of Catherine the Great that a wider sphere opened for the women of Russia. It was she who built the first college for women and urged greater educational studies. The same uniforms worn by the students of the college of that dayare still in existence in the institution today, which is still standing and a source of much usefulness. Concluding her talk, Miss Reynolds described the modern woman of Russia whose ideals are of just as lofty a nature as that of the modern American woman.

The lecture yesterday afternoon was the last of the seasons' series given by the Monday Afternoon Club.

JOSEPH T. WADSWORTH WEDS SOUTHERN GIRL

Cards were received in Plainfield yesterday announcing the marriage of Miss Frances Aneta Dunn, niece of Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Williamson, to Joseph Tilney Wadsworth, son of William B. Wadsworth, of Plainfield. The ceremony took place on Saturday at the home of the bride's aunt at Mount Dora, Florida, and was attended by a number of relatives and friends of the couple. After a trip the couple will reside in New York city.

Mr. Wadsworth is well-known here, where he lived for many years. His bride is also well-known in the South, being a members of a family socially prominent there.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE PRIZE GOES TO MISS MULLIN

The monthly business meeting of the Women's League was held in St. Joseph's Hall last night, a large number of members being in attendance. Mrs. J. E. Bailey, the president, presided. Announcement was made that a testimonial euchre will be held Thursday night under the club's auspices for the benefit of Carman Emmons.

During the evening, Miss Martha Emmons recited "The American Soldier" in an original manner which won much applause, and Mrs. James Harper read an interesting paper on "Mother." The award for the prize essay which the league offered for the best paper on the motto of the organization, "After Labor, Victory," went to Miss Ellen Mullin. The decision was made by Rev. Father P. J. Hart, pastor of the church.

RASORES HOLD ANNUAL MEETING AND ELECTS

At the annual meeting of the Rasores held this morning at the home of Mrs. W. A. Holliday, on Park avenue, the following officers were reelected for the coming year: President, Mrs. I. C. Pierson; vice-presidents, Mrs. H. E. Bowen and Mrs. L. N. Lovell; and secretary and treasurer, Mrs. H. R. Halloway. The report of the last-named showed the club to be in a flourishing condition

The Rasores was organized in this city in 1886 for the purpose of literary study. The membership is limited to thirty-five, although there is an honorary membership also included. The members have met every Tuesday morning since the club's organization thirty years ago, the meetings each week being held at the home of one of the members. Although the organization is strictly a literary one, the members have had outside sympathetic interests and have frequently donated generously toward local and foreign charities. The meeting this morning was presided over by the president, Mrs. I. C. Pierson.

LAST SAD RITES FOR GEORGE E. STILLMAN

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, the funeral of George Edward Stillman, who died Saturday noon, was held this afternoon at his late home at 827 West Sixth street. The service was in charge of Rev. Edwin Shaw, of the Seventh Day Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Henry T. Arnold, of Norwich, Conn., a brother-in-law of the deceased. Two selections, "Lead Kindly Light" and "Abide With Me," were sung by a male quartet composed of Charles Potter Titsworth, Roy Titsworth, Dr. O. B. Whitford and Ernest Whitford.

The floral tributes were many and numerous, two of the contributions being large set pieces. One of them was from the local Odd Fellows, of which Mr. Stillman was a member, and the other from the pattern makers' department of the Potter Press Works, where the deceased was foreman for many years. Burial took place in Hillside cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: William Stillman, Dr. H. M. Maxson, Asa F. Randolph, Charles Dunham, Robert Meeker and J. B. Higgins.

GEORGE TOTTEN GIVEN 60 DAYS IN BORO COURT

Charged with taking liquor to Mrs. William Minerd, of 33 Harmony street, who is on the "blacklist" and under probation, George Totten, 37 years old, of Somerset street, was sent to Somerville for sixty days and in addition placed on the "blacklist" by Mayor William L. Smalley, who sat in the borough court this morning.

The complaint against Totten was made by Mrs. Minerd's mother, Mrs. Charles Hope, who lives across the street from her daughter. The specific charge was that while Mrs. Minerd's husband was at work yesterday afternoon Totten took whiskey into her home and gave her so much of it that when he left she was in such a state that she attacked her husband when he came home, scratching his fact and chasing him out of the house.

REV. J. J. ALLEN ACCEPTS CALL TO HEMPSTEAD, N. Y.

Rev. J. J. Allen, who has been pastor of the Baptist church, South Plainfield, since 1909, which year he left Crozer Theological Seminary, has resigned to become pastor of the First Baptist church at Hempstead, N. Y. Mr. Allen is the son of Rev. and Mrs. E. R. Allen, of Easton, Pa., and he has three brothers who are in the Baptist ministry.

NATIONAL AID PREPARATIONS.

Further steps toward the formation of a Plainfield and North Plainfield chapter of the National Special Aid Society for American Preparedness were taken this morning, when the executive committee appointed last week met at the home of Mrs. E. G. Fraser, on Park avenue, to adopt ways and means. A large number of names were added to the charter role, and plans for a general meeting at which time officers will be elected and permanent organization effected were discussed. The date of this meeting will be announced later. The membership is to be democratic in character and a general invitation is extended to everyone in any part of the city to join in the movement.

FUNERAL OF GEORGE KREGER.

The funeral of George Kreger, the twelve-year-old boy who died in Muhlenberg Hospital as the result of injuries received in an acident at South Plainfield Saturday night, was held at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Kreger, of 422 Spruce street, yesterday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, and was attended by many relatives and friends of the family. There were numerous handsome floral tributes. Burial was made in Evergreen cemetery, six of the little victim's classmates from his Sunday-school class in Hope chapel acting as pall bearers. These were Walter Penny, Edward Stoeckle, Jack McQueen Kenneth Vail, Jacob Schlick and Albert Robbins.

P. H. S. AT SOMERVILLE.

Plainfield High School's baseball team will play its first game in over ten days tomorrow afternoon at Somerville, when it lines up against the High School team of that place. Practically the entire squad will make the trip, and everybody will get a chance. The game is not expected to be a very hard one for P. H. S., as Somerville has been beaten this year by several teams Plainfield has trimmed.

THE PHOTO PLAY THAT MADE GERALDINE FARRAR A BRIDE

UNDER the soft glow of an office lamp four persons sat last summer in the quiet of a still California night. Before them on the desk was a photoplay manuscript over which they talked in low tones.

"This would be a wonderful role for me," said the single woman in the group. She was Geraldine Farrar, world famous prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera House, who was talking. She continued, "And I am obliged to you, sir, for the suggestion you have given."

As she arose from the desk the three men also arose. The tallest and broadest of the three was Lou-Tellegen, the famous star who twice toured this country as leading man with Madame Sarah Bernhardt, but who was at the Lasky studios appearing as the star in Paramount productions. The other two were Cecil B. De Mille, director general of the Lasky Feature Play Company and his brother, William C. De Mille the noted dramatist and chief of the photodramatic staff of the picture producing firm. The manuscript over which they had discussed, was a photodramatic version of the famous Spanish tragedy of peasant life, "Maria Rosa."

This was the beginning of a romance which the whole world turned for the moment from its news of dreadful war and hurried business and stopped to contemplate with pleasure. Several weeks ago in New York City, Geraldine Farrar became Mrs. Lou-Tellegen at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Farrar.

"Maria Rosa" was the photoplay that made Geraldine Farrar a bride. It is to be shown in a thousand Paramount motion picture theatres this spring.

It was a strange coincidence that this should be so. Following his extraordinary success as an actor in Madame Bernhardt's company, Lou-Tellegen, by reason of the great favor that had been shown him in his tours of the United States with the famous actress, decided to learn the English language sufficiently well to appear as a star on the American stage. Thus, one year after he had made his decision, he had so completely mastered English as to realize his ambition. His debut on the English speaking stage in New York was a brilliant success. His play was a Spanish drama entitled, "Maria Rosa." Critics and public heralded him at once as one of the leading romantic actors.

When Lou-Tellegen went to the Lasky studios last spring, to appear in picturizations of "The Explorer" and "The Unknown," he there met Miss Farrar. When he heard that Miss Farrar was to appear in a photoplay version of "Maria Rosa," he volunteered his assistance to her and the other artists. At the age of eighteen he was graduated with highest honors from the school of acting at the Theatre Francais in Paris, and at twenty-four he appeared as Madame Bernhardt's leading man. From time to time reports reached this country regarding the success of this young actor and his extraordinary histrionic powers. There was a good deal of anticipation in Madame Bernhardt's tour several years ago when he accompanied her here and appeared in a coast to coast tour with her. A year later he again played with her in a long vaudeville tour. His debut as an English speaking actor on the American stage was an event in New York of considerable dramatic and social import.

GERALDINE FARRAR and LOU TELLEGEN

Permission Lasky-Paramount.

Unlike the fiery character of the irrepressible "Carman," "Maria Rosa" affords Miss Farrar a role far more sympathetic than the wild Spanish girl in which she has achieved such extraordinary success.

Maria Rosa is a peasant girl who sells in the village market place the produce of her father's farm. Two young men are rivals for her affections; Andres who she loves and Ramon who she has never regarded except in the light of a good friend and true. Andres and Ramon are intimate friends but the fact that Maria Rosa shows a preference for Andres, brings forth all the hatred of jealousy in Ramon's heart. One day to avenge an insult to Maria Rosa administered by a fishmonger in the market, Ramon kills him. This he does, however, with the knife that belongs to Andres and leaving this bit of evidence behind, Ramon flees from the scene and stands by, a would be innocent spectator, when Andres is arrested and sentenced to life imprisonment.

With his rival out of the way, Ramon lays siege to Maria Rosa's heart but she, believing explicity in the innocence of Andres, knowing that on the night of the crime he passed the evening with her, refuses to accept Ramon's advances and swears to marry no one so long as Andres lives. From crime then, Ramon turns to forgery, bringing Maria Rosa a letter alleged to have been written by the prison authorities, announcing Andres' death in jail. With this last barrier broken away, Maria Rosa still refuses to give her hand to Ramon. Finally, on subterfuge, he gains admittance to her house at night, frightens her and when he hears the townspeople passing the door, leaves her house, thus compromising her in the eyes of those who know her well. Although innocent in thought or deed, Maria Rosa cannot withstand their glances. The wedding is arranged and the wedding party return to Maria Rosa's house for a merry breakfast.

Meanwhile, within the prison walls, Andres suffers in silence. One day, when distinguished visitors are going through the institution, Andres saves a child, the daughter of the keeper, from death at the risk of his own life. For this valiant deed and the fact that his record was perfect, Andres is pardoned and set free. He returns to the village and goes to Maria Rosa's house a few minutes before the wedding party arrives from the church. He secretes himself in Maria Rosa's room into which she flees for a moment of prayer before the feast begins. There she and Andres meet; Maria Rosa believing that she has seen the ghost of her true love. Realizing that some terrible mistake has been made, Maria Rosa persuades Andres to leave with all haste and bring the village priest. When he has left, she returns to the breakfast room, where after shamming merriment, she and Ramon are left alone at last. Ramon has been drinking heavily in celebration of his marriage and victory. Cleverly, Maria Rosa wins the admission from him that it was he who killed the fishmonger and allowed Andres to suffer and it was he who brought her the forged note of Andres' death. Enraged she strikes him with a knife and kills him, and as he slowly dies, members of her family rush in to learn from Ramon's own lips that his death was caused by himself as the result of an accident.

The author of the book is Angel Grimera, a noted Spanish dramatist who is said to have obtained his story of "Maria Rosa" from an actual happening in one of the Spanish provinces Miss Farrar appeared in only two former photo plays, both released o. the Paramount program. They were "Carmen" and "Temptation." At the close of the operatic season in New York she will again go to the Lasky studios where she will appear in a number of other Paramount pictures.

The Biederwolf Evangelistic Services

Will revive interest in Bible Reading in Plainfield as never before and regardless of sect, creed or faith. A universal reading of the Bible is bound to make for better citizenship, is bound to make for a plainer, stronger, simpler, honester speech in daily life, and a higher standard of ethics in the dealings of men. A return to Bible reading in these stressful times of world disturbance is needed as never before in our history and is bound to add to the moral and mental equipoise of this entire nation.

Big Print Red Letter Bibles

All the Words and Sayings of Christ Printed in Red

This Book of Books

This Bible—this miraculous Bible—this Book of All Books—luminous with the light that dwelleth not on land or sea—this noblest and most beautiful Thing in all the world—what is it—whence cometh it—what means it?

It has made and unmade Nations. It has uprooted Kingdoms and Empires. It has diverted the mighty tides of History. It has crumpled ancient Faiths and Superstitions. Because of it fell Pagan Rome. The antique Systems of India and the Far East have bowed their heads to its enlightened sway.

China and the Orient now first awaken from their sleep of thrice a thousand years, and follow their sister nations of the Occident—whose feet are guided by one sole lamp—the sacred flame of which was kindled by the inspired Hebrew Prophets, and fed for all time by the Lord and Master of the Golden Rule.

Only ignorance scoffs at the Bible! The greatest rulers—the greatest statesmen—the greatest scholars—writers—orators—scientists—soldiers—and the untold millions of the Common People, whose collective genius outweighs them all—have thrilled to its Divine Wisdom.

Its lyrics of unfathomable tenderness—its orations of compelling potency—its contemplative prose of preternatural grandeur—have never been equalled. Its emotional depths and its intellectual heights make it the one and only Book of Books, vouchsafed for the guidance of mankind throughout the ages.

WILSON DEFENDS WAR FOR HONOR

Tells Women Campers Sacrifice Is Glorious.

Washington, May 2.—President Wilson has spoken to the country for the first time on the glories instead of the horrors of war. In an address before 500 women who have voluntarily entered camp at Chevy Chase for a course of "first aid" instruction the president told of the spiritual regeneration that he believed would come upon the United States should it be compelled to make the great sacrifices entailed by participation in war.

"God forbid that we should be drawn into war," said the president with impressive solemnity, "but if we should be America would seem once more to shake herself out of a dream and say, 'Did any man deem that we were asleep? Did any man deem that we had forgotten the traditions of America? Did any man deem that he could tamper with the honor and integrity of the United States? And in the great voice of national enthusiasm which would be raised all the world would stand once more thrilled to hear the voice of the new world asserting the standards of justice and liberty."

Never before had the president publicly spoken of war without emphasizing the horror he felt at the thought of it. Never before had he publicly admitted that out of America's participation in the struggle there might come a reawakening.

In his speech the president gave evidence of a significant change in his mental attitude since the early days of his administration, when he had declared with uplifted hand to an aged woman who visited him in his office, "Madam, there never will be a war while I am president."

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through you hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy, and you look years younger. Wyet's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat Also Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

VAN ARSDALE

Labeled on your summer shoes. For twenty-nine years the name "Van Arsdale" has meant shoes of assured quality; the significance of this to you is that prices of all shoe materials have been advancing on account of the war. The end is not yet in sight, and quality standards have in most cases depreciated as a result. Therefore, it's more important than ever to stick to shoes of known reliability.

"Van Arsdale" shoes are faithfully toeing the mark of quality, and prices will not be advanced only when absolutely necessary.

'THE MYSTIC ROSE' STILL BIGGER HIT

Capacity Audience Witnesses Second Performance of Elks' Production.

PARTS ARE WELL TAKEN

Enthusiastic Applause Accorded Each Solo Number—Ballet of the Flowers and Butterflies Even Better Than on Previous Night.

The Plainfield Theatre was crowded to its capacity last night, when the second performance of the Japanese-American light opera, "The Mystic Rose," was presented by local talent under the auspices of Plainfield Lodge of Elks. Every one of the principals did even better than on the previous night, the newness and certain amount of uneasiness that characterizes "premieres" having been safely passed over. Encores were given after every solo and dance number and the beautiful finale of the ballet of the flowers and butterflies. The applause was deafening. It was necessary to raise and lower the curtain five times before the assemblage was satisfied.

Miss Juliette Brancati, interpreting the leading soprano role, again registered an emphatic hit. Each of her numbers made a great impression and her duet with William J. Tallamy scored one of the biggest successes of the evening. Miss Josephine Murphy's breezy comedy evoked roars of laughter as it did Monday night and encores were given Miss Marie C. Schaefer, Miss Sadie Lee, William J. Tallamy, John J. Campbell, Joseph C. Martin, Harry N. Blimm, Edward J. Harding, Jr., William G. Smith and Charles F. Kreger. William C. Mulvey, who plays the part of "Spots," the detective, was an important factor in the fun making, delivering his lines and acting the role of a "soft shoe man" like one to the manner born. Others who were distinctive in the principal parts were Miss Bessie Gunselman, Samuel R. Taverner and Master Robert Blair.

The third and concluding performance of the opera is scheduled for tonight, the advance sale indicating that another large audience will be in attendance. Tonight's gathering will include a delegation of thirty Elks from Dover Lodge, No. 782, who will make the trip to this city by automobile. Robert P. Skilling, the composer and producer of "The Mystic Rose," was warmly congratulated last night both

200 WOMEN ENJOY NOON DAY LUNCHEON

Movement So Popular it May Be Made Permanent in Plainfield.

More than 200 women enjoyed the luncheon served at noon today at the First Methodist church by the women of the Park Avenue Baptist and the Seventh-Day Baptist churches in connection with the Biederwolf campaign. These lunches are becoming more popular each week. They are served on Wednesdays and Thursdays, always at the First Methodist church, but under the direction of different church organizations each week. Mrs. Brake talked to the young women in groups today as they came to dine, and there was a solo by Mr. McEwan, a song by the quartet and a short talk by Dr. Biederwolf. So popular has the movement become that there is talk of forming a Young Women's Business Association that will make the lunches permanent and form a Bible study class in connection with the weekly meetings.

This evening members of the Young Women's Christian Association will march to the Tabernacle in the body. They will meet in front of the Babcock building at 7:15, and follow the band. Tomorrow evening the young women who have been attending the luncheons and other business women will meet at the same place and the same hour and march to the Tabernacle.

MR. AND MRS. WM. EYCK RETURN FROM HONEYMOON

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Alice Day, daughter of Frank Day, of Manson place, to William Eyck, of West Fourth street. The ceremony was performed at the rectory of St. Mary's church last Thursday, Father B. N. Bogan officiating.

Immediately after the wedding the couple left for Hunterdon county, where they spent their honeymoon. They have returned and are now living at 919 West Fifth street. Mr. Eyck is a plumber in the employ of Arthur Neumann, of this city.

GERMANY TO END ALL QUIBBLING

Answer is Said to Contain Copies of Orders to Submarine Commanders.

NOTE READY FOR WIRE

Secretary Birrell, for Ireland Sends in Resignation—Zeppelins Again Raid England and Scotland—French Repulse German Assault.

New York, May 3.—A press despatch by wireless to Sayville says that the draft of Germany's answer to the note of the United States has been completed. The message says that the reply is subject to minor alterations which may result in interchanges of views between Berlin and general headquarters. It says that the attitude of Germany will be stated in clear and precise terms, and that the note will leave no room for doubt concerning the exact position assumed by Germany. It states that the note will communicate the definite nature of instruction that will be given to commanders of submarines and other data from which Washington itself can judge the situation.

Expects Reply in Few Days.

Washington, May 3.—Secretary of State Lansing today stated that he expected the German reply to the American note within a few days. This, however, was not based on any advices from Berlin.

Col. House with Wilson.

Washington, May 3.—Colonel E. M. House arrived here this morning He had breakfast at the White House with the President. All information regarding the visit was refused.

Another Zeppelin Raid.

London, May 3.—Fire from high-angle guns and British aeroplanes is believed to have damaged badly one of the German Zeppelins that took part in the raid over the northeast coast of England and the southeast coast of Scotland last night.

Crown Prince Shifts Attack.

Paris, May 3.—The War Office reported today a lull in infantry operations at Verdun, while the German Crown Prince shifted his attack farther westward to the Argonne. At La Harazee, where the French on Monday dispersed a Teuton reconnoitering party, the Germans launched an assault on the French positions. In this assault the Crown Prince's soldiers used poisonous gases in their efforts to overwhelm the French. The official communique issued this afternoon states, however, that this assault was repulsed and that the Germans suffered heavy losses. Though infantry actions at Verdun have been lacking during recent hours, violent artillery combats have continued about the positions on the Meuse river.

NETHERWOOD CHURCH GETS $1,000 BEQUEST

Susan P. Dubois, who Died in 1914, Remembers Congregation in Her Will.

New York, May 3.—An appraisal of the estate left by Susan P. Dubois, who died in Plainfield on August 2, 1914, on file in the surrogate's court, New York, today, shows that she left $59,118.82, comprising real estate in Plainfield, jewelry, furniture, stocks and bonds and various amounts in the Plainfield Trust Company and the State Trust Company, of Plainfield. There is also real estate in New York.

Property at Columbia county is left to Francis E. Dubois, son, his wife and daughter, and the use of the property at 789 Belvidere avenue, Plainfield, until the youngest child of the children of Francis E. Dubois reaches the age of 21, when the property is to be turned over to them absolutely. Mrs. Francis E. Dubois is also left jewelry.

The sum of $1,000 is left to the Netherwood Reformed church at Plainfield, provided said church erects a church building within five years after her death, otherwise it is to become a part of the residuary estate. To the following four Plainfielders is left bequests as named: William Pell, $50; Edward Pell, $100; Mary Hines and Sara McWhinney, each $50. The rest of the estate goes to Francis Dubois, the son, who, with his sister, Susan P. Dubois, are the executors.

All Eyes Are On the Capital.

Washington was never so interesting as when history is in the making. An opportunity to spend the day there or in Baltimore is afforded by special $3 excursion, Sunday, May 7, via New Jersey Central. Leaves Plainfield 1:13 a. m., May 7.—Adv.

SAYS CITY LACKS IN CIVIC PRIDE

W. L. Saunders Writes Warm Letter to the Board of Trade.

CRITICIZES THE MAYOR

He Should Be Urging a Union of the Two Municipalities, Writer Declares—Board Will Petition for Extension of Fourth Street Line.

That Plainfield is painfully lacking in civic pride was declared in a letter received last night by the Board of Trade from W. L. Saunders, chairman of the board of directors of the Ingersoll-Rand Company. The letter accompanied Mr. Saunders' check for dues to the Board, also his regrets that he could not take a more active interest in the work of the club because of business which kept him away from Plainfield so much of his time.

Mr. Saunders' reference to civic pride in Plainfield follows:

"Plainfield is painfully lacking in civic pride. This has been much impressed upon me as I journey about the world. I know of no place where the spirit of civic pride is so dull as in Plainfield. The people there do not even recognize the importance of getting together as an element of community strength and progress. To maintain a divided government is in itself a glaring exhibition of the absence of public spirit. The first thing that everyone does in order to centralize and strengthen an organization is to get together. Your mayor, though a very excellent man, able and zealous, spends his time talking about and taking action in matters of minor importance compared with the union of the two Plainfields as the first step toward greater progress."

No action was taken on the letter by the board.

A committee was named to further the organization of the Safety First Federation, and one of its duties will be to name two trustees who will represent the Board of Trade on the new organization. This committee is made up of Lamar N. Van Syckle, J. D. Loizeaux, H. W. Marshall, E. M. Laing and Jacob Zacker.

It was decided to petition the Common Council to extend the Fourth street car line to Clinton or Rock avenue so as to make a belt line; and also to urge that body to establish a uniform standard of cross walks and curbing in the city.

MRS. E. YARDE BREESE CHOSEN PRESIDENT

Anti-Suffragist Association of the State Hold Annual Meeting and Luncheon.

The annual meeting and luncheon of the New Jersey Women's Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage was held yesterday at the Hotel Astor, Newark. Two hundred and fifty representatives from various parts of the State attended the luncheon, among them being six from this city. These were: Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, Mrs. W. W. Coriell, Mrs. John Constable Moore, Mrs. Charles L. Sykes and Miss Elizabeth Smith. Mrs. E. Yarde Breese, the president of the State association, presided at the business meeting during which the following officers were elected for the coming twelve months:

President, Mrs. E. Yarde Breese; vice presidents, Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., Mrs. Garret A. Hobart, Mrs. John R. Emery, Mrs. Theodore C. Woodbury, Mrs. Thomas B. Adams, Miss Clara Vesin, Miss N. O. Joost, Mrs. Henry I. Seligman and Miss Elizabeth Ream; recording secretary, Mrs. J. Herbert Smith; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ellsworth Corbett; treasurer, Mrs. C. R. Smith.

Speeches were made by Miss Lucy Price, John A. Matthews and Mrs. Breese, the latter taking as her subject "Preparedness." A discussion of the plans for next year's campaign was held and a program laid out for each branch association.

MR. DANNER HERE WITH FRIENDS FROM NEW YORK

William H. Danner, who is to lecture at the Tabernacle this afternoon on "The Lepers of the World," arrived in Plainfield shortly before noon today and had luncheon with Dr. Biederwolf at the residence of the party. Mr. Danner was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. R. Dan Wolterdeek, of New York, and W. Hasewinkel, of South America. Mr. Wolterdeek and Mr. Hasewinkel are importers. Mrs. Wolterdeek is vice chairman of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs and is chairman of the Long Island Council.

IRISH PATRIOTS ARE EXECUTED

Pearce and Connolly Faced Firing Squad at Dawn Today.

ACCUSED OF TREASON

Court Martials Being Held Over all of Ireland—Asquith Announces That More Are to Be Punished by Great Britain.

London, May 3.—Peter Pearce, who was proclaimed provisional president of the Republic of Ireland, James Connolly, commander in chief of the rebel army, and another leader of the Irish insurrectionists were executed in Dublin this morning. The three men died before a firing squad.

Announcement of the execution of the three chief leaders of the Sinn Fein revolt was made in parliament this afternoon by Premier Asquith. Pearce, Connolly and the third victim had been tried by court martial and found guilty of treason. The death sentence was imposed and carried out at dawn. The other rebels were sentenced to terms of three years in prison, the premier stated. Court martials are now being held continuously in Dublin for the trials of Irish rebels.

FIRE CHIEF DOANE IS "FORTY-SEVEN" TODAY

Many Congratulations Are Being Received by Him on Birthday Anniversary.

Chief T. O. Doane, head of the Plainfield Fire Department, is receiving handshakes and personal messages of all kinds today because it is the anniversary of his birthday. To all inquiries as to just which one it is, the Chief only smiles and says "forty-seven." There are some who believe the genial firefighter is considerably past this mark, but the statement is acepted by others because his quick step and never-flagging energy indicates that he tells the truth in some respects.

Chief Doane was born at Barrington, Nova Scotia, and when only two years old his parents moved to Brooklyn. He was a little more than a boy when they removed to Plainfield, making their home on Rahway road, where the father, Samuel Doane, operated a farm. After returning from tre Civil War, where he served for nearly three years as a member of Company B, Eleventh New Jersey Volunteers, the young soldier joined the Plainfield Fire Department in 1865. Eleven years later he was made chief, serving from 1876 until 1878. He was re-elected in 1879 and was appointed permanent chief by the Common Council in 1888, serving continuously since that time. For the past twenty years he has acted as building inspector in conjunction with his fire-fighting duties.

It is probable that Chief Doane has a speaking acquaintance with more than half the people of Plainfield, and the other half know him by sight. He is a member of the Masonic and Elks fraternities, and at present is commander of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R. On this anniversary of his birthday he is enjoying splendid health and his hundreds of close personal friends trust that he continues to enjoy many more such active years.

INDOOR CARNIVAL.

Arrangements have been completed for the indoor carnival to be held in Columbus Auditorium Monday night, under the auspices of the Sisterhood of Temple Sholem. Music for the affair will be furnished by Suhr's orchestra and Miss Freidman and Mr. LaVere, two well known professional ballroom dancers, will demonstrate a number of the latest steps. Prize dancing will be a feature of the fete. Visiting delegations are expected from Perth Amboy, Newark, Elizabeth and Somerville.

CITY HALL PLANS LOST.

The plans of the competing architects which were shipped from New York to Plainfield on Monday and should have been here yesterday have not yet reached the city. The Express Company is endeavoring to trace them. The receipt shows that they were properly addressed and it is hoped that they will arrive during the day. They will be sent to the Evergreen Avenue School just as soon as they get here.

EXHIBIT AND TEA ATTRACTS MANY

Interesting Affair Held at the Home of Mrs. Percy Hamilton Stewart.

Total of 16,091 Articles Are Admired by Friends of the Labrador Branch of Needlework Guild—Directors Assist Hostess.

The annual exhibit and tea of the Plainfield section of the American Labrador branch of the Needlework Guild, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart. One hundred and fifty members and their friends viewed the large array of garments prepared and collected by the directors of the various groups, which were shown in the carriage house. This year's supply numbers 16,091 articles, among which are included helmets, baby dresses, mufflers, infant bootees, blankets, sweaters, gloves, blouses, caps, socks, shirts, maternity outfits, under-clothing and practically every necessary article for the inhabitants of the far-off country.

Begun five years ago, the Plainfield branch collected 500 articles the first year among its members; last year the number sent to Dr. Grenfell was 2,500, and the increase this year amounts to 13,591, a figure especially pleasing to the workers and an incentive for better labor next year. The material will be packed shortly and shipped to Dr. Grenfell for distribution among the natives of Labrador. The directors of the Plainfield section collect two or more garments from each member of her group. The directors are the following: Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Miss Kathryn L Bomann, Miss Eva G. Browne, Mrs. W. A. Conner, Mrs. William G. Cooks, Mrs. Thomas M. Day, Jr., Mrs. F. Clyde Doane, Mrs. Robert A. Fairbairn, of Westfield; Miss Priscilla W. Fraker, Mrs. Frank W. French, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Miss Helen Harman, Mrs. B. vanD. Hedges, Mrs. Francis de Lacy Hyde, Mrs. W. L. Lockwood, Mrs. L. D. Lounsbury, Miss Helen M. Lowden, of New York City, Miss Margaret P. Mead, Mrs. M. B. Mellor, Miss Katherine A. Sargent, Miss Edith H. Smalley, Mrs. J. P. Stevens, Mrs. Anna Stewart, Mrs. Alfred F. H. Streuli, Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor, Mrs. A. A. Tilney, Mrs. C. Boardman Tyler, Mrs. W. N. Wherry, Jr., Mrs. Henry C. White and Mrs. John S. Zelie.

Following the exhibit, the attendants went through the beautiful gardens surrounding the Stewart residence and returned to the house, where tea was served. Mrs. Percy H. Stewart received her guests and Mrs. Anna Stewart and Mrs. W. S. Taliaferro poured. The afternoon was passed in an informal way.

DEMOCRATIC CLUB ENDORSES BRANDEIS

Urge Representatives to Vote for His Confirmation—Officers for Year Chosen.

Resolutions endorsing the appointment of Louis Brandeis as a Supreme Court Justice, and the selection of officers for the coming year, were the most important matters taken up by the Plainfield Democratic Club at its meeting last night. The club instructed the secretary to forward telegrams to United States Senator James E. Martine and Congressman William Hughes, requesting them to support the appointment of L. D. Brandeis.

These officers were nominated for the year: President, Richard A. Claybrook; secretary, James J. McCann; treasurer, Seymour Perkins to succeed W. F. Taliaferro, resigned. The election will take pdace at the June meeting. The club decided to hold its meetings in the future on the first Wednesday in the month instead of the first Tuesday.

Henry Rosenbaum, Thos. Hughes and James J. McCann were named as a committee to secure new headquarters for the club. The present quarters of the organization in the Depew building at Park and North avenues are not well adaptd to the needs and another place will be secured soon.

MUSICAL PROGRAM ENJOYED BY A CROWD THAT ALMOST FILLS THE TABERNACLE—"MAC" SINGS DUET

DR. BIEDERWOLF PREACHES ON "COVERING SIN," AND FORTY-ONE WALK DOWN SAWDUST AISLE AT CLOSE OF SERVICE.

JUDGE RUNYON IS GIVEN A GREAT OVATION

Those Who Deny Existence of a Hell Are the Ones Who Usually Go There, Says Evangelist in Answer to Attacks on Bible Teachings—To Give Lecture on Lepers This Afternoon.

A crowd that exceeded 5,000 persons enjoyed the special musical program at the Tabernacle last night preceeding the strong sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf on "Covering Sin." Many entertaining events that are not a part of the regular evening programs were warmly applauded, and the big congregation left with the knowledge that Tuesday night is about the liviest of the week.

Mr McEwan's duet, with himself, was a unique offering. Dr. Biederwolf explained that "Mac" would sing an accompaniment to his own voice, or rather his canned voice on a Columbia graphanola record. The song was one written by a man who lived seventy years an infidel to find his mistake only a year before he died and the words that "Mac" sang pictured the agonized search of his mind and soul for refuge through all his years of doubt. The soloist kept remarkably harmonious time with the record during the song and it proved such a poular number that the choir insisted on his turning the graphanola around and repeating it to them after the service was over.

Judge William N. Runyon received the greatest applause of the evening when he stepped on the platform to sing "The End of a Perfect Day." For several minutes he was unable to sing because of the tumultuous greeting and just as it subsided members of the Knights of Pythias who were present in a delegation arose and gave him three cheers, which brought another outburst of handclapping. All this was for the judge himself, and after he had finished it was repeated for his rendition of the song.

The National Male Quartet, composed of Mr. Bachmeyer, Mr. Heaton, Mr. Sluyter and Mr. Roberts, sang "Lead Kindly Light" and Mrs. Brake recited a tenderly dramatic poem, "The White Rose."

Dr. Biederwolf announced that his lecture on Christian Science would not be given Thursday afternoon because of a number of requests that it be delivered at an evening service. Tomorrow afternoon he will preach on "Mr. and Mrs. Lot's Debut Into Society." He may give the Christian Science lecture some evening next week.

The evangelist again expressed his appreciation of the manner in which both local newspapers were giving news of the services. He also personally thanked Mayor Calkins for his letter on the censoringship of local picture shows and theatrical offerings, sent to the Common Council Monday evening, and urged that the good citizens of Plainfield send him letters of approval, saying that people were always quick to criticize and slow to commend the actions of public officials. He congratulated Plainfield on having a Mayor who stood for better morals for the community, and this received applause.

There were two large delegations present, one from the local Knights of Pythias and one from Bound Brook. Both were given a welcome by "Mac" and his chorus choir and another by Dr. Biederwolf.

Dr. Gillespie read the scripture lesson and Dr. Hudson offered the opening prayer.

"There are two ways in which a man can cover his sin," said the evangelist. "He may cover it himself, or he may allow God to cover it for him. The first way means death and the second way means life. The first means cursing and the second means blessing. If you cover your own sin, you'll be damned. If you let God cover it, you'll be saved."

After telling of the many ways in which a man may try to cover his sin from himself, Dr. Biederwolf said:

"Some of you people out there when I'm hitting pretty hard about sin, puff up like a pouter pigeon and draw in your diaphrams and push out your chests and begin to talk about your culture and your automobiles and your ancestry. That don't count anything with God. I tell you God is no respecter of persons. He'll soak a millionaire just as quick as he will a hobo or a college professor with 59 diplomas as quick as the veriest bum hitting the ties."

He paid his respects to those who deny the existence of a Hell in the following words.

"You say you don't believe in a Hell. You don't want to believe in it, you old degenerate, because it makes you more comfortable not to believe in it, and encourages you a little more in the sin you love. If Hell was a place of green tables and Schlitz on tap, you'd believe in it, but the Hell God tells you about you don't like and so you say you don't believe in it and that settles it."

"People who are always trying to get rid of the doctrine of Hell are the ones who are most likely to go there. It is not strange at all that the unbeliever should have his misgivings about eternity but when you find a man who goes out of his way to deny the judgment of God and keeps his little garden hose turned toward the other world to put out the fires of Hell, you can bank on it nine times out of ten there is something wrong in his life. He's living in sin. In his baser moments he will not hesitate to lie or trifle with a woman's honor and do anything else that's mean and base and vile."

At the close of the sermon there were 41 who walked down the sawdust aisle to follow Dr. Biederwolf in the prayer of the penitent and pledge their lives to Christ.

SPECIAL AID SOCIETY TO PERFECT ORGANIZATION

Interest in the National Special Aid Society is steadily growing and the Plainfield women who are in charge of the preliminary work of establishing a branch here feel much encouraged. The committee named to complete plans for the local chapter met at the Cedarcroft yesterday and disposed of much necessary routine work.

A nominating committee was appointed and as soon as the members prepare a ticket for the election of officers, a general meeting will be called. Signed slips for membership continue to be received by Mrs. William B. Tyler, 1232 Evergreen avenue, and those who have sent in slips are requested to pay their dues to Mrs. Tyler, treasurer pro tem. An open meeting will be held next week when interesting information will be discussed, officers elected and committees formed for immediate work. Women of Plainfield and North Plainfield are invited to join the society.

COLUMBUS CLUB TO MARCH IN BIG PARADE

An enthusiastic meeting of the local Columbus Club was held last night. A very satisfactory report of the treasurer for the last quarter was submitted and many matters in connection with the State Convention to be held in Newark, May 15, were discussed. Plainfield will be well represented in the parade and the local club has hired a band to lead its marchers. Members of the club also discussed an outdoor picnic during the summer months for the ladies in recognition of their work of the organization during the winter months.

1,000 LAYMEN TO ATTEND BANQUET

Important Religious Gathering of Episcopalians to Be Held in New York.

Under the direction of a committee from the New York Clerical Union, a banquet will be given at the Hotel Astor tonight, at which it is expected that one thousand laymen of the Episcopal church, together with a number of clergy from parishes throughout the metropolitan district. It will be one of the most important religious gatherings in recent times. The general subject for the evening will be "The Duty of Loyal Churchmen."

Among the speakers will be Major-General Leonard Wood, Professor Tinker, of Yale University; Rev. Dr William T. Manning, rector of Trinity church, New York; Rev. Dr. W. H. VanAllen, of the Church of the Advent, Boston, and Rt. Rev. Frederick J. Kinsman, bishop of Delaware.

Rev. C. H. Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, and Rev. Henry Mesier, of St. Stephen's church, this city, will be among the guests at the banquet.

The committee in charge of the general arrangements comprise Rev. Edmund Baker Smith, chaplain of the United States Army; Rev. J. R. Miller, of the House of Prayer, Newark; Rev. Charles C. Edmunds, professor of ecclesiastical history at the General Theological Seminary.

RICHARD BORDEN IN ORATORICAL CONTEST

Will Represent Plainfield High School in Hamilton College Tryouts at Elizabeth.

Richard Borden, of this city, will represent the Plainfield High School in the New Jersey trials for the Hamilton College interscholastic speaking contest. He will speak a declamation entitled "War With Great Britain." The trials will be held at the Central High School Auditorium in Newark at 8:15 next Friday evening. At this time two students will be chosen to represent the State in the finals at Clinton, N. Y.

Eleven schools strove for the honors last year, which were won by Asbury Park and as many will be represented this year. Among the early entries are Central High School of Newark, Bayonne High School, Rahway High School, Roselle High School, Englewood High School, Glen Ridge High School and Plainfield High School.

The contest at Newark is but one of several which are preliminary to the final event at the college. Other elimination contests are to be held in New York, Utica, Troy, Mt. Vernon, Brooklyn, Rochester, Buffalo, Binghamton and Syracuse. Cash prizes sufficient to defray the expenses to the final will be awarded the winners of first two places. At the college contest the first and second winners will receive prizes of twenty and ten dollars in gold, respectively.

The contest this year promises to be as close as ever, and the Newark preliminary has added interest owing to the fact that the winner of this last year was the winner of the final contest at Clinton. Hamilton College alumni are conducting the affair and will be among the judges. The college has long held a high reputation for public speaking and debating and originated the idea of interscholastic declamation contests.

ZEPPELINS RAID BRITAIN.

Drop Bombs In Yorkshire and Visit Scottish Coast.

London, May 3.—Five hostile airships attacked the northeast coast of England and southeast coast of Scotland.

The official announcement of the raid says that the movements of the raiders appeared uncertain, adding:

"A few bombs were dropped in Yorkshire, but there are no details yet regarding the casualties or damage.

Weather Forecast.

Partly cloudy, followed by rain; moderate north and northeast winds.

DON'T GIVE UP.

Discouraged Citizens Will Find Comfort in the Experience of a Plainfield Man.

Experience is the modern instructor.

Profit by the experience of others.

It may save your life.

The experience of friends and neighbors.

The testimony of Plainfield people

Will bring renewed encouragement.

Here is a case in point:

Albert Naylor, musician, 256 East Second street, Plainfield, says: "Several years ago I suffered from an ache in the small of my back and sharp pains when stooping or lifting. I took Doan's Kidney Pills, as I was told they were good for such trouble, and by the time I had finished two boxes I was feeling better in every way. I have often recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to people I have heard complaining of kidney trouble."

WIRE AND WIRELESS WAR TEST FOR NAVY

To Conduct Tryout of Quick Communication.

Washington, May 3.—As a practical tryout of the nation's preparedness for communication in time of war a telephonic, telegraphic and radio demonstration has been arranged by which the navy department at Washington will be put into instantaneous touch with every naval station on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts as well as with the battleship New Hampshire at sea. The test will be begun at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon and will continue until 8 o'clock Monday morning. During that period, forty hours, the navy department will be conducted on a simulated war basis.

Chiefs of the bureaus of the navy department will carry on all their business with the star naval stations by telephone, while the secretary of the navy, the naval general board, the office of naval intelligence and the chief of naval operations at the same time will receive from the New Hampshire wireless telephonic reports of her search for imaginary enemies.

The test was arranged at the request of Secretary Daniels by officials of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, which has agreed to place its service at the disposal of the government without cost for the purpose of the demonstration.

This will be the first time in history that messages have been telephoned by wireless from a battleship at sea to naval administrative officers on shore.

In complying with the request of Secretary Daniels for the test the American Telephone and Telegraph company not only agreed to make all the elaborate preparations needed, but offered to perform the service gratuitously as its contribution toward preparedness. Many thousand miles of wire will be turned over for the exclusive use of the navy department during the period of the test, and stations located in the four corners of the nation—Maine, Florida, Washington and California—will be included.

Explosion Kills Three.

Trenton, N. J., May 3.—An explosion of chemicals, followed by a fire, at the plant of the Chandler Oilcloth works at Yardville, three miles from here, resulted in the death of three men, serious injuries to six others, two of whom are not expected to live, and caused property damage estimated to be more than $20,000. The explosion was said to have been caused by fumes from several hundred gallons of gasoline stored in an anteroom just off the drying department.

DUNELLENITE CAUGHT IN A SEWER MANHOLE

Jack Boyle, who works on the streets, had a vision of what it means to be in a leaky submarine yesterday, when water rose around him in a manhole which was being flushed out under the direction of Street Commissioner Paul Reusch. Jack had been sent down in the manhole to manipulate the hose. The man at the hydrant, instead of turning on a moderate stream of water, turned it on full. Feeling the water mounting around him, Jack yelled up from the hole to reduce the volume. The threads of the water regulator, however, had been stripped and it could not be turned. The water continued to rise and Jack was shortly yelling for help, exclaiming that he was going to drown. When he was pulled out he was as "mad as a wet hen."

FIFTY-ONE CASES OF DISEASE REPORTED

General Sanitary Condition of the City is Found to Be Good, However.

There were fifty-one cases of communicable disease during the past month, acording to the reports presented at the April meeting of the Plainfield Board of Health last night. The cases were as follows: Measles, 23; German measles, 1; chicken-pox, 1; whooping-cough, 5; scarlet fevor 7; tuberculosis, 12; diphtheria, 2. Two of the cases of tuberculosis were reported by the hospital and were patients living out of town.

The following inspections were reported: Milk supply, 33; food supply, 81; nuisances, 223; communicable disease, 50; disinfections, 142; general work, 338; plumbing, 145.

During the month of April a survey was made of the city to locate the places where dumping was being done. Notices were sent to owners of all such properties to thoroughly clean their premises. Reinspections will be made, and where no action has been taken toward complying with the notices, the cases will be brought before the city judge. Notices will also be served upon householders in the immediate vicinity of these properties to cease the practice of depositing of waste materials of any kind upon the ground.

The dumping of any rubbish on any ground except where permitted by the Board of Health is prohibited by city ordinance, and all persons disregarding the ordinance are liable to arrest.

ASQUITH DECIDES TO FORCE COMPULSION

To Settle Recruiting Question Definitely.

London, May 3.—A bill of immediate and general compulsion will be introduced in the house of commons, Premier Asquith announced in the house.

Mr. Asquith said that the bill would settle the recruiting question once for all. He pleaded for national unity at this time and invited the house to say if the government had lost the confidence of the country and of parliament.

The group led by Sir John Simon, ex-attorney general, and a section of the Labor members is likely to oppose the compulsion bill, but otherwise it is thought it will be well received in the house. Some opposition will be based on the grounds that compulsion is at present a political and not a military necessity.

The government, Mr. Asquith asserted, intended to deal with the question in one bill instead of disposing with it in the piecemeal fashion which had already aroused so much opposition.

Mr. Asquith said in speaking of the military situation that there were now 5,000,000 men in the army and navy, while the total forces in both services in time of peace were about 600,000. At the beginning of the war, he continued, the army consisted of twenty-six divisions and now it amounted to eighty-three divisions, including the contributions of the dominions and the naval division, but excluding India.

OBREGON WILL LET ARMY STAY

Agreement Reported Reached at Conference.

TO RESTRICT VILLA HUNT

Base of the Expedition to Be Casas Grandes—Operations Will Be Confined to Western Chihuahua—Shipment of Munitions to Mexico Held Up by Government.

El Paso, Tex., May 3.—The forces of the United States in Mexico will continue their hunt for Villa bandits, but their operations will be confined to a definite area.

Casas Grandes will be the base of operations, and the activities of the army will be confined to the western part of the state of Chihuahua. Their work will have to do strictly with hunting down bandits, in which they are to receive the co-operation of the Carranza government.

This is said to be the tentative agreement reached by Generals Scott and Obregon, representing the two governments, in their conference at Hotel del Norte.

General Obregon is said to have opposed strongly any attempt to keep the American troops in Mexico, but after an exchange of telegrams between himself and Carranza and the advisers of the first chief in Mexico City acquiesced to American insistence that the United States forces remain in Mexico, although protesting that he feared it would not be possible to control the Carranza forces if the American occupation continued for a long period.

It was intimated that the conference might continue for several days, just how long nobody would say.

Lasts All Afternoon.

Those attending the second conference were General Scott, A. J. McQuatters, an American mining man in Mexico; General Obregon and General Trevino. General Funston was not at the meeting at the start, although he was in the lobby of the hotel for awhile.

General Funston, however, was summoned to the hotel and went to a room on the sixth floor, two floors below the room in which the conference was in session. It was suspected that he had been called by General Scott to sign the agreement which persons on the outside thought was being prepared in the conference room.

Andres Garcia, local Mexican consul, who was the chief interpreter for the Mexican faction last Saturday, was not in the conference, but remained about the hotel while it was in progress.

The following statement was sent out from the conference:

We are still conferring in a spirit of mutual good will and hope to arrive at a solution that will be satisfactory to both of our governments. There will be nothing more for publication. OBREGON. SCOTT.

A stenographer was sent for, and this gave rise to the belief that a protocol was being drawn up.

Sent Out For Dinner.

Just before the statement was given out General Scott and Obregon ordered dinner sent up to their room, and it was announced from the conference room that they would be in session for several hours yet.

Telegrams arrived and were delivered to both General Scott and General Obregon. The latter's messages came from Mexico City. General Obregon dispatched some of the members of the entourage to Juarez with lengthy messages to be sent to Carranza.

The conference of the two generals was arranged by a J. McQuatters, who acted as a go-between. He first talked with General Scott, then with General Obregon, again with General Scott and then returned to General Obregon. A short time later General Obregon came to the hotel. Soon General Scott, leaving his automobile near his private car, went presumably for "a walk." Next he was located in the room with Obregon at the hotel.

Laredo was the first to put into force the embargo against the shipment of ammunition into Mexico. Then Eagle Pass followed suit. Investigation here brought out the fact that the embargo had not been lifted since Carranza gained control of Juarez. It is reported that the embargo also was placed on all ports along the Arizona line.

HOUSE FOR AGRICULTURE BILL

Legislative Riders Fought In House and Sent to Senate.

Washington, May 3.—The agricultural appropriation bill, with riders in the form of cotton futures act, the grain standardization bill and the warehouse licensing bill, was finally approved by the house and sent to the senate for consideration. The fight against the legislative riders persisted until the end. Separate votes on the grain standardization rider and the cotton futures act disclosed an overwhelming majority in favor of these measures.

French Gain Near Verdun.

Paris, May 3.—The French again took the offensive in the Verdun region, attacking on the east side of the Meuse southeast of Fort Douaumont. The assault is described as completely successful, resulting in the capture of a first line German trench on a front of 500 meters (548 yards). About a hundred prisoners were taken.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by. The man who has a diploma from the School of Experience is pretty well fixed.

"My son, Charlie, told me to come here, for if I couldn't get a suit to my liking at Rothberg's, I could get one nowhere!"

That's what a Plainfielder told the writer Saturday morning. And it's our own message to all Plainfield.

There's one thing we realize very keenly at Rothberg's and it's this—Every man we sell a suit to has himself a host of friends. Taken by and large, they all know a good thing when they see it. Sometimes they ask questions. We want our Rothberg customers to experience a little more than their usual chest expansion when they say: "Glad you like it. Got it at Rothberg's."

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

This excellent, common-sense health measure being adopted by millions.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

I have always been impressed with the necessity of cities maintaining public comfort stations, and while communities of modern, up-to-date progressiveness maintain other excellent equipments, this one necessity, is invariably lacking. While it is a fact that many of our mercantile establishments provide rest rooms and toilets, still this would seem inadequate, for the reason that the patrons of these stores take advantage of the facilities offered while the public in general could not be accommodated.

In this city, there is a crying need for a public comfort station and rest room to be maintained by the city. This matter was very forcibly brought to my attention during the recent "Dollar Day," when the committee in charge hired a vacant store and had it furnished with chairs, tables, rugs, etc. The women and children crowded there for several hours, and partook of the refreshment provided by the Business Men's Association. During my several visits to this room on that day, I heard on all sides expressions of gratitude for the forethought of the committee in providing this place, and many asked if it could not be maintained permanently.

Is our city progressive? I think so, but of course, in the modern trend, many of us do not have time, nor do we give these things the consideration they really deserve. But knowing the need of the subject under consideration, it becomes the duty of every citizen to lend his assistance to a project which means so much to the community, and bring this HOME TOWN up to the modern standard.

In order to accomplish this object, public opinion must be aroused to this necessity—our civic bodies which are always on the alert, will, no doubt, co-operate in this movement—our business and professional men, and our clergymen, I am sure, will give it their aid, and if this spirit is imbibed by the citizens in general, I have no doubt that our aim is now partly accomplished.

The need of such a public convenience is beyond question, and should be open day and night, accessible to all classes. Women shoppers, with their children, workingmen, boys, girls, postmen, policemen, street employes, newsboys, messengers,—in fact all those whose daily duty demand their presence on the street, not to speak of the stranger within our gates, and automobile parties which daily travel through our city, to these this accommodation would be a perpetual blessing.

Then again, boys of tender years may be obliged ofttimes, to enter a saloon midst temptation or vice which would follow him through life. There are many incidents of this kind that could be enumerated, all proving that a comfort station, centrally located, would be most satisfactory, and would be conducive to the good health and morals of old and young alike.

Aside from these instances, it will be admitted that the tendency of the times is toward progress, cities are today admired more for their progressive tendencies than for their antiquity. Progressive cities abreast of the times pertaining to the health and general good of the community must be admired for it shows that its citizens are progressive and alive to the needs of its people. Cities of the old-fashioned type who fail to keep to the fore must eventually lose their prestige, while the more progressive boom perpetually.

Our present civilization demands improvements which past generations never thought of, while every decade suggests modern ways of gratifying human needs, so that a progressive city must ever keep before it, and keep in touch with the modern demands of progress.

"Our City Beautiful," as it is called, has many excellent facilities, rivalling in many respects metropolitan cities of greater wealth and larger population. These things we are all proud of. But there is one thing that has always impressed me as being of the greatest and the most vital importance, and that is a public comfort station.

In Europe, all the larger cities, and many of the smaller towns, have comfort stations in numbers. Why should we in America be behind them, for surely we have seen the need of such places for the health and convenience of the people?

As I have stated before, only too often, many people are forced to enter hotels, restaurants, and saloons because of the absence of this necessity.

Public bodies, like the Board of Health, should have long since taken recognition of this dire need, and have launched out an appeal to the civic organizations and the general public that this end might have now been a realized fact.

I trust that this idea thrown out might extend to every quarter of our city, and that an agitation will prevail, so that it will eventually compel the serious attention of our city fathers. We should no longer delay the establishment of this need. The Plainfield business men know full well the need of such a place, and will, I am sure, take the initiative in arousing the public sentiment to the end that the public health may be conserved.

Mr. Editor, I hope that these few suggestions brought together rather hurriedly, may be instrumental in bringing each and every business man in the community to a full realization of what a great boon this would mean to our city, and that no effort should be spared to bring this to the attention of our city authorities, in order that speedy action may be taken at the earliest possible moment.

J. J. VARLEY.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

When a bank or any other business corporation elects directors or a presiden they always select stockholders that are financially interested in the corporation which they, the directors, or president represent. They do not select anyone who is not interested financially in the corporation. That should be the case when a Mayor or Common Council are elected. It seems in Plainfield most any slick fellow that is a good mixer can become a member of the Common Council or even Mayor, no matter whether they are interested in the town financially or not. Sometimes the taxpayers are not entirely suited with what such men do. One cast I have in mind is the purchase of the city hall plot by a Mayor whose name does not appear on the tax book, who is not financially interested in Plainfield real estate. How can he be a judge of the value of real estate if he is not an owner of one foot of ground in Plainfield?

His idea of value is entirely different in this case from the assessor of the Second ward who is a business man owning considerable real estate, different from the real estate men of the city, different from what the owner of the plot declared before the Union County Tax Board the year before the purchase and different from the Union County Tax Board as a body because it lowered the assessment $2,000. His idea of the value is so far above that of the above-mentioned people who know what real estate is worth in Plainfield, most every taxpayer thinks a Mayor should be a stockholder in the corporation he represents the same as any corporation.

What would have happened to a president of one of our banks if the bank had wanted a plot near the business section where there were several good locations and the president had gone way off one side and paid $32,000 for what the owner declared before the Union County Tax Board to be worth $16,950? Could anyone imagine that the bank in question would send him on a like errand at some future time? I think not.

If the Mayor had given the taxpayers, who he seems to think a whole lot of at times when there is not a whole lot of money involved, a chance, many think it would not have happened. It was done so quick, no one was suspecting it. A large number of taxpayers have expressed an opinion that hereafter a candidate for Mayor must have his name on the tax book before they will vote for him. A man who is not tied fast by real estate can put his hat and coat on and leave any time things do not suit him. Then to think a man of that description is Mayor of Plainfield and has launched the largest deal the Mayor and Common Council have ever had to do with from a financial point of view except the sewers. He does not have to put up one penny to help pay for the deal. Even had a law passed at Trenton to increase the amount the city could be bonded from $100,000 to $150,000 where public improvements are needed, going personally to Trenton to see that it passed, according to newspaper reports. It is the common talk that a third ticket will be in the field next election if the candidate on the Republican ticket is not a real estate holder. I do not wish it understood that our Mayor does not pay any tax for that would be doing the man an injustice. The tax books show he pays $1 poll tax.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

I wish to record a most extraordinary political phenomenon, namely, Hon. Congressman Capstick has failed to reply to my recent letter to him about his vote in favor of the Kaiser, the commander-in-chief of the German Imperial Navy, and President Wilson. Who ever heard of a Congressman neglecting to answer a letter of an anxious constituent, whether of admiration, admonition or protest?

The explanation must be that the honorable gentleman from New Jersey is completely absorbed in studious thought as to how to reply to the resolutions of his German Elizabeth supporters, which certainly resemble a red-hot poker. He thinks he needs this implement in his business to rake his political fires, but if he grasps it, it will certainly burn his greedy political fingers to the bone.

Like many another situation, it has its tragic and comic elements—tragic, that a man should sell his conscience for dirty votes; and comic, because no one but Capstick himself has any idea that he will need any votes at the next Congressional election—for his name will certainly not be on the ballot!

I am sending him by registered mail, with return receipt requested, a letter, of which I enclose a copy.

HOWARD McWILLIAMS.
1007 Hillside ave., Plainfield, N. J.

"Hon. John H. Capstick,
"House of Representatives,
"Washington, D. C.

"Dear Sir—

"I enclose some reading matter for your digestion, circulation and general edification.

"As a voter in your New Jersey district, I don't care for any packages of garden seeds this spring, but I would deeply appreciate it if your secretary would send me a copy of your reply, when prepared, to your Prussian and Hessian advisers in Elizabeth, who 'resolute' that you are the 'Great Thing' on account of your recent vote against President Wilson and against adequate action by our government for the protection of the lives of American citizens on the high seas—a sacred cause for which we once long ago had the 'blood and iron' to go to war against Great Britain.

"We are told on good authority that 'in the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to love'—and the 'circus!' and as a lawyer I am much interested in feats of mental (and moral) agility such as those exhibited by the famous Boston acrobat, Brandeis, whose wonderful ability to be on both sides of a pending litigation has not landed him in jail nor caused his disbarment, nor prevented his receiving at the hands of a Democratic President a nomination to the greatest judicial tribunal in the world.

"In making the above respectful request for a copy of your reply to the Elizabeth hyphenates, I am actuated solely by the very reasonable yearning to compare this State paper with your grandiloquent statement in a recent letter to a highly respected and influential constituent—that you 'desire to support the President in every matter where the national honor is at stake!'

"If you can get away with it, I see no reason why you also, although an alleged Republican, should not be elevated to the United States Supreme Court by President Wilson, who evidently is searching the country for judges of that sort of ability.

"Your constituents around the sawdust arena are breathlessly awaiting your entrance under the canvas for your aerial trapeze straddle act.

"Yours truly,
"HOWARD McWILLIAMS."

Young men find in our clothes those qualities which are best calculated to arouse their enthusiasm, because they are styled and patterned within the reasonable limits of good taste.

There is a point in embodying originality in young men's clothes beyond which we hesitate to go.

Rather, we give the young men of today clothes that reflect their personality and preference for quiet, yet effective elegance.

"COVERING SIN"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

"He That Covereth His Sin Shall Not Prosper."

"Blessed is the Man Whose Sin is Covered."

There are two ways by which a man's sin may be covered. He may cover it himself, or he may allow God to cover it for him. The first way means death, the second way means life. The first means cursing, the second means blessing. If you cover your own sin, you'll be damned. If you let God cover it for you, you'll be saved.

Sin is not so much a problem as it is a fact. If people spent less time in figuring on where it came from and a little more on the right remedy for getting rid of it, difference in their lives would make up for the disappointment in the lack of knowledge. A man's a fool if he will not flee from danger because he does not understand the philosophy of its origin.

Sin has its origin in the human heart, and it has no existence and never did have apart from living men and women. Only fools make a mock of sin. It is the most awful fact in God's universe. There are some people, and most of them are old beer-soaked theologians from Germany, who want us to believe that sin is only weakness; that it is only an error or a mistake; but in the name of Calvary's cross it is a thing so damnable and so awful that nothing but the blood of God's own Infinite Son could atone for it.

Try to Hide Sin.

And yet men and women will cover their sin over in their own heart and try to hide it from men and from God, and even from themselves.

1. They try to hide it from themselves by trying to forget all about it. You go on in sin, and plunge deeper in and try to drown the voice of your conscience in worldliness and in booze and in revelry and in sensuality. But it's a poor way. Your sin will haunt you like Banquo's ghost and even if you could forget God never would.

2. They cover their sin from others by lying about them. We're told to confess our thoughts to one another, but we're not told to lie out of sin. To sin and then lie about it is to cut a bloody gash in your soul and then go to the devil for a plaster. You may deceive your neighbor, but God is not deceived.

Others try to hide their sin from their fellowmen by putting on a garb of special sanctity and so play the hypocrite. As though the sharp eyes of the world could not penetrate the thin disguise.

3. Then men try to cover sin from God. Not that they think it can be hid from His all-seeing eye, but they seem to think they can excuse it or argue God into letting it go. But you can't do that, whoever you are.

No Respector of Persons.

But you can't do it, no matter who you are. Some of you people when I'm hitting out pretty hard about sin, puff up like a pouter pigeon and draw in your diaphrams and push out your chests and begin to talk about your culture and your automobiles and your ancestry. That don't count anything with God. You talk about your family tree, and when you build it you put some of the limbs that some of your ancestors hung on around on the back side so the people couldn't see them. I tell you God is no respector of persons. He'll soak a millionaire as quickly as He will a hobo, or a college professor with 49 diplomas as the veriest bum hitting the ties.

You try to excuse yourself by saying the sin was a little one. But there is no little sin. The sin you estimate the smallest is in God's sight hideous and repulsive and big enough to demand an infinite sacrifice to wipe it out.

You try to excuse yourself by saying you are not to blame.

(a) You say you were unduly influenced. Yes, and that's what Adam said and laid the blame on Eve. But there's been an influence from God surging all about you and trying to break in upon your soul, and if you hadn't ignored it all your life long, it would have made you strong long ago and saved you in the hour when you went down.

You say you are a creature of environment and cannot help being exactly what you are. But environment alone never saved nor damned any man. Environment is getting to be the twentieth century apology for devilry. God would lift you out of your environment quicker than a wink if you'd give Him half a chance.

You say you are morally weak because of heredity. But your heredity cannot damn you to a life of sin any more than can your environment. Man is the creature of his own will. You are what you want to be. If you are a blasphemer and a liar and a gossiper, it's because you'd rather live in cussedness than to do the will of God. If you want to please Christ and be decent, you'll dump beer out in the back yard, but if you'd rather booze than honor God, you'll keep it in the cellar.

Lots of Cheap Religion.

There's a lot of cheap religion floating around in these days. It's new-fangled, and of course it flourishes for the time being, but just as sure as some turban-headed rhapsodic Hindoo or some long-haired, sissified, self-appointed prophet comes along with some dilettane religious idiosyncrasy, you'll find a lot of narrow-browed gullible humanity scraping at their feet. We said new-fangled, and yet there's scarcely one of them but is a resurrected fossil of bygone ages when healthy minds and even people of little sense consigned them to the graveyard of forgotten fallacy.

They talk about environment as though Judas Iscariot did not have the holiest environment that earth has ever seen, and yet he sold his Lord and sent his own soul to hell. As though the devil himself did not sin and fall into hell from the very presence of God and the holy angels. They talk about heredity, as if all a man needs to make him an angel is a new set of grand-parents; just as though the world is not full of drunken, thievish, devilish men, who have heaped disgrace and dishonor upon father's and mother's good name. They talk about ethical culture and sewer gas and ventilation as though all the rascals lived on the Bowery and all the ethical models on Fifth avenue. No one denies some good in all these things, but away with them when exploited as substitutes for God's plan of getting rid of sin and saving a man's soul.

You can put them altogether and innoculate a man's mind and heart and soul with the best that's in them all and it wouldn't keep him from his sin or make him love God one whit better than he did before, but when a man's past is forgiven, and the grace of God has come into a man's heart, if there's any power in God to help a man, that power is in him and will make him what he ought to be in spite of this world's obstacles and all the devil can do to discourage him. "Blessed is the man whose sin is covered."

Can't Change God's Standard.

You try to cover your sins by changing God's standard of judgment.

You say your conscience does not condemn you. That may be all true. But you've trifled with your conscience so long that now it's almost dead to many of the distinctions between right and wrong.

You say you'll be judged by what you do. Yes, but that is not all; you'll be judged by what you ought to do and don't do, and you'll be judged by what you'd like to do but can't through force of circumstances.

Oh, my brother, I say to you on the authority of God's word, sin is not a thing to be trifled with. There is nothing that will eventuate it. It is a dark, damnable, God-defying, soul-destroying thing which God in his infinite holiness hates with an everlasting hatred, and "He that covereth his sin shall not prosper."

Your sin will blind you to your own condition. One of the deepest curses of sin is the insensibility of the sinner to his own sin. The more a man sins, the less guilt he feels. Tyrants used to bore out the eyes of their victims but sin is worse than that; it bores out the eyes of the soul and leaves it so blind that it can't distinguish between the pure and the impure, and you wallow like a hog in filth and obscenity and rioting and parlor gambling and are perfectly satisfied.

Your sin will rob you of peace. Read Isaiah 55: 21: "There is no peace for the wicked, said the Lord." The sin you have not confessed will not only meet you at the judgment but it will haunt you through all your life. There are some here tonight who know the meaning of that verse:

I dug a grave, and laid within
It's secret depth one secret sin.
I closed the grave and know full well
That day I shut myself in hell."

You say you have peace, but God says you have not. He says you are the troubled sea when it cannot rest. "There is no peace for the wicked," saith the Lord. God pity the man who must cower before the voice of an accusing conscience, who must shudder at the thought of death, and tremble because of the oncoming judgment of God. "He that covereth his sin shall not prosper."

Your sin will drive happiness from your fireside. It severs family ties, and turns the memory of home, which ought to be fragrant with all that's sweetest and best, into an unwelcome nightmare of the past.

Will Destroy Your Will.

Your sin will destroy your will. I saw an old Chinaman lying upon his bunk in an opium joint, puffing away at his pipe. I said to him: "John, do you like it" He replied: "I got to like it: I been smoking for forty years." His sin had mastered him and he was overpowered in its grasp. "O," you say, "I can change my habits when I choose," and that is a torch that has lit a million other fools like you on their way to hell. I would to God that you might see that you must not trifle with sin, whiskey, morphine, passion and all things else that damn and blight.

Some years ago Harry Clay Trumbull went into a London theatre to see a noted animal trainer give an exhibition of his power over the beasts he had gotten from the jungle. He had lons and leopards and hyenas and tigers, and he put them through their parts of the performance with remarkable nerve and awed the audience by his marvelous control. And now the closing act of the exhibition had come. The bills had announced the appearance of a huge boa constrictor, 35 feet long. A wire screen is placed before the audience and while the weird strains of an oriental band steal through the trees, the curtain rises upon an India woodland scene. The foreground is covered with a soft velvet carpet that shines like an emerald from Muzo Yonder at one side is the treacherous thicket, hung with thickly-woven vines and clusters of tropical fruit that shine like huge drops of ruby and opal. A rustling noise is heard, a stirring of the foliage, and a huge serpent is seen winding its way from the undergrowth. It stops, head erect, its forked tongue shoots out and its eyes flash fire. The women in the front seats shrink back and some lips utter a cry, but the serpent seems unaware of their presence. Does he see anything? Yes, yonder from the other side of the stage emerges a man. They advance toward each other until the big snake stops, again rears its head and shoots out its forked tongue. Eyes meet eyes—and the man is master of the beast. The serpent quails and at the bidding of the man performs a series of frightful contortions. It obeys every command of the man in whose power it seems to be held. At a sign it moves upon him and begins to coil itself around him. Higher and higher it rose, coil upon coil, until the man and serpent were one and the serpent's hissing head reared about the man's. The audience burst into thunderous applause. The man gave a slight scream, and the crowd thought it was another command and again it cheered. But their cheers froze upon their lips, for the trainer's cry was the wail of death agony. Those cold, slimy coils had embraced him for the last time, and as they began to tighten the horror-stricken audience heard bone after bone crack, until the hideous monster of the jungle had crushed the life out of the man in its embrace. He had gotten that serpent when it was but a tiny reptile, three or four days old. He had handled it daily and carried it in his arms many times when it was young. For twenty-five years he had fed it and trained it until it seemed to be harmless and under his control, but it crushed out his life at last, and that is what you sin will do for you. There are some of you here tonight looking into my eyes, and you could be free from that which has brutalized and demoralized you. You've said a hundred times: "This thing shall stop"; but it hasn't stopped, and you're in its grasp today. "He that covereth his sin shall not prosper."

Revelations of God.

He shall not prosper in eternity. Man, it will be an awful thing for you to die in your sin. "Oh," but I hear some one say, "We've gotten all over that here." Have you? Well, what about the Bible? Have you gotten all over that? Listen to Romans 6: 23, "The wages of sin is death." Thess. 1: 7-8, "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the Gospel of your Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of His power." When God's word says one thing, what in the name of decency do you want to trot out your little pigmy 2x4 opinion for and buck it against God's revelation? I wouldn't give an ounce of the revelation of God for 200,000,000 trainloads of the opinions of men.

People who are always trying to get rid of the doctrine of hell are the people who are the most likely to go there. It is not strange at all that an unbeliever should have his misgivings about eternity but when you find a man who goes out of his way to deny the judgment of God and keeps his little garden hose turned toward the other world to put out the fires of hell, you can bank on it nine times out of ten that there is something wrong with his life. He's living in sin, in his baser memories he will not hesitate to steal or lie or trifle with a woman's honor, or do anything else that's mean and base and vile. The judgment of God is not a thing at which a man may laugh. You say you can't believe in hell. You don't want to believe in it, you old degenerate, because it makes you more comfortable not to believe in it, and encourage you a little more in the sin you love. If hell was a place of green tables and Anheuser on tap, you'd believe in it, but the hell God tells you about you don't like, and so you say you don't believe in it and that settles it.

Iron Clutch Means Death.

In the British gallery is a famous picture of a detective laying his hand on the shoulder of an escaped felon just as he is in the act of stepping into a carriage to ride away. The criminal's face is of ashen hue and distorted with ghastly horror. Art critics have called it melodramatic and exaggerated, but those who are familiar with the actual, vouch for the reality of just such depictions, when justice has at last hunted down its victim and he knows its iron clutch means death. I have sometimes wondered and thought, and started back with horror as I did it, of the ghastly distortion that must appear over the faces of the scoffer and the critic and the unbeliever when at last his sin has hunted him down and he realizes that the hell at which he laughed in life is one of the most fearful realities in God's afterworld, and that he must spend all his eternity within its confines. I beseech you in God's name never test that reality.

"He that covereth his sin shall not prosper," and now listen to the rest of that verse, "but who so confesseth and forsaketh his sin shall find mercy," and that is only another way of saying, "Blessed is the man whose sin is covered."

Sin May Be Covered.

Thank God, there is a way our sin may be covered that will bring us mercy and prosper us in the sight of God, and that is by confession and forsaking them. Oh, my brother, when you get done trying to justify yourself, when you get through commending yourself and patting yourself on the shoulder for the little good you have done and when you get done once for all thanking God a little and yourself a good deal more that you are not altogether as the drunkard and the harlot or other people and humbly acknowledge that you have sinned against heaven and in the sight of God and promise to forsake the evil that may have been yours, God will take your hand and say, "This day I have forgiven thee, thou art my child," and all the sin of former days He will cover up through the meritorious atonement of Jesus Christ. Every unholy act; every wrongly-spoken word; every unclean thought; every transgression and every iniquity He remembers no more because the blood of His own Son has gone over it all and blotted it out forever. I have seen people laugh and smile and rail and almost foam at the mouth over the Gospel I preach. There were men in Paul's day who trampled under foot the Son of God and counted His blood an unholy thing, and there are men who do it today with a hatred as keen as any the world has ever seen. They call the Gospel we preach a bloody Gospel. They present a dozen plans for the amelioration of the individual and the race, every one of which has been tried a dozen times and failed without ever turning a single individual from sin. They want us to lay aside the atonement of Jesus Christ and try a soap and soup salvation in its place.

Bound Brook brought a good-sized delegation, filling the section which was reserved for them to overflowing.

The Knights of Pythias were there in large numbers, too. They were led by the Dutch Arms Band. Plainfield should be proud of such an organization.

Both of these delegations were given a hearty welcome by Dr. Biederwold and the choir gave them the Chautauqua salute.

"Mac" asked the Pythians for their favorite hymn, and their unanimous selection was "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

"Mac." had the choir sing "There's Honey in the Rock," incidentally leading them in their gymnastics. Then he put the audience through the same stunts and finally he had the choir whistle the song—and to look at some of the men as they whistled, one would have thought that they had just eaten a persimmon.

Judge Runyon sang "A Perfect Day" with great expression and feeling.

Mrs. Brake gave a very pleasing recitation.

The Knights of Pythias gave three rousing cheers for Judge Runyon and Dr. Biederwolf.

The National Male Quartet sang "Lead Kindly Light."

Delegations from the Y. W. C. A. and the Knights of the Golden Eagle will be on hand tonight.

Thursday afternoon, Dr. Biederwolf will deliver a lecture on "Mr. and Mrs. Lot and their debut into society."

Luncheon will be served Thursday in the First M. E. church for the employed girls of the city between 11 a. m. and 2 p. m.

Don't forget Community Day on Saturday. Watch this paper for particulars later.

Choir social Monday night. "Mac." promises a great time and he ought to know.

"Mac's" duet with himself wos the feature of the musical program. He accompanied one of of his Columbia records on a Columbia graphonola and both the artificial and the real voice blended perfectly. By the way, "Mac." is an exclusive Columbia artist, and he has been called the "Sweetest Gospel Singer" in the world.

For the benefit of the choir, he sang the duet for them after the service and he also played another of his records called "All Hail, Immanuel."

Dr. Biederwolf expressed his thanks to the Griffith Piano Co. for their courtesy in loaning the Graphonola which was used last night.

GEORGIA SOLID FOR WILSON.

Macon, Ga., May 3.—The Democratic State Convention of Georgia was held here today. Full endorsement of President Wilson was unanimously voted, and the entire vote of the 28 delegats to the St. Louis convention will be cast for his renomination. Clark Howell, the Atlanta editor, is again chosen national committeeman without opposition.

NOT FAIR TO THE MAYOR.

F. M. Bird has a letter in another column in which he centers his attack on Mayor Calkins for the purchase of the city hall site. This matter has apparently worried Mr. Bird ever since the tract was bought, as he feels that the building should be put on Front street, nearer the business section. Up to date he has been the only person to publicly voice a protest through the newspapers. When Mr. Bird presented the letter yesterday he was told that his letter would be printed, not because we agreed with what he said, but because he asked that it be printed. He was also told that it would be replied to in these columns.

Mr. Bird has brought out two arguments which will not hold much weight with any thinking person. One is that Mayor Calkins is not a taxpayer. This is a mere evasion, as every man knows, for the home in which the Mayor lives is in Mrs. Calkins' name, following a custom which hundreds of persons who are property owners follow. There are plenty of other men who control large holdings in this city who apparently pay no more than poll tax, and the criticism is not justified.

Then Mr. Bird refers to the fact that no corporation or bank would buy something for a great deal more than it is worth, basing his statement on the idea that the tax assessed against any property is a just estimate of its real value. Without intending to start a discussion as to whether this argument is sound or not, we respectfully suggest to Mr. Bird that he look up the assessed valuation of the property where the State Trust Company is building, and compare it with the price in the neighborhood of $45,000 which they are generally reputed to have paid for it. Certainly the men who conduct this bank are business men of ability and in the class which Mr. Bird would put them.

If there was any great opposition manifest to the site that has been selected for the city hall, we believe that there would have long ago been a concrete protest, and what is more at least one or two members of the Council would have had something to say against the location selected. The vast majority of the people are not interested, one way or the other. All they want to see is city offices located in some place that is more roomy than a hole in the wall, and they want to see them soon.

A TALE OF A BUNNY AND RED TAPE.

Some kind and thoughtful "friend," who evidently knew of the troubles which it might cause, presented the Daily Press with a bunny sometime between Saturday and Monday morning. The bunny, it is true, was dead, which perhaps partially explains the case. It lay on the rear steps of the office, leading into the backyard, with a sad sweet look on its face on Monday morning, and everybody hesitated to touch it until the boss arrived, knowing that the Board of Health is fussy, and might make trouble if certain well-defined steps were not followed. The bunny is, if it is still there, or was if it is gone, about eight inches long. Two good digs with a shovel by the healthy office boy would have made a hole big enough to remove the corpse from sight, and out of the range of the olfactory nerves. The whole job might have taken two minutes. But not wishing to run up against the law we notified the Board of Health. We assured them that unless the rabbit came in an aeroplane it would have been impossible for him or her to reach the yard, and asked whether we might hold obsequies in the backyard. But NO! the burying of animals is contrary to the ordinance. We must notify the street department, who would charge us a half a dollar to remove the body. (Incidentally it might be remarked that the same style of rabbit, perfectly good and alive can be purchased for a half dollar.) However, a collection was taken up from the printers and reporters and it was decided that the rabbit should be removed in style and the street department was notified. When this was written the rabbit had reclined in the same position for forty-eight hours to our knowledge, and possibly longer. Having notified the Board of Health, the Press staff is afraid that if the body is touched they will be arrested, and perhaps have to give up time to Judge De Meza some morning soon. Now, with all this explanation, will some reader kindly tell us just what to do?

CENSORING SHOWS.

If the local theatres and moving picture houses live up to the restrictions put upon them by the Mayor in his message to the Council on Monday night, they certainly have their work cut out for them. Just how he expects them to determine what may be considered "off color" is certainly a problem. No one disputes that shows have been put on at local theatres during the last few months which overstepped the bounds of decency. Some have been stopped that to the average person did not seem out of the way, and others which should have been stopped have been seen and heard by Plainfielders without a word being said by the authorities.

If we are to be careful, and it seems that recent developments show the necessity for it, the city should adopt the plan used in Montclair, of censoring everything that is to be exhibited in this city. But if some of the shows are indecent, and are under the ban, how about some of the magazines, for instance, which are exhibited for sale here? We have in mind one magazine of wide circulation, which has in its May issue, under the guise of "art," a picture which is so disgusting as to call forth criticism from the most hardened persons. In fact, we cannot understand how the United States postal authorities permit its passage through the mails, and yet it is on sale on the news-stands in this city, and any persons of tender years who have the price can procure a copy. No play or moving picture that has been shown or attempted to be shown in Plainfield has begun to approach the disgusting suggestion of the photograph of the so-called "artistic statue." Everything that Mayor Calkins says is undoubtedly true, but if we are going to protect the young people of this city in a proper manner, it is time that not only theatrical productions are censored, but some of the magazines.

• • • • • •

Whether or not the recommendations made in the survey which has been completed of the city departments favor radical changes in our government, they should be made public. We fail to see why the people should be compelled to wait until printed copies are available for distribution. Of course it is impractical to print the entire 250 pages of report in a newspaper, but a synopsis can be made, and that can be given to the public through the newspapers. One thousand copies, which were ordered printed at Monday night's meeting of the Council, will not begin to furnish one for each of the taxpayers, and the only way in which to reach them is by having abstracts made for the local papers. No citizen wants to wade through a lot of technical details. They want the facts in the matter presented that a newspaper man knows how to prepare them, without a lot of dry statistics. All Plainfielders are interested in the survey. It has been talked about for months, and now that it is complete, nothing of the contents has been made public. It was even stated that some of the councilmen do not know what it contains. There seems to be a lot of unnecessary delay and mystery about giving the facts to the taxpayers, and it is time something definite was done.

• • • • • •

While it is to be regretted that local architects did not get the work on the city hall, it is at least gratifying to know that the committee is not delaying, and that it will soon be underway. If the progress is as rapid with the building as it has been with the preliminary plans, the city officers will probably be in their new home before the postoffice is finished.

• • • • • •

The matter of an engine for Netherwood has again been delayed. "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" seems to be the song every time that subject comes up in the Council. In the meantime the residents of that section are hoping and praying that there will not be another fire there right away.

Commenting on the memorial which Assemblyman Ogden H. Hammond, of Somerset county, who is so well known in the city and borough, has given in memory of his wife, the Hudson Dispatch says:

"The Mary Stevens Hammond Home for Children will provide a memorial for the wife of Assemblyman Ogden H. Hammond that will be particularly appropriate. Born and brought up at Castle Point, Hoboken, Mary Stevens' life was a useful one, and even after her mariage and removal from the city she always kept up her interest in the charities with which she had been identified during her younger days. Mrs. Hammond was one of the victims of the Lusitania, and with the sinking of that ship that useful life, among others, was stamped out.

"Mr. Hammond has stipulated, and very properly, too, that the people of Hoboken shall raise $5,000 to furnish the building and equip it for the care of unfortunate children. Many charitable people make their gifts with such stipulations, and it is a very good idea; it awakens an interest on the part of the public and makes them appreciate what is being done for them by giving them something to do themselves. Mr. Hammond could just as well have afforded $25,000 or $30,000 for his memorial gift, but he knows well that there are many people who will be glad to share in a building to the cherished memory of Mary Stevens, and the gift will be sweeter and the more appropriate by permitting all to take part in it.

On the Spur of the Moment

Adam.

Old Adam never had to dodge the sixty-horsepower car;
There was no bill collector there,
his joy in life to mar.
He never had to listen to a lot of argument
About the men who wanted to become President.

He had no fear of microbes for they camped not on his trail;
The law ne'er worried him a bit because there was no jail.
He owed no tailor's bill because he didn't dote on style;
The cost of living was a joke at which he well could smile.

He worried not about the trust nor yet the power of wealth;
There never was a single thing the matter with his health.
He had no furnace to stoke and no hard coal to buy;
The climate in the garden was as balmy as July.

There was no squawking phonographs to interrupt his sleep.
There was no barber shop quartets to sing "Down in the Deep."
No canvassers for books dropped in to occupy his time—
Old Adam must have led a life that simply was sublime.

The Two-Piece Suit.

Fernando bought a two-piece suit—
It cost five boes and was a beaut.
He'd gazed upon it o'er and o'er,
Upon a dummy in the store.
'Twas rich and racy as to style;
It could be heard for half a mile.
He wore it to a picnic and
The girls all called it simply grand.
Till suddenly there came rain
That nearly drove the lad insane.
Enough to drive a man to drink
It was to see those garments shrink.
The pant legs raced up to his knees,
It was a fine go-as-you-please.
The sleeves up to his elbows shot;
Fernando quickly quit the spot
And hurried home right in the squall
For fear he'd have no clothes at all.
He burned the road at fearful pace;
It was a real exciting race.
It seemed as though the clothes would win.
Our hero staggered home, all in;
And when at last he reached the house,
He said, "At last my freedom's
cinched,
Another block and I'd be pinched."

Speaking of Teeth.

Having his teeth blown out by an explosion was the penalty a Newton county (Mo.) miner paid for "going back on a shot," an ancient indiscretion where miners wonder why a blast does not let go and returns to learn the reason. This, however, is not supposed to connect in any way with the discovery of a tooth weighing six pounds which was picked up recently on Indian Creek, in Monroe county. Another find.

THE PATH OF BROKEN PITCHERS

--Astor Theatre--

What of the man who is suddenly called upon to change his mountain crudeness of manner to make way for the polish of etiquette? How many have faced such a situation, and how many have mastered the intricacies that arise? Dustin Farnum, the noted photoplay star, as Samson South faces such a situation in "The Call of the Cumberlands," a Pallas picture offering to be shown at the Astor Theatre today on the Paramount program. He has set a standard in artistic effort from which many may take pattern with profit. Suddenly thrust into a new world, a world of which he had only dreamed, Samson South accepts the opportunity to adopt refinement, to the relegation of his backwoods ways, with a broad grasp of the situation and an appreciation of the amusement, as well as the artistic, value of the perplexities with which he finds himself surrounded. Photoplay fans will sympathize with the big-hearted mountaineer, whose sense of justice and right makes him a leader in his awkwardness, and will rejoice with him in his mastery of complexities. Torn between a love for his mountain home and a mountain girl and a desire to work out a God-given talent with paint and canvas, Samson South, fighter and dreamer and a coming leader of the clans of the South, whose feudal activities with the Hollman faction in the Cumberland mountains have been halted by a truce, leaves for New York. Reluctantly he parts with Sally Miller, the sweetheart of his youth, and sighs at the prospect of lost association with nature's charm. Sally Miller improves the time of South's absence to add to her meagre education with books, and she, taking inspiration from fashion magazines, improves as best she can her personal appearance. The absence of South has built a bridge of doubt as to whether his love for her has faded or his heart yielded to the pulchritude of the polished city girl. With Sally Miller again in his arms, finds his soul in the grip of a strong, heroic love, and his yearning for the mountain fastnesses appeased. As a special treat to Plainfielders, we will show at this theatre tomorrow "The Strength of the Weak," featuring the pronounced screen star, Mary Fuller, whom many will remember for her wonderful work in "What Happened to Mary" series, which was viewed by thousands of movie fans throughout the country. "The Strength of the Weak" is based upon one of the greatest problem-plays ever seen on the stage. Mary Fuller has been chosen to interpret the highly emotional role of Pauline D'Arcy, an orphan girl, who has been betrayed by her legal guardian. In later years she falls in love with the son of the man under whose guardianship she had been. Here is the problem: What could she do under the circumstances? All big attractions at the Astor Theatre. First run Paramount, Bluebird and other Broadway star features. Our motto —"Quality, not quantity." Travel-stamps given.

patronage, and is certainly the talk of the town. An attraction like this is a novelty indeed, and the local management deserve the highest commendation for furnishing their patrons with so pleasing a subject. In addition to this big local photoplay today, which, by the way, is entitled "It Happened in Plainfield," Proctor's offer William Fox's first Western production entitled "Blue Blood and Red," enacted by a finished cast including George Walsh and Doris Pawn. This feature was produced by Raoul Walsh, the famous director of such productions as "Carmen," with Theda Bara, and "The Serpent," with the same star. "Blue Blood and Red" contains the breezy and carefree atmosphere of the great rolling plains and rugged mountains, and will prove a revelation to local theatre-goers. The tenth episode of "The Iron Claw" will also be shown today. Thursday will prove another gala day for local film fans, the program including Jane Grey and William Desmond in an engrossing Triangle play entitled "The Waifs." Miss Grey will be remembered for her excellent work in "Let Katy Do It," shown here some time ago, and her acting in the present vehicle is even superior to her wonderful work in her former success. A rip-roaring Keystone comedy is also included in Thursday's program entitled "His Wife's Mistake," and featuring Fatty Arbuckle conceded to be the most popular of the Keystone cast of funmakers. The show concludes with the presentation of "It Happened in Plainfield," with Madeline Pennington and James Goodwin enacting the leads. Friday, Marguerite Clark, one of the most popular of American film stars, will be seen at Proctor's in "Still Waters," one of her most successful photoplays. "The Social Pirates" will be an added feature, and the local photoplay will also be shown. Saturday will be a big day for everyone, the feature attraction including such stars and productions as Hamilton Revelle in "The Price of Malice," Minerva Courtenay imitating Charlie Chaplin in "The Champion," Harry Watson in "Musty Suffer," Mutt and Jeff in a one-reel uproar, and the conclusion of the big local movie.

TO STUMP THE COUNTRY.

New York, May 3.—General T. Coleman Du Pont leaves today for a speaking tour that will take him across the country and back in the interests of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the Presidency on a "business methods" ticket. He will wind up at the Chicago convention.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The combination program of vaudeville and moving pictures will be resumed at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow afternoon after the three days' cessation due to the engagement of the Elks' production of "The Mystic Rose." The new bill for the last half of the week will be headed by "Theo, the Balloon Girl," assisted by her "dandys," in a pretentious scenic singing and dancing novelty, coming direct to this city after a two months' successful engagement in New York. In addition to this number there will also be the following: Mae Healy and company, singing and piano offering; Benny and Mildred, presenting the farcical skit, "The Plumber;" Jessen and Jessen, singing and dancing comedy; Courtenay and company, in their latest and original sketch, "She's a Pippin," created for laughing purposes only, and carrying special scenery to make a fine background for the act, and Joe Brenner, comedian. Tomorrow's picture portion of the program will have for its feature the current episode of "The Iron Claw," the serial film that has set the whole town talking. Every Friday is reserved for "The Strange Case of Mary Page," and the Pathe semi-weekly is presented every Tuesday and Saturday. Amateur night is getting to be the rage again locally, and the Plainfield Theatre is responsible for the revival. Two big successful ones have already been held and another is scheduled for Friday night. Ambitious actors are requested to hand their names in at the box offiffice, an equal chance being given to all to win handsome prizes. Three entries have been received up to the present time, but there will be three times this number of amateur acts on the bill.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Guests That Came to the Elves' Party.

The Old Troid Chieftain.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

"WHEN an old elf king invited some goblins to his party," daddy told the children, "he called his youngest daughter to him and said, 'I suppose I must tell you now!'

"'Tell me what, father?' said his daughter. 'Tell me who all these grand guests are to be?'

"'Two of my daughters must prepare to be married,' said the king. 'The old Troid, chieftain from Norway, who lives on the Dovrefield, is coming to my party with his two sons. They own many rock castles and fastnesses and gold works. They are better than you might expect. They are coming down to the elf hill to hunt for wives. The old Troid himself is straightforward and merry. You girls will like him. I used to know him well in olden days when we drank our health together. His wife is dead. She was the daughter of the king of the chalk cliffs at Moen. I am eager to see the old fellow. They say his sons are a pair of overgrown, ill mannered cubs. But let us hope, my dear, that they are not so bad. Perhaps they will improve as they grow older. Perhaps you girls can lick them into shape.'

"'When do they come?' asked his next to the youngest daughter.

"'That depends upon wind and weather,' said the elf king. 'They travel economically and take their chance of a ship. I wanted them to come by way of Sweden, but the old chieftain wouldn't hear of it.'

"Just at this moment two will-o'-the-wisps came hopping along, one faster than the other. So one got there first.

"'They're coming; they're coming!' they both shouted.

"'Give me my crown!' cried the old elf king. 'And let me stand in the moonlight!'

"His daughters raised their scarfs and courtesied to the ground. And there stood the old Troid chieftain from the Dovrefield!

"He wore a high crown of hardened icicles and polished fir cones and, besides this, had on a bearskin coat and snowshoes. His two sons had bare necks and wore no braces because they were strong men. 'Is this a hill?' asked the youngest brother. 'In Norway we would call it a hole.'

"'Lads,' cried the old elf king, 'holes go in and hills go up! Haven't you got eyes in your heads?'

"'What surprises us is that we understand your language at all,' the two boys told him.

"'Don't make fools of yourselves!' shouted the old Troid sternly. 'One might think you were only half baked!'"

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Had Ralph Overheard the Discussion Aroused by His Letter, He Might Have Seen Light.

"Dearest Ethel: I have the best of news for you. I have found a house that is modern in every particular, and it is for sale. It was built by a widower for his second wife. The man died before they had been married a year, and the wife went elsewhere to live. It is easily the nicest house in town, excepting, perhaps, a villa built by the millionaire Jaynes, who runs the beet factory here.

"I went to see the house yesterday. The neighborhood is fine. It is next door to the junior partner of the firm, and there is a group of houses in that locality that are all good, and what is more important, they are occupied by a lot of friendly people who are real neighbors. They have a little club that includes all that congenial group, and you will find that you will not be out of the world or without society, as you have feared.

"I like the work and they like me, for they told me so. So it is a go, little girl. Get your showers started and your duds ready, for I shall come back for you in three months. Come back for my little bride, and there will be a new hanging of the crane.

"I forgot to say that there is an open fireplace in this house. You know you said you would have to have a fireplace, so this will fill the bill. I am enclosing a kodak picture of the house. By the time I get your reply I shall have heard from the owner of the place, who, I understand, is anxious to sell. Hurrah, Ethel! Give three cheers for Fairport. Your own impatient

"RALPH."

Ethel sat looking at the picture of the house with a satisfied smile on her face when her mother came into the room.

"Oh, look, mother! Here is a picure of the house Ralph is thinking of buying for our home in Fairport." Ethel handed her the picture.

"Why, that is a very handsome house. I did not think Ralph could afford to buy anything like that," remarked Mrs. Mertage in surprise.

"Well, he knows that I will not go unless everything can be arranged satisfactorily. I do not propose to live in the backwoods without the luxuries I am used to. He must keep me in style. He has simply got it to do, and so I have told him. That is why he wanted to go to this out-of-the-way place. He could not make as much money anywhere else. I think I could stand it in that house with a car and some pleasant people as neighbors." Ethel felt that she was making great concessions to go on any terms to a small town to live.

"I hope he realizes that you are very delicate and cannot stand any hardships. I have protected you from everything, because I realized how frail you were." Mrs. Mertage anxiously stroked her daughter's hair.

"I thihk he realizes that," Ethel remarked easily. "'I know how to take care of myself. I have learned that much from your constant watchfulness." She began to hurry around the room, putting on her wraps.

"Where are you going?" asked her mother.

"Over to show the picture of the house to Mildred. My, won't the girls think it's great? None of them has had a house. A flat is all any of them have been able to manage. The two that are engaged expect to live in flats." Ethel's utterance was not clear, for she held her hatpin between her teeth while she adjusted her hat.

"Of course, living in a small town would make a difference," remarked her mother.

"I shall not say anything about that, you may be sure," answered the girl as she hurried away.

HOPE CHAPEL BOY SCOUTS ENTERTAIN

Troop 9, of First M. E. Church Guest at Pleasing Affair.

Troop 12, of the local Boy Scouts, of Hope chapel, entertained Troop 9, of the First M. E. church, last night, at an exhibition of manoeuvres, followed by an entertainment and refreshments. Troop 9 was in charge of Scoutmaster Frederick A. Martin and there were about forty of the boys present in all.

Under the direction of Scoutmaster William F. Richards, Troop 12 demonstrated their skill in pyramiding, making the run, building the pyramid and descending in the record time of eight and a quarter seconds. There were also relay races, coat stretcher demonstrations and other features of Boy Scout activity. The members of Troop 9 joined in some of the races.

Later in the evening the boys were entertained by E. Gibson Smith, humorist and story-teller, and remarks were made by Frederick A. Martin, William F. Richards and others. "Hot Dogs," coffee and cake were served in conclusion.

Troop 12 had a business session previous to the reception last night and elected three new members. The last week in July was decided upon as the time for the troop's camping expedition to Neshanic. The boys will hike to Somerville and take the train from that point. All boys wishing to join the troop are requested to do so before next Tuesday as after that date those coming in will not be permitted to take part in the camping trip. This outing has been so arranged that none of the boys will be called upon for any of the expense.

HARVESTER STRIKERS NOW NUMBER ALMOST 15,000

Pottsville, Pa., May 3—The collieries of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co. in the Panther Creek Valley are idle because of a strike of day men due to the change of hour commencing from 7 to 7:30 o'clock. The men prefer the old hour.

Chicago, May 3.—The number of striking employes of the International Harvester Co. is now early 15,000. The Blur Island plant has been closed.

Two Districts Favor Agreement.

Pottsville, Pa., May 3.—An early unofficial poll of the miners attending the Miners' convention showed that districts 7 and 9 are in favor of ratification of the tentative agreement of the operators and district No. 1 is opposed to it.

Troopers in Strike Zone.

Pittsburg, May 3.—The first troops to arrive in the strike zone were detrained at East Pittsburg at 9:30 a. m. today. There was no disorder.

JUDGE CODDINGTON QUITE ILL.

Judge William R. Coddington, who was stricken with a severe chill while at the Union County Courthouse in Elizabeth, Monday, and who was compelled to take to his bed on returning home, was reported today as still being a very sick man. It was thought at first that he was suffering from pneumonia but this has not been fully established as yet. Mr. Coddington is at his home on Sandford avenue and is under the care of Dr. Zeglio.

DUNELLEN TO HAVE REPRESENTATIVE TEAM

Fast Aggregation Being Organized to Play Independent Baseball.

Definite action was taken last evening at a meeting held in Waller's garage, Dunellen, by Warry McLaughlin and Louis Dixon, of this city, and Elwood Waller, Jr., and Robert Bogardus, of Dunellen, towards giving Dunellen a representative ball team when they organized a club, and elected Louis Dixon, president and captain; Warren Mc Laughlin, vice president and manager; Elwood Waller, secretary and treasurer, and Robert Bogardus, assistant secretary and assistant treasurer. The name of the organization was decided upon as the Dunellen Baseball Club. It will be a strictly independent team and composed of the best semi-pros in this vicinity.

Bound Brook will have no baseball team this year, according to present indications owing to the inability of the management to secure a renewal of the lease on Pierce oval, and in Plainfield there will be only amateur ball, and the Dunellen management is therefore of the opinion that if a good attraction is staged every Saturday in Dunellen that large crowds will be drawn from these two cities, as well as from the home town and New Market.

The first practice of the team will be held a week from Saturday, and the first game will probably be played the Saturday before Decoration Day. The Club plans to hold several dances in the near future to provide funds for a successful start.

Manager McLaughlin has already taken steps to book the best semi-professional teams this side of Trenton. He will announce the names of his players as signed in this paper.

TICKETS SELLING RAPIDLY FOR KING'S DAUGHTERS AFFAIR

Seats for the three plays to be given in the Plainfield High School next Monday night, under the auspices of the Cup Bearers' Circle of King's Daughters are now selling at Miller's drug store or they may be secured from members of the circle and exchanged.

The plays are entitled "The Open Door," "That Brute Simmons" and "Our Aunt From California." Walter Righter will render several Scotch songs during the evening assisted by the Watchung Troop quartet. The cast of the three plays includes persons well known to the local theatrical public, practically all of them having appeared in previous productions held by the Comedy Club and the Park Club Stock Company. The doors will be open Monday evening at 8:15.

MRS. JENNINGS IS ON TRIAL IN SOMERVILLE

Mrs. Ida Jennings, charged with sending indecent literature through the mail to Mrs. Laura Bowers, of Warrenville, demanding money, was put on trial in the Somerville county court, at Somerville, this morning. Mrs. Jennings was arrested at the home of her daughter in North Plainfield two weeks ago. The only witness hard this morning was Professor Farley, of Trenton, a handwriting expert, who examined samples of Mrs. Jennings' handwriting, obtained in various ways, and declared that the writing was the same as was in the various "black hand" letters received by Mrs. Bowers. These letters demanded that $1,000 be put in an old barn, and when a false roll of bills was placed there a woman visited the barn and examined the bills. Two Plainfield policemen will swear, it is said, that it was Mrs. Jennings who went into the barn. The case will not be finished before tomorrow afternoon.

DISCUSSED SCHOOL BUDGET.

The members of the Board of School Estimate met in the Board of Education rooms last night and discussed the school budget for the coming year. The various items were considered with great care and a number of changes were made. Another meeting will be held in a short time. The Board is composed of Mayor Leighton Calkins, Messrs. Hyland and Babcock, representing the Common Council, and Messrs. Cox and Woodhull, representing the Board of Education.

EAST END CIVIC MEETING.

A large amount of routine business was transacted at last night's meeting of the East End Civic Association. Many matters pertaining to the welfare of the Netherwood section of the city were discussed at length and will be brought up for further action later. By a unanimous vote of those present, ten dollars was donated the local postoffice men for their convention on Decoration Day.

GUSTAV BARFUSS GIVEN JUDGMENT FOR $100

Gustav Barfus, proprietor of the Dunellen garage, who brought suit for $500 in the District Court this morning before Judge Hetfield against P. Edward Wisch, 80 Mercer avenue, North Plainfield, for repairs made to an automobile, was awarded a judgment of $100.

Rene P. F. Von Minden represented the plaintiff, and Assemblyman William N. Runyon was the attorney for the defendant. The bill was contested upon the ground that the work was never properly completed and that payments which were made were not credited.

Another case was that in which Albertro Micca brought action against Pietro De Marco to recover the value of cloth furnished by the plaintiff to the defendant for the purpose of making a suit of clothes and a $5 deposit paid at the time of leaving the cloth. This was in May, 1915, and the defendant has failed to deliver the suit. A judgment was awarded for $17.50. Micca was represented by John P. Owens and De Marco appeared for himself.

500 MET DEATH IN REBELLION OF IRISH

1,500 Were Wounded In Capital, Is Estimate.

London, May 3.—The work of bringing the city of Dublin, the seat of the brief rebellion, back to normal conditions, has been all but completed. Small groups of rebels are still established in narrow districts, but are gradually being surrounded and captured.

The only disturbance reported from the county of Cork occurred in the district of Fermoy, seventeen miles northeast of Cork city, where the police attempted to arrest two rebels in a house and were fired on. The rebels surrendered on the arrival of military reenforcements, but a head constable was killed.

In Cork city the Sinn Feiners have turned in their arms to the authorities. There was no rising in the city.

One dispatch from Dublin, quoting soldiers who had made a canvass of the city, places the number of rebels killed in the streets of Dublin during the insurrection at at least 500, while some 1,500 rebels were wounded. Bodies of rebels were found in the ruins of the general postoffice, the rebel stronghold; Liberty hall, where the rebels had their headquarters, and in other buildings which were bombarded by artillery. It is presumed that other bodies will be found when a further search of various ruins has been made. The dispatch says that the Dublin hospitals are overflowing with wounded, including many women and children.

The arrest of the remaining rebels in the county of Wexford, particularly at Enniscorthy, twelve miles north of the town of Wexford, is continuing.

DR. WAITE TRIAL MAY 22.

Poisoner Interested in Mural Paintings of Courtroom.

New York, May 3.—Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, who poisoned his father-in-law, John E. Peck, will be put on trial for murder before Justice Shearn in the criminal branch of the supreme court on May 22. Justice Shearn issued an order for a special panel of 250 talesmen. While arrangements were being made for his trial Waite stood in the prisoner's box and calmly examined his surroundings. He manifested considerable interest in the mural paintings behind the bench. He seemed to have fully recovered from his collapse.

MOSQUITO DEMONSTRATIONS.

Frank Putnam, one of the county mosquito inspectors, visited every local school today and left specimens of larvae, showing how the pesky things come into existence. He also left literature bearing on the subject, which will be explained by the teachers. Similar work is being done through the State.

WISHING AND GETTING.

An Old Man's Realized Day Dream and the Moral It Teaches.

They had started in the most primitive way, the man and his wife, back in the little log house, but they were dreaming of the day when they would own a farm of their own and not have to work so hard. After a time their hard toil was rewarded, and they owned a farm. Then it seemed desirable to add to this tract, and they worked a little harder. A new house seemed a necessary accompaniment to the large farm, so the work could not stop.

A son came to the age when he must be educated and have his chance in life, and they toiled on. All the time the old man dreamed of the days ahead when he could stop work and take life easy. Somehow the days did not come, or he did not recognize them when they came, for he kept on working until he had grown old and worn. Then his health failed, and he had to stop work.

The son for whom they had given precious years out of their lives now showed his gratitude by his gentle, unfailing love and care. It seemed to others that the goal had been reached—that the old man could now enjoy life, surrounded as he was by every comfort and attention. But he was quiet and sad, sitting with head bowed on his toil worn hands.

A neighbor, stopping in for a little visit, asked, "How are you getting along, grandpa?" Then the secret of all his sadness burst forth as he answered earnestly, "Oh, if I could only get out and work!"

PRETTY ROUGH SPORT.

The Game of "the Bounding Brothers of the Bosporus."

Many extraordinary forms of amusement have been devised by army officers from the earliest times down to the present day, but none perhaps have more startling characteristics than the following new and original game, which Sir Robert Baden-Powel describes in "Memories of India:"

It was introduced into the mess by a brother of our colonel, who came to stay with him. We believed him to be a quiet, harmless planter from Behar, and so he seemed throughout the evening, both during and after dinner, when he remained watching us playing the fool in various ways for our own amusement. But evidently our ways did not strike him as original, and he therefore invited us to play the great game of the bounding brothers of the Bosporus, and when he had once shown us we joined most heartily in the sport.

The game had few rules, but a certain amount of etiquette. The apparatus consisted of all the furniture, which was piled in a heap near the center of the room, and a writing table, which was placed a couple of yards from it. You were expected then to clap your hands three times—that was the etiquette of the game—then run at the table and turn heels over head on it into the pile of furniture, shouting as you did so, "I am a bounding brother of the Bosporus!" That was all. It was quite simple, but how it hurt when you landed on the upturned legs of a chair or the side of a table!

Ada Rehan's Bandsman.

Miss Ada Rehan used to say that the finest appreciation of her acting she ever observed came from a bandsman in the orchestra of a Birmingham theater. When she played the angry Katharine she had one piece of superb fury—a swift march to the back of the stage, a right about turn and then a straight march down the stage, pulling up short and sharp at the footlights. One night she saw a bandsman sitting directly in her line of advance shrink back in his chair at the moment of the full stop at the footlights.

"Sure, he thought, I wasn't going to stop on the stage," Miss Rehan said. "I wonder if he is married to a Katharine."

The next day she sent him a box of cigars.—Manchester Guardian.

BERLIN'S REPLY EXPECTED SOON

Arbitration May Be Proposed by Germany.

SUBMARINE ACTIVITY LESS

Kaiser's Answer May Arrive In Day or So—Lansing Refuses to State How Request to Arbitrate Would Be Met. Gerard Has Sent No Direct Word.

Washington, May 3.—That a proposal for arbitration may form a feature of the German reply to President Wilson's note demanding an abandonment of present methods of submarine warfare is indicated by unofficial reports reaching here. Secretary Lansing declined to say how the United States would receive such a proposal.

It has been stated authoritatively that the United States would not arbitrate questions involving American lives, but questions not directly connected with loss of life might be regarded as proper subjects for future arbitration, it is explained, provided Germany first meets the basic demand of the United States by either abandoning its submarine campaign against merchantmen or by bringing it strictly within the confines of international law.

Secretary Lansing is still without direct news from Ambassador Gerard, but is momentarily expecting a message outlining the result of the ambassador's visit to the German emperor. Nothing further has come from Berlin concerning the date of Germany's official reply to the president's demands, and the cabinet met with no new developments to consider.

Unofficial reports indicate that the German note may reach here Thursday.

A More Hopeful View.

The situation presented a slightly more hopeful aspect in view of press dispatches from Berlin that the German note had been completed and that it was believed in Berlin that it is so framed as to avert the chances of a diplomatic break.

Some officials were inclined to interpret this as meaning that Germany will at least temporarily abandon her present submarine campaign against commerce carriers in the war zone pending further negotiations on the issue.

Other officials, however, were not so hopeful. They point out that Germany may regard counter proposals or a compromise as hopeful, whereas it is generally conceded here that the president will not compromise on the main issue.

The lull in submarine activities in the war zone has again caused comment by state department officials. Neither Ambassador Gerard nor Count von Bernstorff has intimated to the state department that German submarine commanders have been instructed to refrain from their illegal methods while the present negotiations are under consideration in Berlin, but it is apparent to officials here that the submarine campaign is not being pushed as before.

This has led to the belief in certain quarters here that Germany has issued confidential instructions to submarine commanders temporarily to halt their attacks against merchant ships, but is not willing to go on record as having done so. The president's demand upon Germany stipulates that the imperial government shall not only effect an immediate abandonment of present methods of submarine warfare, but shall make a declaration to that effect.

Await Germany's Promise.

There is some talk here of the possibility that Germany may explain through Ambassador Gerard that the imperial government will temporarily guarantee that no further merchantmen will be "illegally" sunk, but will not make a declaration to that effect. The reason for this, it is explained, might be a refusal on the part of Germany to give British commerce the satisfaction of knowing that trade routes were henceforth not perilous.

The effect on public opinion in Germany may also be a consideration, it is said, in putting Germany to decline making an open declaration, which might be construed as weakness on the part of the government.

Officials regard it as at least possible that Germany may give confidential assurances to the United States that submarine operations will be held in suspension pending an agreement over the issue. They base this belief on the fact that the submarine campaign apparently is being rendered inactive, although Germany has made no declaration to this effect.

LAW TO PUNISH SPIES.

Senate Committee Would Guard Defense Secrets More Closely.

Washington, May 3.—A bill ordered reported by the senate naval committee broadens the scope of the law making the betrayal of secrets bearing on the defenses of the country an offense punishable by a fine and imprisonment. The law is ambiguous in some respects.

At the request of the authorities it is proposed to amend the law applying its provisions to any one who may "seek" information concerning the defenses, as well as to those who may acquire or dispose of such information. The amendments are intended to apply to contractors and their employees and others who have business with the government pertaining to the national defenses.

CITY UNION ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the City Union of King's Daughters will be held tomorrow at 11 o'clock in the Day Nursery, 502 West Front street. It is earnestly requested that every King's Daughter be present. The original plans for the meeting designated Vincent chapel as the place, but circumstances afterward compelled the change to the Day Nursery.

WOMAN AS DOG CATCHER.

Daughter of Late W. M. Ivins Appointed by Freehold Authorities.

Freehold, May 3.—Mrs. William S. Holmes, a daughter of the late William M. Ivins, applied for the job of official dog catcher, and the board of town commissioners gave her the position. She will serve without pay.

Mrs. Holmes explained that she had taken care of many homeless dogs and when no owner appeared had had them humanely put out of the way.

LIQUIDATION IS HALTED.

Sale of Pennsylvania Steel to Bethlehem Company Must Wait.

Trenton, May 3.—Federal Judge Rellstab granted an order restraining the Pennsylvania Steel Company of New Jersey from going into liquidation.

The order was applied for by Joseph H. Brandt of Philadelphia. He sets forth an agreement by which the steel company was to sell its properties to the Bethlehem Steel company for $31,941,630.

CLASSY ENTRY LISTS OF CUEISTS.

One of the classiest lists of billiard players ever entered in a local tourney has signed to take part in the Elks' 1916 event which opened up this week. No better field of cueists ever competed for a local title and it is a foregone conclusion that the competition for the prizes will be keen and interesting. George York, chairman and secretary of the Elks' billiard committee, is handling the managerial reins and to say that Georgs knows his business is putting it mildly. He has studied the calibre of the players in the club and the handicaps that have been allotted indicate that the contests will be about as evenly waged as could be anticipated. The Daily Press will give special attention to the reports of these matches and completed statistics relative to each night's play will be furnished. Valuable prizes have been offered and these have served as an incentive to inspire competition of a spirited kind.

A PROBLEM RIGHTLY DISPOSED OF.

When the City League granted a franchise to the Farmer A. C. at the meeting Monday night it accepted the only course that was open to the solution of an important problem. Many times it has been rumored that Dunellen has been clamoring for a chance to get into the schedule but no formal application was made by those handling the Dunellen combine. Negligence on the part of the Dunellen management was all that prevented it from gaining consideration from the league magnates and when the question of filing an application was placed squarely up to the Dunellenite present at Monday's meeting he refused to take the responsibility of making application for admittance. Dunellen ballists have no one to blame but themselves and this knocking that has been going the rounds must cease. The Farmers were rightly entitled to the berth and if they didn't get it they would have just cause to kick, and kick hard.

• • • • • • •

CITY LEAGUE FOR PLAINFIELD ONLY.

Another angle of the baseball franchise controversy has arisen in the matter of taking an out-of-town team into a local circle. Why should the magnates do this when there is a Plainfield team available? To take in Dunellen, Bound Brook, Scotch Plains, Westfield, or any other town would mean a complete revision of the by-laws and a lot of red tape such as baseball moguls try to steer clear of. Any local outfit should be given preference over a foreign ball club and the sooner the surrounding towns learn that the City Baseball League is not for their benefit the better it will be for them.

• • • • • • •

WHY NOT THE CENTRAL NEW JERSEY LEAGUE?

Inasmuch as several towns hereabouts are desirous of getting into the national pastime on an organized basis why wouldn't the reorganization of the old Central New Jersey circuit be expedient at this time? Plainfield could undoubtedly place a semi-pro contingent in the field and it is a well known fact that Warry McLaughlin and his Dunellen charges are willing to step in at a moment's notice. Bound Brook has its ball stars; Scotch Plains is waiting for organization; Westfield is on edge, and Somerville could shape up in a couple of weeks. Just who to look to for this reorganization is hard to determine, but it seems as though Ernest Dorflinger, former manager of the Plainfield Pets, could be induced to shoulder the burden and Ernie well knows the course of procedure necessary to the formation of a new circuit. It would not interfere with the City League as there are plenty of players idle at the present time who would be willing to put a shoulder to the wheel and help boost the project.

NEW LINEUP FOR NORTH PLAINFIELD.

When North Plainfield High School lines up against Westfield this afternoon on the baseball diamond it will have a greatly revised lineup. Just who will appear in the makeup is a matter of speculation but some decided shifts have been announced and indications are that these will be for the benefit of the team as a whole. Westfield High School has a stellar aggregation of ballists representing it this year and the boroughites with their new battle front will be put to a severe test.

• • • • • • •

HOW DO P. H. S. AND N. P. H. S. SHAPE UP?

Some idea of the relative merits of the Plainfield and North Plainfield Interscholastic League contenders may be gained this afternoon from the showing North Plainfield makes against Westfield. To date no idea of the comparative abilities of the two rivals could be gleaned and while Plainfield is considered by some to be slightly the stronger other wiseacres have maintained that the boroughites are on a par. Neither school has shown anything out of the ordinary in the way of hitting and fielding and the pitching staffs of both combines fall below the usual standard. Younger material enters largely into the lineup of the two school forces and it is hard to determine just what to expect of them when they face each other on the playing field.

STOP CUSHION THROWING.

Down in Chicago they are afraid that people will misjudge their enthusiasm unless they get rough. Now we take it that genuine interest can be evinced in some other way than by beating some one up or killing some one. We believe a man or woman can show his or her enthusiasm in a way which harms no one, but still leaves the proper impression. For years the Chicago crowd has been throwing cushions around after a game, or during a game, to show that they are tickled to death. The fact is they seem to be tickled to death. Of course, nobody has been killed, but this is no fault of the cushion throwers. It is with genuine pleasure that one is now able to record the fact that cushion throwing will soon become a thing of the past, for it has been tabooed in the Chicago parks. All of which causes one to think of the enthusiastic exclamation of a still living former president.

WELL KNOWN GOLFERS IN SPRING TOURNEY

Annual Affair to Be Held on Somerville Course Saturday, May 20.

The annual spring tournament of the New York Fire and Marine Insurance Golf Association will be held on Saturday, May 20, at the Somerville Country Club, it being open to all members of the association. The events will include an 18 hole medal play handicap, for Classes A and B, in the morning, with prizes for the best net and second best net scores; an 18 hole best ball four ball medal play handicap in the afternoon, prizes to be awarded to teams making lowest net and second lowest net scores. Prize for the championship of the association will be awarded for best gross score in the morning competition.

Comprising the competitors will be a number of prominent golfers, including Oswald Kirby, former Metropolitan and State champion; Max Marston, present champion; Louis M. James, former National American champion of the United States; Gardiner White, Metropolitan golfer; Louis Byard, president of the Baltusrol Golf Club; Herbert Buxton, J. Whitney Baker and Sydney Perrin and A. R. Fiske, of Plainfield.

Following the tournament there will be a dinner at the clubhouse in the evening. The officers of the association are as follows: President, Harry W. Barley; vice president E. S. Powell, Jr.; treasurer, Edward Gallagher; secretary, Will T. Glenney.

MANAGER EGGIE ANNOUNCES P. H. S. TENNIS SCHEDULE

Manager Eustace Eggie, of the P. H. S. tennis team, has just announced his schedule for the coming year. It will include nine matches, opening with Flemington on Parker Field, Friday. McAnneny, Case, Carter, Eggie and Smith are among those trying for berths on the team. The schedule follows: May 5, Flemington at Plainfield; May 8, Westfield at Plainfield; May 11, Woodbridge at Plainfield; May 19, Woodbridge at Woodbridge; June 3, E. Orange at Plainfield; June 10, Barringer at Plainfield; June 16, Dickinson (Jersey City) at Jersey City.

PLAINFIELD WOMEN WILL COMPETE IN GOLF MATCHES

A competition which is expected to raise the standard of women's golf in this and the metropolitan section will begin today, when fourteen teams from as many clubs in membership of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association tee up in the first of a series of matches.

The competition will continue most of the season, and if at the finish better golfers have not been produced, it will be because improvement is not in those who take part.

New Jersey will have twelve clubs engaged today. The schedule of the New Jersey section for today is as follows:

Arcola at Hackensack, Forest Hills at Montclair, Glen Ridge at Englewood, Baltusrol at Plainfield, Westfield at Norwood, Cranford at Hollywood.

JACK MARTIN HITS UNDER THE .200 MARK

Plainfielder Fielding Well But His Hitting is Still Below Par.

Josh Devore, the Milwaukee American Association League club's big league outfielder, was leading the team in batting up to last Wednesday's game. Josh had a batting average of .381 for five games. The other Brewers who succeeded in getting their names in the averages were down toward the bottom of the percentages. Jay Kirke, the heavy hitter, was only batting .261. Thorpe was next with an average of .241, while Martin, Benson and Lewis were all under the .200 mark. Leonard, of Columbus, was leading the league with an average of .483 for seven games. Altizer, the veteran miller, was second with an average of .478 for seven games.

The Louisville Colonels led the teams in batting with an average of .316 since the season started. The Colonels collected a total of sixty-seven hits for the seven games played up to that time. Milwaukee was down in the cellar in team batting with an average of .188. The Brewers collected but forty hits in seven games, which is rather poor considering the many sluggers that are on the team.

In fielding, the Colonels again showed their supremacy by leading the league with an average of .976. Only nine errors were made by the Colonels in the seven games played. The Brewers again held possession of last place with an average of .933. The fielding of the club was erratic, a total of nineteen errors being charged up to the local team.

WOMAN TEACHES BASEBALL.

Cincinnati School Principal Handles Team Like Big League Pilot.

Cincinnati has the first and only woman on record as having full charge of a baseball team. She is Miss Edith Hill, assistant principal of the Whittier public school.

Like major league managers, Miss Hill holds meetings, arranges the batting order of the team, outlines the playing policy and during a game sits on the bench and directs players when they are at bat. From the bench Miss Hill calls for the hit and run, the squeeze and other dazzling inside plays.

Miss Hill became a manager through necessity. Her position made it necessary for her to take charge of the baseball team, and she immediately became successful. She was taught the fine points of the game by her brother, a ball player.

DEARTH OF STABLES FOR JUNIOR MEETING

Waverly Track Without Adequate Room for Keeping Horses During Event.

The lack of stable room at the Waverly track, in Weequahic Park, Newark, continues to worry the board of directors of the Road Horse Association of New Jersey. At present many of the race horse owners are wondering where they will be able to obtain stable facilities near the track, as a result of obtaining less than half of the stalls they made requisition for. The problem became more cumbersome Monday night, when Secretary James M. Beldon informed the directors at their monthly meeting at the home of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club that only thirty-six of the forty-eight stalls recently contracted for will be ready for occupancy when the Junior League of Amateur Driving Clubs meeting is held in Newark in July.

Recently the special committee which is in charge of the Junior League meeting, Theodore S. Miller, Sr., and Secretary Beldon, received assurances money for stalls would be forthcoming from the committee of one hundred for the erection of forty-eight stalls. The money is sufficient to pay for only thirty-six stalls. An extra appropriation of about $600 is needed to finish the twelve other stalls. Should this be granted and the stalls finished, there would then be stabling facilities for 120 horses, which would take care of the large majority of the horses sent here for the meetings this summer. As it is, many members of the association have already rented stalls from private concerns and individuals for the summer in the vicinity of the track.

FASTEST 24 HOUR TRIP MADE IN A HUDSON SIX

All records for a 24-hour trip on land, sea or in air were broken yesterday when Ralph Mulford, in a Hudson Super-Six, drove his car 1,819 miles on the Sheepshead Bay track for an average of 75 19-24 miles an hour. Mulford did not stop or even leave the car except to fill with gasoline and oil each 150 miles, and to make one tire change, although even then he had no blowout or puncture, simply believing a change would insure safety. At this rate of speed he could travel from New York to SanFrancisco in 42 hours. The run was official, and judges and timers were from the American Automobile Association. The machine was a stock car, and was the one in which Mulford made a mile in 35.11 seconds, or at the rate of 102.22 miles an hour at Ormond Beach a few weeks ago.

JUNIOR JOTTINGS

When the Seventh Graders clashed on Hope Common some time ago, Tom McInerney made his debut as a first sacker. Tom is a good fielder and competent with the stick but he has one fault. He is too anxious to cover all of the infield positions at once. In this respect he is not unlike many successful ballists. However, the practice never insured any one success.

The Hebrew lads have a ball team of which they are justly proud. Jewish diamond artists are among the most successful players of the day and the singular motive of starting a strictly Hebrew team in this city is, perhaps, centered about this fact.

Harold McCusker is another first baseman. Harold is not out of place at that station. He has performed at every position, including that of pitcher, but has not met with the success attained while coverting around the first bag. McCusker is a member of the Seventh Grade aggregation.

It is interesting to note that two or three City Leaguers were, only last season, junior ball players. The two Mullin lads, Frank and Vincent, have secured berths in the "big league," and are sure to be successful. Baseball in Plainfield seems to run in families.

The Netherwood boys have organized a team under the leadership of Herr Cartwright, who expects his charges to rout all opposition. A game will be played with the Whittier School team early during the coming week.

The Washington School baseball team is having a rather strenuous season and has encountered some stiff opposition. The Washingtonians believe in taking plenty of exercise and practice daily.

Joe Newell, the peer of all local juvenile twirlers, expects to have a successful season. Joe is signed up with the Pans and is sure to have the opportunity to shine.

Leo Keating, otherwise known as "Pop," and distinguished cousin of Ben Egan, the former Cleveland and now Newark catcher, is also a member of Poling's clan. Leo is not a catcher but prefers the region around short.

Jack Rimmer is another lad who has returned to the fold. Jack began his diamond career as a pitcher, but like many others, found that he was better fitted for an outfield position. Jack, as a pitcher, has the goods but lacks control and the build necessary for every successful hurler.

After High Wheel Sulky Mark.

It is possible an effort will be made to lower Nelson's record of 2:11¾ to a high wheel sulky, made in Trenton many years ago, at the light harness races which will be a feature of the sporting program of Newark's centennial. The meet will be run at the Waverly track in Weequahic park during the three day Junior League of Amateur Driving Clubs meet in July.

Seen and Heard on the Street

"Pete," Spooner avenue's famous and destructive mousehound, beginning a City Court case by playfully chewing the center out of a neighbor's best linen table cloth hanging on the clothesline.

A gang of misguided city workmen selecting a most inopportune time of the day, noon, to spread great gobs of oil all over one of the business streets. Rush of traffic a few minutes later, due to hungry workers hurrying home to apply the "nose bag" tracking said oil all over the sidewalk and in adjacent stores.

Real Estate sign in big black letters decorating the landscape on Martine avenue: "Lots for sale. Apply C. S. Hazeltine, Dunellen."

Decidedly dignified woman driving a fine big spick-and-span touring car down Park avenue, blissfully unconscious of the fact that a street urchin was comfortably curled in the tire rack on behind.

Perplexed business man on North avenue using up a bottle of ink trying to figure out what to do after the Board of Health had told him it was against the law to bury a dead rabbit in the backyard and then finding the corpse with him two days after the street department had been asked to remove it.

Local follower of the metropolitan fun columns calling the attention of A. E. Kenney, the inventor, to the following article in "Puck;" clipped from the Lancaster, O., "Eagle," and displayed under the caption of "No She Won't:" Mrs. Naomi Wetzel has taken the agency of Kenney Needle Showers, one of the best arrangements for a bathtub ever invented. It requires no curtain and can be attached cheaply by anyone. She will call on you and demonstrate.

KILLS CHILDREN, CUTS THROAT

Penn's Grove Woman Sets House on Fire.

HUSBAND DESERTED HER.

Neighbor Is Burned While Aiding In Rescue — Mother Not Expected to Live — Youngest Child Was Only Three Months Old — Woman Had Been Acting Strangely.

Penn's Grove, May 3.—Despondent because her husband had deserted her, Mrs. C. Sinklowitch killed her three children, ranging in age from three months to five years, and attempted to kill herself by setting her home on fire after cutting her throat. She is in the Delaware hospital at Wilmington, Del., and is not expected to live.

William Meyer, a neighbor, who aided in the rescue work, was badly burned on the arms and hands.

Three weeks ago Sinklowitch, who was a sweeper in one of the Du Pont powder plants at Carney's Point, deserted his family. His wife had been acting strangely ever since, but neighbors thought it was only natural worry over the future of her children and herself.

Frank Ballinger, who lives next door to the Sinklowitch home, noticed smoke coming from the house. He aroused William Meyer, another neighbor, and they broke in. The interior was a mass of flames. Meyer dashed into the bedroom and found Mrs. Sinklowitch lying on the burning bed, with her throat cut. The children lay beside her.

All were either dead or unconscious. Meyer seized the mother and youngest child and, although their clothing was afire, carried them to the street. Then he returned for the other two, but both were dead when he got them to the street.

BEGIN TULP DIVORCE TRIAL.

Minister's Wife Names Choir Singer as Corespondent.

Newark, May 3.—Trial of the divorce action brought by Mrs. Anna E. Tulp of Hackensack against the Rev. A. Peter Tulp, former rector of Christ Episcopal church at that place, was begun before Vice Chancellor Foster.

Miss Eleanor Dixon, daughter of former City Counsel Warren Dixon of Jersey City and a granddaughter of the late Supreme Court Justice Jonathan Dixon, is named in the action. She was a member of the church choir when Tulp was pastor.

A sensational letter written by the pastor to the young woman is the principal basis for the divorce action. Miss Dixon appeared in court with her mother. Her father is looking after her interests. Former Judge Thomas F. Henry and Matthew J. Ready are defending Tulp. William C. Mackay, Jr., of Hackensack is counsel for Mrs. Tulp.

Baird Defeats Bugbee In Test Vote For Chairman.

Trenton, May 3.—Both the Republican and Democratic delegations to the national conventions of their parties met for organization here. The Democratic conference was a cut and dried affair.

The Republicans developed a contest, which leaves its organization over until the delegation arrives at Chicago. The first developed the fact that the Baird-Murphy-Dalrymple faction controls the delegation, but no unit rule was adopted.

State Chairman Newton A. K. Bugbee, who, when named to run as one of the "Big Four," declined to have his name bracketed with his three running mates, seeks to lead the delegation. It has been customary to elect the state chairman as chairman of the delegation.

—When discontent reaches a certain point, the furnished room advertisements become very interesting to some people.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

FRENCH WINNING LOST TERRITORY

Gen. Petain Slowly But Surely Defeating the Crown Prince.

ZEPPELIN DESTROYED

Three of Crew Sacrificed Lives to Guard Secrets — German Note Here Saturday—Kaiser May Ask U. S. to Plead for Peace.

Paris, May 4.—A bombardment of the utmost violence was reported on the Verdun front today by the French War Office. The official communique stated that the French positions at Le Mort Homme, northwest of Verdun, had been extended and consolidated. In the region of Avocourt, on the west side of the Meuse river, there was hand-grenade fighting during the night. General Petain is throwing heavy forces against the Germans west of the Meuse, and the brilliant assaults are slowly but surely winning back territory which had previously been lost to the army of the Crown Prince.

Destroyed Zeppelin Secrets.

Stavinger, Norway, May 4.—Three men of the crew of the Zeppelin L-20, wrecked on the Norwegian coast yesterday after a raid on Scotland, gave their lives to prevent Count Zeppelin's secrets from reaching foreign governments.

Sixteen of the Zeppelin's crew, rescued and interned for the remainder of the war, told the story of their comrades' heroism on their arrival at Malde, southwest of Stavanger.

"First of all, we were not damaged by English anti-aircraft guns," said an under-officer. "They only began shelling us after we had discharged most of our bombs, and not a single shell burst within 100 yards of our dirigible.

"For some reason or other out petrol supply became exhausted. As we passed out over the coast on the return to our base we were caught by a gale that drove us eastward at a terrific rate of speed. When we fought the wind and tried to point southward, we only succeeded in damaging the dirigible beyond repair and from that time on we simply drifted at the mercy of the gale until we sighted the coast of Norway.

Note Due Here Saturday.

Washington, May 4.—Secretary of State Lansing today received a cablegram from Ambassador Gerard, saying he expected to receive a note from the Berlin Foreign Office today. On this basis the State Department expects the note to arrive in Washington on Saturday.

Wants U. S. to Sue for Peace.

Amsterdam, May 4.—The Nieuve Courant suggests that Germany is trying to obtain American peace intercession as the price of Germany's aceptance of President Wilson's note on submarine warfare. The discussions at German headquarters and the telegrams between the Government at Washington and Ambassador Gerard, it asserts, are not entirely connected with the submarine crisis.

Civilians Leave Metz.

London, May 4.—A despatch to a news agency from Amsterdam says that it is reported on good authority that the civil population has begun to evacuate Metz.

Food Riots in Budapest.

London, May 4.—Figures collected by Consul-General Skinner show that exports from the Port of London to the United States during the first four months of the year 1916 increased $13,000,000 over the same period last year. The increase was due chiefly to the diversion of trade caused by the British blockade.

Exports from England Increase.

The Hague, May 4.—Fifteen persons were killed in food riots in Budapest on Sunday, according to private advices received here today.

More Russ. Soldiers in France.

Marseilles, May 4.—Another contingent of Russian soldiers arrived here this morning and was met with notable military and popular receptions. The troops proceeded to the camp at Mirabeau.

Germans Admit Loss.

Berlin, May 4.—French troops have succeeded in getting a foothold in the German positions on Le Mort Homme. Official admission of the French success at Dead Man's Hill, northwest of Verdun, was made today by the War Office. Simultaneously with the French drive in the Verdun sector the British have begun to press home violent attacks at the northern end of the line. The British have delivered a thrust against Lens, the strategic railway town held by the Germans in Northern France, but their attempt to advance ended in failure, the War Office stated.

WIFE SAYS RECTOR IS "BIGGEST LIAR"

Mrs. Tulp's Suit for Divorce From Rev. A. Peter Tulp Begun in Chancery Court.

That her husband was "one of the biggest liars on the face of the earth" was an assertion made by Mrs. Anna E. Tulp before Vice-Chancellor Foster in her suit for divorce from the Rev. A. Peter Tulp, when the case was begun in Newark on Tuesday. Mrs. Tulp named as co-respondent Miss Elinor Dixon, daughter of Warren Dixon, of Jersey City, and granddaughter of the late Supreme Court Justice Jonathan Dixon.

Mr. Tulp, who is a graduate of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, was shortly afterward acting pastor of Marconnier chapel, and he was known here, where he has preached in Trinity Reformed church. His last charge was as rector of Christ Episcopal church, Hackensack. The couple was married at Hasbrouck Heights in 1905.

The hearing was enlivened by the reading of letters alleged to have been writtn by the minister, while Mrs. Tulp's testimony was a recital of abuse and threats on the part of her husband, and detectives who were employed to follow the minister and Miss Dixon told of what they had seen. Mr. Tulp, when called to the stand, denied all the allegations. The case went over to June 21.

CAPSTICK NAMED FOR REICHSTAG

New York Times Suggests He Would Be Worthy Member of That Body.

The New York Times now nominates the Hon. John H. Capstick, representative in Congress from this district, for a seat in the German Reichstag. Its editorial columns this morning carried the following comment on his answer to the German-American Alliance of Elizabeth:

CAPSTICK OF JERSEY.

The American constituents of the Hon. John H. Capstick, Representative in Congress of the Fifth New Jersey District, have new reason to be proud of him. The other day the German-American Alliance of Elizabeth and thereabouts voted its thanks and sent its promise of support to Mr. Capstick for his vote against tabling the McLemore resolution. This testimonial to Mr. Capstick's ardent German patriotism did not endear him to the America First men in his district. No doubt his mail has brought him numerous less bland and sugared opinions than those he has won from the Germany First squad. At any rate there were malicious rumors that he wasn't exactly tickled to death by his certificate and recommendation from the German-American Alliance. In justice to itself and him the secretary of that association of loyalists publishes Mr. Capstick's thanks for its thanks and promises:

"I thank you for apprising me of the resolution recently adopted by the German-American Alliance of Elizabeth and vicinity, and through you as secretary, desire to express to the members my apreciation of their support, coming unsolicited as it does. This indication of confidence is increasingly esteemed and gratifying."

This dulcet epistle with the resolution that begot it is all the campaign literature Mr. Capstick's Democratic opponent in the Fifth New Jersey District will need to circulate next fall. Mr. Capstick would be a worthy member of the Reichstag. His place in an American Congress should know him no more after the end of his present term.

CITY HALL PLANS ARE NOW ON EXHIBITION

SENATOR GORMAN NOT TO BE CANDIDATE

New York Representative Will Drop Out of Public Life This Year.

New York, May 4.—United States Senator James A. O'Gorman will not be a candidate to succeed himself. Definite announcement to that effect was made by the Senator in Washington last night. Senator O'Gorman's term will expire on March 4 next

Although Senator O'Gorman's friends professed surprise at the announcement of his retirement, such action had been anticipated and predicted in both Republican and Democratic circles for several weeks, as it was known the Senator was not in entire sympathy with either the Wilson administration or the Tammany organization.

RELEASE SUSPECTED AUTOMOBILE THIEF

Insufficient Evidence Found to Convict Theo. McGuire, Arrested in Jersey City.

Theodore Mc Guire, who was arrested as a result of detective work by Police Chief Owen Mohan, of Dunellen, in Jersey City last Friday night on suspicion of being implicated in the stealing of the automobile of Mayor E. B. Latham from the latter's garage on the evening of April 10, has been let go after being detained in the Dunellen lockup for several nights because the evidence against him was considred insufficient. Chief Mohan became suspicious of Mc Guire when he learned that he was in Dunellen, after a long absence, on the morning of the day the machine was stolen.

When the Dunellen chief learned in addition to this that Mc Guire had caused a postal card signed and addressed by him to a friend in Dunellen to be mailed from Buffalo on the day on which the machine was taken, and another one to be mailed three days later from Toronto, and still another four days later from Pittsburgh, he became convinced that Mc Guire was the man he was looking for.

When arrested in due course of time Mc Guire upon being put through the third degree admitted that he was in Dunellen on April 10 and that none of the postals had been mailed personally by him in the above cities. When asked if he hadn't had the postals mailed as an alibi in the event of his being accused of stealing the automobile, Mc Guire fervently denied being connected directly or indirectly with the theft.

ANNUAL EXHIBITION AT THE HARTRIDGE SCHOOL

Over two hundred visitors, including relatives and friends of the pupils, attended the annual exhibition of the work of the various classes of the Hartridge School yesterday afternoon. The exhibit took place between the hours of 3 and 6, and included demonstrations of calisthenics ad asethetic dancing by the pupils, as well as the class work of the elementary and art departments. The latter was especially interesting, the handiwork of the students in the whole school being on exhibition, the many articles showing a marked degree of proficiency. A chart showing the comparative advancement of the first, second and third grades' daily work was a source of much interest to the visitors.

During the afternoon the children of the gymnastic department gave demonstrations of dumbbell drills, relay races, Indian club swinging and aesthetic dances. The gymnastic exhibition and dances were under the direction of Miss Alice Spear, a graduate of the Sargent Physical Culture School, of Boston, Mass., and the art exhibit was in charge of Miss Mae Robinson, of New York. The work of the pottery classes was especially commendable, each article having been personally fired by the pupil.

AMERICAN ARRESTED AS IRISH REBEL.

London, May 4.—James M. FLOWERS GALORE AT ELKS' SHOW

Producers and Principals Showered With Floral Beauties.

MRS. SKILLING HONORED

Plainfield Theatre Filled to Capacity for the Third Time to See Big Operatic Production—Dover Lodge Sends a Large Delegation.

Another capacity audience witnessed the third and final presentation of the Japanese-American light opera, "The Mystic Rose," at the Plainfield Theatre last night. Beside the local patrons attending there was a delegation of thirty members from Dover Lodge, No. 782, B. P. O. E., and smaller contingents from New Brunswick, Somerville and Elizabeth Elk lodges. Owing to the great number of enthusiastic encores and presentations of special gifts to the producers and flowers to principals, the final fall of the curtain did not occur until 11:45. Nevertheless everybody in the audience with the exception of those who had to catch trains retained their seats, absolutely loath to go away until absolutely the last bit of the beautiful production had been witnessed or heard.

The almost countless number of flowers in the children's ballet were almost equalled by the great profusion of floral bouquets passed over the footlights. The Dover Elks passed up a huge vase full of beautiful Jack roses to Harry Blimm as a token of their fraternal friendship for Plainfield lodge. In his anxiety to get them to a safe haven Mr. Blimm came near causing a catastrophe, knocking over the vase but dexterously catching it before it reached the floor. The unexpected byplay caused a big laugh. Miss Juliette Brancati, the leading soprano soloist; Miss Eadie Lee, Miss Josephine Murphy, Miss Marie C. Schaf, and John J. Campbell were all recipients of floral remembrances.

Just after the fall of the curtain on the opera proper and before the ballet was presented, Mrs. Robert Skilling, wife of the composer and producer of the opera, was called before the footlights. She was then presented with a gold bracelet with a watch attached, the gift of the "Tourist Double Septette," a set of three gold baby pins for her eight-week-old daughter from the three chaperones of the children in the ballet, Mrs. A. E. Force, Mrs. Edward J. Harding, Jr., and Mrs. W. R. Causbrook, a beautiful basket of flowers from the Elks' entertainment committee, and another from the Dancing Tea Girls. Mrs. Skilling was so overwhelmed as to be able only to murmur "Thank you." Mr. Skilling received another bouquet from his individual admirers.

As on the two previous occasions, the audience last night was absolutely delighted with every feature of the opera. Mr. Skilling again came in for hearty congratulations on the result of his work and the Elks' entertainment committee, which made all the arrangements, came in for a large share of praise. Much of the success of the production is due to the efforts of William C. Mulvey, chairman of the committee, who was also chairman last year, and who made the 1915 minstrel show the big success that it was. Mr. Mulvey has been working incessantly for the last two months and the splendid result attained is evidence of what he has done. His associate committee members, all of whom deserve congratulations, were Joseph C. Martin, Edward J. Harding, Jr., Chauncey F. Stout and John H. Cose.

The "kiddies" in the ballet of the flowers and butterflies were perfect in their respective parts last night and this portion of the program was again a big feature. Each group of flowers and butterflies was given an ovation after its song and dance while the applause accorded the shamrocks was Malcolm W. Strong, Formerly of This City, Killed at Los Angeles, Cal.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Strong, of Central avenue, received a telegram this morning informing them of the sudden death of their son, Malcolm W. Strong, in an automobile accident at Los Angeles, California. No further particulars were given, and the family is anxiously awaiting the details.

Mr. Strong, who formerly lived here and was well-known, has been in Los Angeles for some time, being engaged in business there. The telegram received here was signed by a stranger to Mr. and Mrs. Strong, but who is supposd to be a friend of their son.

KING'S DAUGHTERS PLAN BIG RALLY

Representatives Discuss Matter at Annual Session Held at Day Nursery Today.

Officers were elected, reports for the past six months presented and various routine business matters transacted at the annual meeting of the City Union of King's Daughters in the Day Nursery on West Front street this morning. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, First Vice President Mrs. John A. Peterkin presided. The attendance was large and much enthusiasm was manifested in plans for the coming year.

One minute reports were given by the secretary of each circle, fourteen in all. They all showed that every member has been busy in the past twelve months. One of the most interesting reports was that of the Day Nursery itself. This showed that in the six months since the first of November last, 273 children had been cared for at the institution. The largest number in any one month was 627 and the largest week 167. There are now eight infants who are being boarded at the nursery day and night because of their mothers being in the hospital or unable to care for them through other reasons. The children are being looked after constantly by a graduate nurse. The treasurer's report stated that all expenses had been met and a comfortable balance remains.

The officers elected were as follows: President, Mrs. J. A. Peterkin; first vice president, Mrs. A. E. Faber, Jr.; second vice president, Mrs. Sidney Titsworth; recording secretary, Mrs. L. H. Van Buren; corresponding secretary, Miss Charlotte Finch, and treasurer, Mrs. A. M. Most. The president afterward named the various supporting committees.

It was announced that the annual gathering of all the King's Daughters in the city would be held in the First Baptist church on the afternoon of May 9 beginning at 2:30. Dr. William E. Biederwolf will speak and an address will be given by Mrs. Charles A. Menet, of East Orange, State president of the King's Daughters. The National Quartet will sing and there will be other features. The request is made that all King's Daughters in Plainfield attend the meeting wearing their silver cross or their purple bow.

JUDGE CODDINGTON BETTER.

BIEDERWOLF PLEADS THAT ALL PLAINFIELD PEOPLE LIVE LIKE THEY KNOW THEY WANT TO DIE

QUESTION, "WHAT WILL YOU DO WITH CHRIST?" ONE THAT EVERY PERSON CAN ANSWER AND MUST ANSWER.

SCORES DRESS OF MODERN SOCIETY WOMAN

Says Those He Saw in New York Were "Quadruple Decollete" and Were Disgrace to Civilization—Many People Here Have Spaghetti Instead of Backbone, Declares the Evangelist

Pleading that his hearers live as they will want to die the Rev. William E. Biederwolf last night asked an audience of 3,500 at the Tabernacle, "Would you rather die as Infidel Hobbes died, saying as he went, 'I am taking a fearful leap in the dark,' or would you rather die as did our late martyred president, with his head pillowed on the good book, singing 'Nearer My God to Thee'? Would you rather go as Ingersoll did, without a song at his funeral, or would you rather die as did dear old Moody, singing 'God is calling; Heaven is opening; Earth is receding'?"

The evangelist said that many people think because God is so good and long-suffering, and so forbearing, they can go on and ignore the claims of Christ and live as they please and then bank on God's compassion to save them when they get ready to do it. That, he said, was the most contemptible thought that ever stirred a human breast.

His sermon was on "What Will You Do With Jesus?" and Dr. Biederwolf insisted that the question was not only one that could be answered by every person in the world, but one that must be answered by every one. A good many people in Plainfield were like Pilate, he said, in that they have a piece of sphagetti where they ought to have a backbone, and refuse to do what they know is right.

During his sermon, Dr. Biederwolf told of a recent visit to the cafe of a leading New York hotel, and he described the dresses that women wore there.

"They were quadruple decollete," he said. "Decollete in front, decollete behind and decollete on both sides. Oh, but those women were pretty-looking birds! I believe that if God had meant the women to look like that he would have put feathers on them in the first place." He added that the dress of the modern society woman was a disgrace to civilization, and later referred to them as "bepowdered, befrizzled, manicured clothes racks."

Dr. Biederwolf also paid his respects to gossips again. He said he had never been in a city where he received so many letters calling attention to gossiping tongues and urging him to preach on this subject, and admitted that there must be some truth in the charge, or the letters would not come so thick and fast.

There was a delegation of young ladies from Cranford at last night's service; also a big representation of members of the Plainfield Young Women's Christian Association and of the Plainfield Knights of the Golden Eagle.

A solo by Mr. McEwan and a selection by the quartet were enjoyed.

An important meeting of Christian business men and professional men will be held in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. at 12:30 Friday, it was announced, and every one in Plainfield is urged to be present.

In the afternoon, William H. Danner talked to a crowd of about 1,200 on "The Lepers of the World." Mr. Danner is at the head of a mission society that gives to these unfortunates the necessities of life, all the comforts that can be allowed them and spiritual advice and cheer. He said there were almost 3,000 in the United States today, and that only a few were being properly cared for. The organization that he represents spends $40,000 a year, he said, and while he did not ask for contributions a large number of people walked to the pulpit at the close of the service and a goodly sum was given to aid in the work. One woman gave a $2.50 gold piece in another city, he said, and said as she handed him the money that she was ashamed to contribute such a small amount. This, he said, would carry on the work of the entire organization for a half-hour. Mr. Danner is working for a large central refuge for lepers in the United States, and declared that it would soon be provided for. A bill now pending in Congress will make it possible and he urged Plainfielders to write to the Congressmen and Senators representing them, demanding support for the bill.

Tomorrow afternoon, Dr. Biederwolf will preach on "Shall We Recognize Our Friends in Heaven?"

AGREEMENT REACHED IN SMALLEY ESTATE SUIT

The accounting suit over the estate of William E. Smalley, of Plainfield, was settled yesterday after it had been before Judge Connolly in the Orphans' Court, Elizabeth. The terms of the settlement were not made known, but were stated to be entirely satisfactory to the parties concerned. The contest was over the amount of the estate due to Bradford H. Smalley and his sister, Miss Edith Smalley, daughters of Mrs. Georgianna H. Smalley Smith.

The children made claim to $78,542.85, their share of the estate after deduction of the sums that had been expended for their benefit. William Palmer Smith was administrator for his wife, the guardian of the children. According to his accounting a balance of only $10,559.25 was due the children. The children disputed some of his charges and allowances.

CENSORED MOVING PICTURE NOT TO BE SHOWN HERE

The Astor Theatre is being complimented for being the first of the local theatres to actively co-operate with Mayor Leighton Calkins in his crusade for clean photoplays. Among the pictures advertised to be shown was "The Strength of the Weak," and being in doubt about the character of the picture, requested a private censorship for yesterday afternoon. At the conclusion the committee which witnessed it agreed that it would be better not to publicly present the picture. The management heartily approved of the decision.

Charles Freligh, assistant manager, stated that the Astor endorsed the Mayor's stand, and it was the purpose of the house to present only clean and moral photoplays which both young and old could enjoy.

TAFT TO SPEAK ON "WORLD RELATIONSHIP"

Word Received That Former President Will Visit Plainfield in June.

Former President William Howard Taft, who has been secured as one of the speakers for the Community Chautauqua to be held here, June 23-27, will talk on the subject of "Our World Relationship." H. W. Marshall, who is a member of the local committee in charge of the arrangement for the Chautauqua, received definite word this morning that Mr. Taft would be here and that he would speak on the above subject.

Since the announcement was made that Mr. Taft would come to Plainfield there has been unusual interest in the Community Chautauqua, and it is predicted that it will be one of the most interesting affairs ever held in this city, as the entertainers are all well-known people and are talented.

SHACKAMAXSON GOLF CLUB INCORPORATES

New Athletic Organization is Preparing for a Successful Season.

With the filing of papers of incorporation last week at the office of the county clerk in Elizabeth, the Shackamaxson Golf Club is seeming to create more interest than ever among golfers in this section of the State. In filing the papers, the purpose of the club was given as a promotor of athletic sports and games. The incorporators named are Wadsworth A. Parker, of Plainfield; John C. Ogwald, of Brooklyn; J. Russell Merrick, of Westfield; Joseph F. Gillick, of Jersey City. Walter S. Marder, of Plainfield, was named as general agent with his office at Bradley road, Fanwood.

Wet weather has been the cause of holding up to a considerable degree the work on the links, but for the past week there has been a lot done and things around the Willow Grove section are beginning to look like a mammoth green lawn. A large gang of men, assisted by a dozen teams, have practically completed the first nine holes of the course and the other nine are now being laid out.

The clubhouse is also beginning to get pretty far along, and the contractors expect to have it ready for use by the grand opening on the Fourth of July. Although there is no especial need of them at the start, the shelters that will be distributed over the course and the several rustic bridges over the water hazards will be built as soon as possible. "Lambert's Pond," one of the features of the course, will be improved as soon as possible so as to allow swimming during the coming summer. A large section of the shore will be made into a beach similar to those at the seashore resorts. The large plot of ground formed in the angle of the pond will be turned into a park suitable for picnic parties, and by the coming of winter a large skating shed will be built along the shore.

The first story about the new course that is turning the eyes of the golfing world toward this place was printed over a month ago on this page, at which time the general outlay of the course was given; and in keeping with the policy so far adopted, stories about the club will appear in these columns as often as new features present themselves.

TOWNSHIP FATHERS TO MEET.

A regular meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee is scheduled to be held tomorrow night in Excelsior Hall at 8 o'clock.

AUTO ACCIDENT CASE TO BE TRIED ON MONDAY

A case of considerable local interest will come up before Judge William Connolly, at Elizabeth, Monday, when Louis Sutterline, a former local resident, but now of Plainfield, sues Walter H. Taverner, of Westfield, for damages. The suit is the outgrowth of an accident on Martine avenue, the borough, early in March, when Taverner drove an automobile into a horse and wagon driven by Sutterline. He sped away from the scene as quickly as possible, but was found through his license number, and several weeks after a hearing was held before Borough Recorder Charles Sheelen, who found him guilty of breaking a borough ordinance and fined him $10. Taverner appealed the decision, and it will come up in the Court of Appeals following the damage suit.

Robert Newton Crane is Sutterline's lawyer and Augustus Nash is attorney for Taverner.

MUSICAL PLANS COMPLETED.

All arrangements have been completed by the committee in charge of the musical to be held in the Methodist church tomorrow night, and the talent secured should ensure a splendid evening's entertainment. Among those who will be present are Miss Albinson, pianist; Mrs. Aue, 'cellist; and Miss Nelson, dramatic reader. The Rev. J. Adams Oakes, of Summit, will sing several solos. Mr. Oakes is a tenor of considerable note and at one time was a member of the McWalters quartet, that sang its way around the world.

JUNIOR AUXILIARY ACTIVITIES.

The last meeting of the Junior Auxiliary of the All Saints' Episcopal church for the coming summer is scheduled to be held Saturday afternoon, when plans will be formulated for the activities of the auxiliary during the coming fall. At the last meeting of the girls an election of officers was held that resulted in the following: President, Miss Gertrude Head; secretary, Miss Ruth Barrett and treasurer, Miss Joyce Thompson.

TO RESIDE IN ELMORA.

Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson have returned from their wedding trip and are now at housekeeping in Elmora. Mrs. Thompson was formerly Miss Katheryn Felt, of Westfield, and Mr. Thompson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hudson Thompson, of Martine avenue.

RETURNED FROM HONEYMOON.

Having returned from their honeymoon to Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Irving DeMilt, formerly Miss Mary McCarthy, of Westfield, are making their home in Jersey City, where Mr. DeMilt is employed.

WORKING FOR STRICKEN PEOPLE OF BELGIUM

Fanwood Relief Society Has Accomplished Much During Past Two Years.

After completing the packing of two more cases of articles at the meeting this afternoon, the local Belgian Relief Society has about finished its second winter's work for the people of the little war-stricken country. Filled with articles of clothing, soap, tobacco and other useful items, the two boxes were sent off following today's meeting, one to the British Red Cross Society and one to the Belgian Relief Society.

Starting but a few months after the war began, between thirty and forty women from Scotch Plains and Fanwood held regular meetings all during the past two winters and in that time have completed the making of things that have filled nine large packing boxes. The Misses Kyte, of Martine avenue, who were instrumental in the forming of the local society, have sent the boxes to various relief stations in Europe and in nearly all cases have received letters from those in charge explaining just how the things were used, and in some instances, letters have been received from the individual soldiers and others who have received some little article.

Mrs. Charles Fernald, of Forest road, has collected during the past winter a considerable amount of anesthetics that have been sent to the continental hospitals. In letters that were received it was learned how many operations were performed with the aid of ether or any other drugs to offset the pain, and the local aid resulted. Although regular meetings will not be held during the summer months, the various women will do whatever they can to help until active meetings are started again, if the war is still going on next fall.

Town Topics

REGULATING THE TRAFFIC.

Ever since the accident in Fanwood last Saturday when the four-year-old son of William Bellerjeau, of South avenue, was run over by an automobile, a number of borough residents have been advocating the placing of traffic posts at street crossings. Just how this step would help matters any is rather hard to see, because the nature of the streets would make things more dangerous than before. The matter has been up before the Borough Council on several occasions, and each time it has been shown that matters would not be helped any. Scotch Plains has tried having posts at the crossings for some time with fair results, but the corners in the borough are not near so large as those in Scotch Plains. If a traffic post is placed in the center of the corner there would not be room for vehicles to pass on either side. The best solution to the problem depends on the police officials. If one or two reckless drivers are hauled before the Recorder and made an example of, it will have the tendency to make others more careful.

ABOUT HEALTH CONDITIONS.

The borough and township are both keeping up their record for health in great shape, as is evidenced by the present number of contagious diseases that are reported. The three cases of diphtheria in the Willow Grove section of the township are now nearly out of quarantine, while the borough's sole case is one of scarlet fever. The patient has been isolated by the local physicians and no more are expected.

PARISH HOUSE CLOSED.

The Parish House, after being open for three days a week since last December, was closed on Monday for the summer months. During the time it was open there was a noticeable amount of good done in various ways and as the weeks pass that it is closed, residents will begin to realize it more and more. When fall rolls around again, the Rev. J. Madison Hare will again see that the popular resort is opened again.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

The new five-ton motor truck of the Fanwood Stone Crushing Company was put into service yesterday for the first time. In long trips it has already proven its superiority over the horsedrawn wagons and eventually the entire system will probably be motorized.

The first year of Fanwood's new dog tax ordinance expired last week, and the Borough Clerk, S. L. W. McAnneny, is now renewing them. Residents are given a limited time to take out new ones for their canines, after which the authorities take a hand.

Ralph Venizia the Terrill road liquor dealer was granted a renewal of his wholesale liquor license last week when he petitioned Judge Connolly at Elizabeth.

The borough street commissioner has made the announcement that the Fanwood roads will receive their annual coat of oil within the next two weeks. The township authorities will not be far behind in putting the dust-layer on the Scotch Plains thoroughfares as well.

Carpenters have just completed building a new door on the entrance to the jail cells in the Fanwood borough hall that should defy the attempts of nearly anyone to get in or out when it is locked. The "jug" has boarders so seldom that when such a thing happens the police want to make sure of them.

The first after Lent dance at the Stony Hill Parish House will be held tomorrow night and the committee in charge has made special arrangements for the event. An orchestra will furnish music, and prizes for the best dancers will be awarded.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Episcopal church met for their weekly meeting yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Henry Morgen, of Scotch Plains.

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the Methodist church, is being held at the home of Mrs. Walter Van Riper, of Westfield avenue, today.

The Lend-a-Hand Society of the Baptist church meets in the church parlors tomorrow.

POEMS WORTH READING

Editor's Note: The following poems have appeared in the New York Evening Post at various times and are the work of Miss Louise Townsend Nicholl, of Springfield road. Miss Nichol is a graduate of Smith College, '13, and since then has been a feature writer on staff of the Evening Post.

THE NEW MOON.

A slender thing, but crescent,
The new-born moon hangs low.
What ancient joy, forever new,
'Bides in the golden bow!

NOON IN THE CITY.

Beautiful, silent noon, all bruised with bells,
Its hush unheeded, slips into the city.
Ah, would the city harken to the hush a moment,
Or give the bruised heart of day its pity!

THE PRIESTESS.

My spirit is a priestess, pure with fire,
White with holiness and high desire.
And her bidding to my fingers is divine.
My fingers are but laymen, careless rude,
All their efforts are so groping and so crude!
And the work they do is not of her design.

TREES.

A tree is a familiar thing—
Each bole and branch, each bud of Spring,
Is like one I have seen before.
The old oak, hid in forest dusk,
Once stood before my cottage door.
And there, the wee, straight evergreen
My heart so many times has seen!
And, ah, the slim and swaying one—
I knew it in some day of yore
By some dim path I wandered o'er.
This tall one stands aloof, alone,
And yet I know that, as a child,
I played with fairies shy and wild
Upon its roots of moss close-sown.
A tree is a familiar thing—
Each bole and branch, each bud of Spring,
Is like one I have seen before.

THE LONG ROAD.

The long road stretches on—
The weary eyes dare not follow it,
So straight and bare and far,
But needs must try to see
The color of a wayside flower
Or shining of a star.

THE BIRDS FLY SOUTH.

The birds fly South—early of mornings are they all a-wing.
But as they go, they sing again the songs I know,
The light-heard songs of Spring.
The birds fly South—early of mornings is their winged start.
But as they go, they leave the light-heart songs I know
A-nesting in my heart.

CITIZENS COMPLAIN OF CROWING HENS

Fanwood Council is Petitioned to Preserve Early Morning Quiet in Borough.

The increasing cost of labor and material for local streets formed one of the chief topics of discussion at the monthly meeting of the Borough Council held last night. William Linden, who does nearly all of the work for the street department, in a letter to the Council said that it would be impossible for him to continue working at the same prices as before as it was impossible to get day labor at former rates. The Fanwood Stone Crushing Company also announced a new schedule of prices for the various grades of stone. A lengthy discussion found no means of improving matters and it was left to the discretion of the street commissioner.

A petition was received from a prominent citizen asking that steps be taken to prevent a neighbor's fowls from crowing under his windows and disturbing his early morning nap. Nothing can be done unless the health ordinance is violated and in view of the fact the letter was referred. The Board of Health notified the Council of several health ordinances which go into effect today. One is intended to regulate the collection of garbage, calling for certain things to be followed by the collectors, and another refers to the milk and ice sections of the sanitary code. There was a discussion also about the practice of some property owners in having their sewer overflow empty into the gutters. Everything that is possible under the present existing conditions is done, but until the arrival of the sewer the nuisance will have to continue to some extent.

Clerk S. W. McAneny reported the arrival of the dog tags. Bills aggregating $289.35 were ordered paid and an amount on hand of $2,978.16 was reported.

MINERS FIGHT AGREEMENT.

Anthracite Workers Oppose Ratification of Partial Recognition.

Pottsville, Pa., May 4.—Before the tridistrict convention of the United Mine Workers of the anthracite region President John P. White and the district presidents fought one of the greatest battles in the history of the organization for the ratification of the tentative agreement adopted by the subcommittees of the mine workers and the anthracite operators.

There were moments when it appeared that the convention would be stampeded for rejection of the agreement and in favor of absolute recognition of the union and the closed shop, but in such a crisis President White rose to the occasion and with a force and eloquence that swept the opposition from its feet defended the action of himself and his colleagues. He declared that the concessions won from the operators were the greatest by far the organization had ever succeeded in obtaining.

It is believed the agreement will be ratified.

INTRODUCE COMPULSION BILL

Authorizes Calling of All Eligible Males to Service.

London, May 4.—The compulsion bill, announced by Premier Asquith, was introduced in the house of commons.

This bill, which becomes effective a month after its passage, authorizes the government to call to the colors all males eligible for service. It provides, however, for the establishment of an army reserve for industrial work. To this reserve the government may assign as many men as industrial conditions demand.

All men, whether married or single, between the ages of eighteen and forty-one are eligible.

BOROUGH BOARD NAMES COMMENCEMENT COMMITTEE

Paul M. Carpenter, Guy H. Rentschler, Hervey B. Walters, W. C. O'Neil and Miss E. Mae Higgins were appointed members of the commencement committee at a meeting of the Board of Education held Tuesday evening. G. Sumner Smith, the local health inspector, was present and called the attention of the Board to the fact that the cesspool of the Lincoln School has overflowed at times and drained into the gutter. The Board discussed the matter at length. It was the consensus of opinion that the condition was not caused by any deficiency in cesspool capacity but by abnormal rains. In other words the opinion of the Board was that the condition due to the excessive rains would remedy itself. If it didn't Mr. Smith was assured that more cesspools would be dug.

Informal discussion was entered into as to who would be the teachers for next year. Mrs. Robert Lowrie ,of Plainfield, one of the Lincoln School teachers, will not return. The work of Miss Frances Lee, of Westfield, who substituted for Miss Margaret Crawford during the latter's illness, was highly commended and she will probably be offered the position. Bills ordered paid aggregated $175.

PREPARING COLLECTION OF LANTERN SLIDES

The Board of Education has received from Herbert N. Morse, who is in charge of the business division of the Department of Public Instruction at Trenton, two enlargements of photographs of the Lincoln, one showing the old four room school building and the other showing the present eight room building, and these have been framed and placed in the office of the school.

Mr. Morse is preparing for the Department a collection of lantern slides which, when completed, will constitute a fine collection of views showing many educational, manufacturing and natural features of our State, and he has chosen as one of the slides the views above referred to, which show the great contrast between our old school building and the present modern and attractive looking structure it has become.

ASSOCIATION REORGANIZES.

The directors of the Home Building Loan Association met and reorganized as follows last evening: Henry S. Garretson, president; John P. Fenner, vice-president; Charles A. Coriell, Jr., treasurer; A. J. Hamley, secretary.

PLANNING TO BUILD.

Louis L. Block has sold a lot on the south side of Greenbrook road, east of Washington avenue, to Henry Lund, of West Dunellen, who will build in a week or two. The deal was made through the M. A. Gallagher agency.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Wooden, of Washington avenue, have returned from a two weeks' western trip.

Ralph Parker has severed his connection with the Apgar Construction Company.

Mrs. J. H. L. Peters and Mrs. Henry Kirchner, Sr., are visiting friends in Newark.

TO HOLD LAWN FETE.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church held yesterday afternoon it was decided to hold a lawn fete in June for the purpose of raising money to carpet the church.

TO REORGANIZE CLASS.

The Presbyterian Sunday school class, conducted by the late Robert F. Bogardus, will be reorganized at 10 a. m. this coming Sunday in the old class room by George T. Caskey, who has consented to act as teacher. It will be known as "the Bogardus class."

CHARLES NEE IMPROVED.

Charles Nee, the young son of Mrs. Joseph Nee, of Brooklyn, who was taken ill six weeks ago with pneumonia, while visiting his grandfather, Barthlomew Kelly, of this borough, appeared improved today, and hopes are entertained that the little fellow will successfully pass through the critical stage which he has entered. Physicians held a consultation this morning.

Charles Williams, who recently submitted to two operations to check gangrene, is reported to be doing well in the Muhlenberg Hospital.

Charles Conkling and family, of Orange, have moved into the flat over the old H. L. Pierce store.

T. A. Pierce was in town the first of the week visiting his fiancee, Miss Hazel Piddington.

Charles McCormick has taken the position of Russell Burdick at the Lehigh Valley station.

CRISIS IS PASSED.

Peter Bernard, who was critically ill with pneumonia Tuesday night, appears to be recovering. His attending physician has said that if death should occur pneumonia will not be the cause. Mr. Bernard's heart is in fact the only thing that is causing concern and its action this morning was better than it has been at any time since he was taken ill.

Watchung.

Miss Margaret Demler will be the leader of the Junior Christian Endeavor Friday afternoon.

Roy W. Achor, of Princeton Theological Seminary, will preach Sunday morning at 10:45 in the Wilson Memorial church.

The North Plainfield Township Improvement Society will hold its monthly meeting Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Vanderberg, who have been spending a month as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Hughes, have returned to their home at Troy, N. Y.

Mrs. Stewart Ogilby, of West New Brighton, N. Y., is the guest of Mrs. Anna Underhill.

Master Renaldo Galluppo is in Muhlenberg Hospital, where he will undergo an operation for his eyes

South Plainfield.

John Ball, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ball, of Storage road, is in St. Peter's Hospital, New Brunswick, where he underwent an operation for appendicitis yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. E. Shurig, of New York, but formerly of this place, visited friends here yesterday.

Mrs. J. J. Allen and daughter, Louise, have returned from a two weeks' visit with Mrs. Allen's mother, Mrs. Robison, of Walton, N. Y.

Miss Lillian Hogan has returned home from Whitehouse, where she has been nursing a typhoid fever patient for six weeks.

Robert Hamilton is in Muhlenberg Hospital, where he underwent an operation on his nose Tuesday afternoon.

The six scarlet fever patients are doing well, and it is hoped that the disease has been checked.

James Wilson, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson, is suffering from an attack of rheumatism.

Miss Louise Miller is visiting her sister, Mrs. Newton Bray, of Hampton Junction.

Mrs. O. A. Bunn is visiting her mother in Bordentown.

Mrs. A. R Soper and sister, Mrs. Phoebe Moore, have returned from a visit with Mrs. Soper's daughter, Mrs. George Schenck, of New Market.

Walter Gurnsey is able to be about again after an attack of measles.

William Lee, who has been threatened with mastoiditis, is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. William Walston have returned from a visit with with friends in Newark.

Mrs. Ida Harris has returned after visiting her son, Lloyd, in Post Graduate Hospital, New York, where he is under treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Alva Apgar have taken up their residence in the village. Mr. Apgar is employed by Mr. Lipschitz.

WESTCOTT WILL NOT RUN AGAINST MARTINE

Trenton, May 4.—Attorney-General John W. Wescott has decided not to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator to succeed James E. Martine. His friends have been circulating a petition asking him to enter the contest, but he has asked them to withdraw it.

Mr. Wescott nominated Wilson in the Baltimore Convention.

Congressman Joseph J. Scully, of South Amboy; William L. Saunders, of Plainfield, and Robert D. Foote, of Morristown, are mentioned as the most prominent aspirants for the nomination. Martine will seek renomination in the primaries.

N. P. H. S. NOTES

The annual play of the junior class of North Plainfield High School will be presented tomorrow evening in the Columbus Club Auditorium, when a three-act play entitled, "The Deacon Entangled" will be staged. Under the coaching of Miss Duchesne, the participators have reached marked proficiency. The characters include William Seidel as Calvin Spankler; Rev. Dr. Sopher, a strong supporter of foreign missions, acted by Robert Daley; Henry Baxter, a sporting writer, by Vincent La Porte; Mr. Rafferty, a policeman, Alfred Willett; a plain clothes man, William Carson; Mrs. Penrose, Margaret Smith; Ruth, her daughter, Marguerite Barkalew; Georgie Sopher, daughter of Dr. Sopher, Katharine Buttings; Katy, the maid at the Penrose household, Louise Spencer.

TO MEET IN NEW QUARTERS.

Abraham Lincoln Chapter, I. C. S., Fraternity of the World, will hold its first meeting tonight in its new quarters in the Frost building, when matters of importance will be considered.

BRITAIN SHOOTS IRISH REBELS

Four Leaders Are Court Martialed In Haste.

BIRRELL HAS RESIGNED.

Pearse, Connolly, Clark and McDonagh Are Put to Death as Traitors—Roger Casement Hears Rifle Shots That End Lives of His Compatriots.

London, May 4.—Shot to death in the Tower of London, Patrick H. Pearse, James Connolly, Thomas J. Clark and Thomas MacDonagh have paid the penalty for their attempt to establish a republic in Ireland.

In a cell not far from the scene of the execution sat Sir Roger Casement, a prisoner in the tower awaiting trial for treason. The rifle shots could be plainly heard by the captive, who was arrested a few days before the rebellion broke out while attempting to land arms from a German auxiliary on the Irish coast.

Premier Asquith told parliament that all four were signatories to the document proclaiming the "Irish republic." The three other signatories, S. MacDiarmad, E. Caanut and Joseph Plunkett, the prime minister added, were sentenced to three years in prison because of extenuating circumstances.

Shortly after Premier Asquith in opening the session of parliament had announced the fate of the four Sinn Fein leaders Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, handed in his resignation.

Premier Asquith promptly accepted it. Birrell explained he was giving up his office upon having been assured that the insurrection had been quelled.

"No other course is open to me," he said. "The unanimity of Ireland is preserved. This was no Irish rebellion."

Birrell Under Fire.

Subjected to bitter attack in parliament and in the press from the moment of the Dublin outbreak, Birrell's position had become untenable. The chief grievance against him was that on the day the rebellion broke out he assured the government and parliament that "the situation is well in hand." The attacks grew in scope and in fervor as the rebellion spread through the week instead of subsiding instantly, and there were many who blamed Birrell directly for the whole situation, charging lack of foresight and preparedness to meet such an emergency. A motion demanding his resignation is pending in the house of commons.

There have been urgent demands for the resignation of Baron Wimborne, lord lieutenant of Ireland, but there were no developments on this point. Sir Matthew Nathan, Birrell's undersecretary, and General Friend, commander of the Irish forces, are expected to resign at once, following their chief's example.

Birrell upon entering the house indicated his resignation by taking the corner seat behind the treasury bench.

Redmond Asks Leniency.

John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, appealed to the government not to treat with undue severity the masses concerned in the revolutionary outbreak.

Sir Edward Carson, Ulster leader, politically a bitter foe of Redmand, but co-operating with him throughout the rebellion, indorsed the Nationalist chief's appeal by saying:

"No true Irishman will call vengeance upon the mass of insurgents."

Commenting upon Birrell's resignation, Sir Edward said the latter's opponents recognized that he took this step actuated by the desire to preserve unity in Ireland.

All England was astir over the news of the execution of the rebel leaders. A sensation was created by the publication here of an official statement issued in Dublin reading as follows:

"Rebels considered suitable for trial are being tried by a field general court martial under the defense of the realm act. As soon as the sentences have been confirmed the public will be informed as to the result of the trial.

"Others are being sent to places in England. Their cases will receive consideration later. The cases of women taken prisoners are under consideration.

"The work dealing with these trials is of great magnitude, and it is being proceeded with with all dispatch."

The total number of rebel prisoners runs into the thousands. According to official reports, about 800 have been placed in English prisons since the outbreak of the revolt. Others have been taken from Dublin to Belfast.

Damage Is Tremendous.

The total damage to buildings in Dublin is estimated by the chief of the fire department at £1,000,000 and the damage to stock at £750,000. Altogether 179 buildings were destroyed.

The reconstruction work by government troops and civilians in the areas in which the rebels held sway is well under way, and no further disturbances are reported.

Detailed dispatches show that next to the outbreak in Dublin the rebels' activities were most serious in County Galway, on the west coast of Ireland. There is a considerable shortage of bread in the city of Galway, owing to lack of yeast. A week ago 1,200 rebels marching from Oranmore toward Galway were suddenly subjected to heavy shell fire from a naval vessel. They were compelled to turn back after having come within three miles of Galway and retired to Moyard castle, at Athenry.

Other rebel detachments were forced to retire toward the castle by 100 soldiers, who were landed on the following day. Numerous casualties resulted from clashes between the rebels and small bands of police. Three college professors were among those arrested. Professors Steinberger, Walsh and McEnri, all of the University of Galway.

Seven hundred of the Dublin rebels have been sent in a special train under armed guard to Belfast. Among the rebels who arrived as prisoners at Holyhead there were many "intellectuals," who have long taken an active part in the Irish literary movement. Most of the prisoners showed great exhaustion.

Between thirty and forty women are said to be among the prisoners, all of whom wear men's clothing or uniforms. Officials were inclined to believe the stories of many of the prisoners who assert they knew nothing of the impending revolt when they were mobilized. It is a question, however, whether this will be regarded as an ameliorating circumstance in their trial.

Important information is expected to be obtained by the government from numerous prisoners who have offered to turn state's evidence.

ADOPT RESOLUTIONS.

The board of managers of Bonnie Burn Sanatorium, at a meeting on Monday, adopted resolutions of condolence on the death of Jr. Hervey Doane, of this city, who for many years was a member of the Board of Freeholders, and was chairman of the hospital committee of the institution, devoting a great deal of his time to that work. The resolutions were signed by Dr. William H. Murray, president; E. C. Holmes, vice-president; Dr. Norton L. Wilson, William J. McCloud, F. W. Veghte and Dr. J. E. Runnels, superintendent.

Mr. and Mrs. George N. Burnett, of Watchung, are parents of a boy, born to them yesterday.

OBREGON AND SCOTT AGREE

Military Authorities Think All Is Settled.

WILL WITHDRAW SOON?

Mexican Conferee Advises Carranza Generals In Field That Negotiations Are Satisfactory—General Scott Very Fair, He Declares—Situation Greatly Relieved.

El Paso, Tex., May 4.—That the conference between Generals Obregon and Scott was progressing in a manner satisfactory to the Constitutionalist cause was the tenor of a message sent to all of his commanders in the field by General Gavira, military commander of Juarez. General Gavira added that he believed he would be able in a short time to announce a satisfactory conclusion to the conference.

Baldomero Almada, general fiscal agent for the Carranza government in the United States, after a visit to General Obregon in Juarez, said that "all differences between the Mexicans and the Americans have been cleared up." He asserted that General Obregon told him that he had never met a man who was fairer than General Scott. He added:

"General Obregon told me that he was surprised to find a man in politics so honest. He said there were some differences between the Americans and Mexicans, but when he came to the border and talked with General Scott they were soon dissipated. I talked with General Obregon for two hours, and he was praising General Scott most of the time."

This was the only official admission regarding the progress of negotiations that was made. General Scott stated he would not be surprised if the next conference did not take place until Friday.

Both Generals Silent.

General Obregon busied himself in Juarez receiving subordinates and reading messages from Mexico City, of which he received several. Both generals refused to discuss the conference.

Mexican and American military and diplomatic officials appeared more at ease than any time since the conference last Saturday. The tensity of the situation has relaxed very largely. It was learned that, while the agreement between Generals Scott and Obregon for the American troops to remain in Mexico without protest from the de facto government for the time being was entered into, it was mutually agreed that if the de facto government "makes good" in its campaign against the bandits the duration of the American army's stay will be short.

It is understood that General Scott virtually agreed that as soon as the Carranzistas convinced the Americans of their earnestness and of their ability to carry out their promises the necessity for the American troops in Mexico would end.

No insistence was made by General Scott that the Mexicans grant the use of the railroad. This will not be done. This was forecast in these dispatches several days ago. Present transportation arrangements for the American army will be adequate if the army is to retire to bases nearer the border than its advanced bases are at present. At least they will be sufficient until the rainy season sets in, and the chances are that the American forces will be out by that time if the Carranzista promises are carried out.

The rainy season would greatly hamper if not wholly cripple the motor truck service of the army in Mexico.

It is believed that both the Carranza and American governments have now the full text of the tentative agreement reached by General Scott and Obregon. General Obregon is known to have sent lengthy code messages to his government, and General Scott admitted doing the same.

General Obregon received several messages from Mexico, but it was denied that he had received any approval from the first chief of his action. However, there is little doubt that the agreement will be acceptable at Mexico City since Obregon is declared to have been more radical than his chief in his insistence that the American force must get out of Mexico and was only mollified by strong pressure from Carranza and others.

Senator Husting Urges Wilson to Act In Telegram Campaign.

Washington, May 4.—Senator Husting, Wisconsin, who recently delivered a sensational speech in the senate denouncing the senders of thousands of pro-German telegrams, urged President Wilson to order an investigation by the department of justice into the financing of this telegraphic campaign. The president took the matter under advisement.

Maxim Backs "Gas" Substitute.

Farmingdale, N. Y., May 4.—Dr. Louis Enricht has found a backer for his 2 cents a gallon green gasoline. The Maxim Munitions corporation announced that it had bought and secured by contract the exclusive manufacturing rights, had already filed application for a patent and had bought land for a plant in Farmingdale to manufacture the fuel.

Fear Deer Will Become Pest.

Blairstown, May 4.—Deer are becoming a nuisance to the farmers living along the southern slope of the Blue mountain in the neighborhood of Mount Vernon, and from ten to a dozen of the animals are to be seen every night feeding in the grain fields. Unless something is done it is feared they will destroy crops later.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

San Francisco—Mrs. Azalia E. de Steffani, poet, artist, musician, soldier of fortune and champion woman walker, at the age of 65 is completing a hike of 165 miles from her home in Fruitvale to her ranch in El Dorado foothills. Accompanied only by her sheepdog, Rex, the veteran walker travels with a knapsack and a bundle of her poems. She has written 7,000 poems, has been a music teacher, a carpenter, a sign-painter, a plumber, a nu rse and a saleswoman.

St. Louis—An elaborate woman's pageant, depicting the evolution of the sex, will be staged tomorrow and Saturday by the Woman's Council of St. Louis. "Intelligence" will be the star role, with Mrs. E. E. Haverstick taking that part. The pageant was written by Mrs Wylla Jamison Viley and her sister, Miss Lorena Jamison. Various groups represent the epochs in history in which women have played an important part. First, the day of the cave-man is shown, then the Greek and Roman periods. The Land of Promise, America, with woman by the side of man, his equal in responsibility in defending the home, will form the climax. The pageant is being given to raise a building fund.

Rensselaer, Ind.—The fame of the Hoosier poets and authors may soon be equaled by that of the Indiana artists. The town has produced one of the most prominent of American sculptors in the person of Miss Mary Washburn, who worked along the uphill route to fame in Paris and won international recognition at the San Francisco Exposition. Fifteen years of energy and determination was necessary to achieve her degree of success and fame. Her first great work was "Consolation," a bronze depicting child grief. Not only did it make a big hit in the Paris Salon, but it appeals to the masses of the people.

New York—Miss Emma Goldman, leader of the more strenuous social reform element, will emerge from jail in a few days. She is serving fifteen days in the workhouse for lecturing on birth control, having declined the alternative of paying a fine of a hundred dollars. Her trial was spectacular, Miss Goldman acting as her own counsel, and in self-defense discoursing on the moral, social and economic phases of birth control.

Philadelphia—One of the most interesting women visitors to this city recently was Mrs. T. J. Ryan, wife of the Premier of Queensland, Australia. With her husband she is on her way to London, where an important confere nce of leaders of the British dominions is to take place. Mrs. Ryan is president of the Queensland Red Cross, and says that the province is doing a full share in charity work.

New York—The popularity of law courses for women is shown by the results achieved in the woman's law class of New York University, from which forty women were graduated with degrees a few weeks ago. Among the forty were four married women. The class is conducted under the auspices of the Woman's Legal Education Society, for the purpose of giving business women some knowledge of commercial law. Two scholarships were awarded, each good for three years' tuition in the law school.

Detroit—Among the women who will be seen at the Grand American Handicap of the American trapshooters in St. Louis, in August, is a Detroit sharpshooter, Mrs. L. G. Vogel, who holds the world's record for women by killing 96 out of a possible 100 live birds in one contest. This is a feat few men can boast of. An impetus has been given the gun sport for women by the admisson of women to the Grand Handicap. One of Mrs. Vogel's rivals will be Miss Harriet D. Hammond, of Wilmington, Del., whose father was one of the crack shots of the East.

Philadelphia—The suffragists of Philadelphia will hold a "shirtwaist ball" tomorrow night, to raise funds to continue the work for the cause of suffrage and the popularization of it. Mrs. J. Archer Rulon, of Chestnut Hill, and Mrs. William A. Wood arranged the event on behalf of the Congressional Union, and the ball will be conducted along the lines of the shirtwaist affair given by Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, in New York, last winter.

ESTABLISH ANOTHER MILK STATION HERE

Visiting Nurse Ass'n Plans to Extend Its Work During Summer Months.

The Visiting Nurse Association of Plainfield is planning to open its branch milk station on Richmond street near Cottage place by June 1. Last summer the association held its clinic at the Day Nursery through the courtesy of the King's Daughters who also generously donated milk for the purpose.

During the summer months 111 babies were examined by the physicians in charge, Dr. Titsworth and Dr. Pratt, weighed and visited by the nurse from the association. It was found that such a large number of babies could not be properly cared for in one station so the association proposes to open another milk station in a community where such work is specially needed.

The cost of the station for four summer months is estimated at from $250 to $300. $150 has already been raised and one month's rent, $12, pledged. It is earnestly hoped that the remaining $150 will be quickly given by interested people. One will enjoy their vacation more if they feel that they are possibly giving some unfortunate baby a chance to live by providing it with pure milk during the heat of the summer.

Twelve dollars will pay the rent for one month, 3 months needed; $10 will pay for the caretaker for one month; $3 will pay for milk for a baby for one month; $1 will pay for ice for a baby for one month; 10 cents will pay for a bottle of milk; 5 cents will pay for a piece of ice.

The station is also in need of second hand chairs, benches, awning or garden umbrella. Contributions can be sent to the treasurer, Miss Helen Lovell, room 323, Babcock building.

YOUNG MEN ROB STORE IN WESTFIELD WITH GUNS

The local police this morning received a telephone call from Westfield telling of the robbery there of Duffy Bros. store by two young men armed with revolvers. They entered the store at 7:35 a. m. and held up the proprietor, robbing the cash register.

NORRISTOWN CITIZENS COME HERE SATURDAY

As proof of the respect and love for Dr. Biederwolf in Norristown, Pa., a delegation of about 300 citizens there have chartered a special train and will come to Plainfield Saturday to attend the evening service at the local Tabernacle. The train schedule has not been announced but the Norristown visitors will be met at the depot with a band and will march through the streets to the Tabernacle. Special seats up in front will be reserved for them.

SINSHEIMER QUARTET TO APPEAR HERE MAY 11

Considerable interest has been aroused in the musicale to be given at the Hartridge Auditorium on the afternoon of May 11 because of the truly "allied" character of the players. The leader of this group is of that long-suffering nation, Poland, which has produced geniuses like Chopin, in spite of wars and famines. The other members of the quartet are French and Russian, while the soloist at the piano is an Englishwoman. It is not unreasonable to suppose that persons of these nations which are fighting together and suffering together will be in most perfect sympathy and will render a program complete in its spiritual harmonies.

COP QUELLS STRIKERS.

Two Thousand Harvester Employees In a Riot Are Quieted.

Chicago, May 4.—Rioting started at the McCormick tractor plant of the International Harvester company when 2,000 of the 6,000 striking employees of the plant descended suddenly upon the place.

Bricks were thrown, but one lone policeman, Edward Ginnis, successfully held the gate entrance to the plant until re-enforcements arrived from the Brighton police station. Ginnis was handled roughly by the crowd.

His clothes were torn, and his cap and club were taken from him before he succeeded in getting his revolver from his pocket.

"WHAT WILL YOU DO WITH CHRIST"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

Pilate was an old sail-trimmer. He was like some of you. He had a piece of spaghette where he ought to have a backbone. He knew what he ought to do but he was afraid of the gang.

It was Thursday night out in the Garden of Gethsemane. Jesus was praying. He said, "Oh God it's an awful thing I'm about to go through but if you say so, I'm ready." He had just said, "Thy will oh God be done," and the vicious mob broke in upon Him. It was two hours past midnight, and they placed the shackles on Him and led Him away to Pilate's court room where they presented Him as a violator of the sanctity of the Roman law—a political conspirator! I wonder if Pilate didn't laugh. What did these bearded Jews care about the sanctity of the Roman law? They despised the very name of Rome, but when they were thirsting for this innocent man's blood they could not very well get along without a little pretext and hypocrisy.

Pilate examined the man and he said, "I find no fault in Him;" but he was met with a ferocious growl. "Why," they say, "this man has stirred up the people all the way from Galilee!"

And when they said, "Galilee," Pilate thought of a way out. Herod was a ruler up there and so Pilate said, "I'll send him to Herod for his trial." Herod made a miserable old failure out of his life. He was an old libertine and he was living with his brother Phillip's wife.

Herod was rather glad to see Jesus. He had heard about His miracles and he wanted to see Him perform some of them. But Jesus wasn't dealing in legerdermain. He wasn't going around performing tricks to amuse people and then take up a collection and so He answered him never a word.

And Herod said, "Take Him back," and so Pilate finds himself once more with Jesus on his hands.

Then Pilate's wife came and tried to warn her husband. She'd been troubled in a dream. While she slumbered God came and troubled her; just what it was that God revealed to her we do not know, but He doubtless let her know that her husband was about to get mixed up in the greatest tragedy the world had ever known.

This is all we know about Mrs. Pilate but the incident speaks well for her and no doubt she was on the job a good part of the time trying to keep her husband out of the difficulties his vacillating, plastic, pliable, slack-twisted, pantesote, liquid-gloss good-Lord, good-Devil sore of nature was always getting him into.

You are to be congratulated if you've got a wife of good judgment, and who does what she can to keep you on the right side. A lot of you little ginks wouldn't amount to shucks if it wasn't for your wife. On the other hand many a wife is a millstone about her husband's neck—some little fashion fool that goes to all sorts of senseless extravagances with her dresses and her hats, or some bepowdered and befrizzled society sister that's gone bug house over bridge whist or some slovenly, unkempt, mother-hubbard, ambitionless, carpet-slippered woman that lets the house go to pot—and what's a man going to do unless he goes and jumps in the river?

But you have to have a good word for Mrs. Pilate. And she came to Pilate and said, "Husband, don't you have anything to do with this affair; Jesus Christ is a just man and if others want to murder Him, let them do it, but don't you redden your hands with His blood, or mix with that Godless gang clamoring for His life.

And now Pilate with some strange presentiment taking hold of him that the affair boded him no good, bethought him of a way to escape. It was customary at that season of the year in commemoration of the Jewish deliverance from the bondage of Egypt, to release unto the people some prisoner whom they might choose, and Pilate thought to use this pardon in the interest of the accused, but he was met with a storm of fury. "Away with this man," they cried, "and release unto us Barabas," and Pilate said, "What then shall I do with Jesus, which is called the Christ?" And with one voice they cry, "Crucify Him! Crucify Him! You are no friend of the people; you are no friend of the king if you refuse."

And when they said that, they had him.

A Spineless Official.

No friend of the people. Pilate knew he did not dare to incur the enmity of the Jews, and so to curry favor with them he was willing to turn Christ down. And that's what some of you people do today. You want to go in society and you know you can't do it unless you do some of the things that society does, and these things you know are not right, and you choose that kind of society instead of Christ. You've got a political bee in your bonnet and although you are a member of the church, you will go and sell your soul to the devil to win favor of an old whiskey-soaked peanut-brained, ward-heeling politician.

No friend of the king. Some of the Jews wanted Jesus for king and Pilate knew if he favored Jesus he would get the enmity of Caesar and this would mean that he would lose his job and maybe his head, and so to please the people and to please Caesar he was willing to sacrifice his own convictions. He knew that Jesus was right and the Jews were wrong, but he was a sail trimmer and a coward and did not have the courage of his convictions. God pity a man like that. If Pilate had only said, "Jesus is innocent and you cannot kill Him as long as I sit on the throne, for I will stand by Him if I die," if he had only said that, his memory would be enshrined today in the heart of humanity as one of the bravest. If he had only risen from his throne and stepped down and took the crown of thorns and put it on his own head and wrapped his bright regalia about the prisoner before him and said, "Nail me to the cross, but let Jesus go," he would have walked with the worthiest of the world.

Tragic moment. Yonder in prison lies Barabas, the guilty robber. Here stands Jesus, the innocent Savior. Which shall it be? Pilate's name might have come down the ages crowned with glory and honor, but he stands today in pillory as a monster of iniquity because, as an unscrupulous politician he prostituted his official trust, sinned against his own conscience and the voice of God for popularity and power, and sacrificed the Son of God to the passions of an infuriated mob. "What then shall I do with Jesus which is called the Christ?" He calls for a basin of water. "See, now," he says, "I will pronounce the death sentence upon Him; I will deliver Him into your hands for crucifixion, but look, I wash my own hands; I will be innocent of the blood of this just person; see you to it." And releasing Barabas he surrendered Jesus to the Jews and while Barabas goes among the crowd receiving the congratulations of his friends the innocent Christ is hurried away and spiked to a criminal's cross.

I have in my library a strange book entitled "Letters From Hell" and among other scenes depicted is one of a stream running through the lost world and by its edge kneels a man busily engaged in washing his hands. The man's face is pictured with despair, for he has washed long and hard with little success. Presently some one touches his shoulder and says, "Pilate, what are you doing?" And as he lifts his hands they are as red as the blood of the Son of God can make them, and as he utters a shriek that goes sounding along the corridors Pilate weeps and says, "Will they never be clean; will they never be clean?" Poor Pilate, they never will; they never will.

What Shall I do with Christ?

1. What shall I do with Jesus which is called the Christ? That's the most important question you have ever asked. And why? Why, simply because of what depends upon the answer you make to it. And do you ask what that is? I answer, All that's worth while in the life that now is and in the life to come.

First. In this life. If you believe in Christ you'll have peace. Jesus Christ said He would give His peace to them that believed on His name and what a wonderful peace was His! And God says that the wicked man, the man who does not know Christ does not know what peace is. He says you are like the waves of the sea when it is troubled and cannot rest. The most miserable man in the world is the man who yearns for an inner satisfaction and does not know how to find it. Money cannot bring you peace, good works, nor penance nor anything else that you can do, but there's a way you can find it. "Being justified therefore by faith we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ." It's a great word; it's a great thing to have. "Peace, I leave with you," said Jesus Christ. "My peace give upon you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you."

If you believe in Jesus Christ you'll have the comfort of God. There is nothing can ever do you any good in the dark hour of bereavement but the comfort of God. Do you remember when the measure for a little shroud was taken and the undertaker came with the coffin and a few days later the white hearse backed up to your door And if you didn't know then what it was to have the comfort and consolation of God you were a great deal poorer than God ever meant you to be.

And then, if you believed on Jesus Christ you'll have the favor of God. I say to you, many tonight, it's a great thing to live, no matter where you live or what you do and you have a feeling of satisfaction beating away in your breast that God is on your side because you are on God's side If I had to go home tonight and lie down on my bed and try to sleep and found that I could not—as some of you will not be able to sleep because of what you have heard tonight—if God is displeased with me I would not wait another hour until I had sought and found His favor. The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous, but the way of the ungodly shall perish.

In the Life to Come.

Second. In the life to come. Our acceptance with God depends upon what we do with Jesus here. "Whosoever shall confess Me before men, him will confess before My Father which is in heaven; but whomsoever shall deny Me before men, him will I deny before My Father which is in heaven." Your morality will not save you; your intelligence will not save you. Your standing in the sight of men will do you no good in the sight of God, but as you deal with Jesus Christ here, so will He deal with you before the throne of God.

Question of the Heart.

2. In the next place—not only the most important question—it is a question that every man can answer. It is not so much a question of the head as it is a question of the heart. The reason you're not a Christian is not because you don't know enough, but because you're not willing to do enough. You're not willing to write that letter to someone and say you lied about them and talked about them. You're not willing to go home and rip up that low-necked low-down ballroom costume and make it into something decent. You're not willing to take the booze out of your cellar and throw your pack of cards into hell. It's not a question of an understanding head, but a wrong heart.

Every Man Must Answer.

3. But in the third place, it's a question that every man must answer. We must do something with Him. How hard Pilate tried to get rid of deciding. Thrice he said, "I find no fault in Him"; twice he said, "You take Him and judge Him according to your law." Once he said, "I will chastise Him and let Him go." He sent Him to Herod; he tried to use the annual pardon, but he could not placate the crowd clamoring for His death, and failing in every attempt he stood at last face to face with the issue. Now which shall it be? Barrabbas or Christ? Robber or Saviour? Leader of riots or Prince of Peace; and weak, irresolute, he made the cowardly choice and said, "Take Him and crucify Him."

You must answer. The responsibility of choosing you cannot escape. You may acept Him and all that God can do will be done for you You may scorn His proffered love, strike hands with the crowd and then bathe them in His blood; but if you do, all eternity will never wipe out the crimson stain.

4. Many say, "I will not decide tonight"; but, my brother, this is not only the most important question; not only a question you can answer, but it is a question you must answer now. You say you will not decide now, but if you do not this night decide for Christ, every step you take to your home will echo back your rejection and all hell will yell and rejoice because you've turned Him down. To refuse for a single moment to decide for Christ is for that moment to decide against Him. Christ is here now. To go away without Him is to turn your back upon Him. Most people expect some day to become Christians. Even a Pagan prophet said, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like His"; and yet we are not willing to do now the thing we ought to do. I have heard of a hunter who had a whistle that imitated the voice of a fawn, and one day, when he blew upon it a beautiful dove put her head out of the thicket wondering where the child was that was crying for its mother; she saw the hunter and knew it was her deadly enemy; but even though she trembled she did not move and when he saw that great exhibition of mother love, he was moved with compassion and could not fire, but, lowering his rifle he lifted his hand And there are some people who, because so good and long-suffering, and so forbearing, they can go and ignore the claims of Christ and live as they please and then bank on God's compassion to save them when they get ready to let Him do it.

Would you rather die as Infidel Hobbes died, saying as he went, "I'm taking a fearful leap into the dark," or would you rather go as did our late martyred president with his head pillowed on his good book singing "Nearer My God to Thee." Would you rather go as Ingersol did, without a song at your funeral, or would you rather go as did dear old Moody singing "God is calling; Heaven is opening; earth is receding"? As you choose tonight, which of you will not say, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like His."

If not, get acquainted with this wonderful young author and his gripping, fascinating new serial story,

"Then I'll Come Back to You"

We are sure you will like the story of Stephen O'Mara, a poor little fatherless, motherless boy from the heart of the BIG WOODS. He had never seen more than three houses together in a clearing in all of his young life until the call of The Land Beyond the Hills came to him. Then came the greatest joy and sorrow of his life—he met THE GIRL. And then—but why spoil the story?

In Want Ads Do Not Use An Unnecessary Word, Nor Omit a Necessary One

A want ad may be too short as well as too long. There ought to be, always, a rational brevity—but this should not preclude a touch of "human interest"—the statement of such facts as will give the advertisements a certain DEFINITENESS instead of vagueness.

DISHONEST ADVERTISING.

Through a decision of the United States Supreme Court the postal regulations regarding the fraudulent use of the mails have been tightened and it is possible for the Federal government to adopt even a stricter supervision over advertisements than ever before. The case came up from the Florida courts, where officials of a land company were indicted for unlawful use of the mails in connection with the sale of 10-acre farms.

The Florida court held that if a person received his money's worth he had no cause of action because of exaggerated advertising, and that such promotion did not constitute fraud. The Supreme Court, however, reversed that decision by holding that "when a proposed seller goes beyond that (mere puffing) and assigns to an article qualities it does not possess, * * * invents advantages * * * and engages in false representations and pretense, he commits the deception and fraud."

In other words, exaggerated advertising that leads prospective buyers to expect more than they will get is fraudulent and under this decision can be barred from the mails and the senders prosecuted. The Passaic Herald says truthfully that whether or not this will go any further than to catalogues and special advertising propaganda remains to be seen, but it is another step in the right direction that will eventually bring about a generally higher standard in advertising ethics.

There was a time when the flamboyant style of exaggeration and disregard of facts was accepted by the public, and it had a tendency to affect all advertising. Then the concerns that believed in telling only the truth began their campaigns for honesty in advertising and great results have been attained. The majority of newspapers will not now open their columns to the known dishonest advertiser and will close them to the offending ones as soon as they learn of dishonest tactics wherein exaggeration of statement is made to induce customers to buy something that is not what it is represented. The reputable merchants and the self-respecting newspapers have demonstrated that honest advertising pays 100 per cent. and that the dishonest is always a losing venture in the long run. This decision of the Supreme Court will do much to further close publicity avenues against the unscrupulous venders, as well as those who are inclined to go to extremes in "puffing" their wares.

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS.

Yesterday was the anniversary of the birthday of Chief T. O. Doane, of the Plainfield fire department. No matter what the year of his birth, he is still hale and hearty, still young in body and in spirit, and there is hardly a man, woman or child in all the community but that will wish this honored and honorable servant of the city every pleasure that may come his way—the greatest of which is the knowledge of a life well lived and a public work well done. Chief Doane has been a member of the Plainfield fire department for fifty-one years and has been its chief for almost forty. It is well known that Plainfield always demands the best and what better tribute could be written for him.

Great Britain found that it could not coax, bluff or shame all its able-bodied men into the army of the King, so now after months of patient quibbling it will enforce general compulsory service. Only a few soldiers are left in England, for she already has 5,000,000 men in the field, according to official figures, and only a small part of these are territorials, but those that have held out this long are slackers and are not entitled to consideration. England has not lost, possibly, in battle because of her slowness in mobilizing her strength, but she has lost much in prestige and will pay dearly for it if peace is declared within a short time.

Just to prove, probably, that the American voter will take most anything seriously the New York World is editorially urging that the Republican National convention nominate Woodrow Wilson for president, and it has worked up a fiery interest second to none political before the nation just now. Where are they that they should retreat, or worse yet, where would they be if they did retreat?

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Father's Part.

Gems of rare radiance adorn
A matron's loveliness;
The silkworm from its nest is torn
That she may have a dress;
Bold divers search the ocean blue
For pearls to grace her neck;
Admiring guests say, "How-dye-do,"
And father writes a check.
Fine silks and laces look well on
The sweet girl graduate;
The gowns that she is apt to don
Would bankrupt an estate;
Fine present she receives as well;
Rare jewels by the peck.
The mob exclaims: "My, ain't she swell!"
And father writes a check.

Signs of the Times.

Chicago has passed an ordinance closing all restaurants at 1 o'clock in the morning. The people will have to lay in a few ham sandwiches to last them until daybreak.

It would be a regular Mexican trick to go and cash in his checks before we had learned to pronounce his name correctly.

It is said that Japan is looking for trouble with Uncle Sam. Well, one thing is certain, she will find it if she looks hard enough.

The circus season has opened in New York and Chicago. This is a sign of spring, but not a very reliable one.

Horrors of war are multiplying. American troops in Mexico are reported to be shy of cigaret papers.

The list of Fifty Immortals doesn't contain the name of Mr. Dooley or Abe Martin. Something wrong.

Encouragement.

This paper, says the Barnesville (Ohio) Whetstone, will present to the parents of the first-born within the corporate limits of Barnesville in the year 1917 an order for a full outfit of baby clothes, including "French ivory" rattler for quieting purposes. This offer will be good to all alike—white, black, old or young, contest. The attending physician is to furnish the time of birth. Get busy! Fine weather we're having.

Wonders of the Human Body.

The following answers to questions on physiology during an examination were sent in by a school teacher:

Digestion is the process of taking the food through the mouth until it reaches the blood.

The Saliva glands are in the falls of the stomac. They produce the gastric juice.

The stomac is a large organ; there are two parts of the stomac and are round.

The stomac is a bag in between the ribbs with a spout running up to the mouth.

Circulation is like the pipes in the city when the pumps stop there is not any water.

Circulation is blood going through all parts of the blood.

Tonsils are in the nose; they are there so we can breathe.

The mouth is where the food is taken in at.

The mouth is a cavity at the front of the face.

The mouth is an opening in the front of the head.

Now Will You Be Good?

The fellow who has been supplying himself with fuel from his neighbor's woodshed and coal bins for some time has been seen in the act and is definitely known. If this occurs again the matter will be extremely humiliating if not seriously painful.—The Gaston (Ind.) Gazette.

Another Tragedy.

Oh, two-piece suit of yesteryear,
I need thee once again.
But thy appearance nowadays
Cannot but cause me pain.

I hung thee up last autumn in
My clothes press without fear;
I counted on thee, good kind friend,
To help me out this year.

Alack, thou'rt now a peek-a-boo,
And that is not the worst;
Thy bosom and thy tails are gone—
The moths got to you first.

JANE GREY AND WILLIAM DESMOND, THE TWO TRIANGLE-INCE STARS IN "WAIFS"

AT PROCTOR'S TODAY.

Jane Grey and William Desmond, both popular favorites of the speaking stage, are co starred today at Proctor's Theatre in "The Waifs," a pathetic story of a young Episcopal clergyman's decline because of his inadvertent use of liquor, and his ultimate redemption at the hands of a girl of the slums. Beginning with the incident of his dismissal from the church, the story is replete with stirring situations, until through his contrition, and the influence exerted over him by a wholehearted child of the underworld, he is restored to the ministry. Added feature today in conjunction with "The Waifs" include Jolly Fatty Arbuckle, the most popular of Keystone comedians, who provides rapturous laughter and wholesome merriment by his comic capers in "His Wife's Mistake." In addition to the above program of all star propensity the big local photoplay, "It Happened in Plainfield," is also shown. Tomorrow will mark the appearance of Marguerite Clark, the dainty screen ingenue in "Still Waters," in which she shows a complete mastery of screen technique, placing her in the front ranks of motion picture actresses. Her role of Nestra, whose sheltered life has developed certain worldless, ingenious qualities, calls for a certain elfian grace associated with numerous stage successes of Miss Clark. "The Social Pirates" and "It Happened in Plainfield" will be added attractions on this date. Saturday marks the appearance of a wonderful and varied program, including Hamilton Revelle in a stirring Metro photoplay entitled "The Price of Malice," comedy creations featuring "Musty Suffer," and Mutt and Jeff, Minerva Courtenay imitating Charlie Chaplin in "The Champion," and the first of a series of juvenile comedies entitled "World War in Kidland," enacted entirely by child screen stars headed by Master Joseph Monahan. This feature was booked especially for the entertainment of the little folk and parents are urged to bring the children along to see this unusual treat. The feature attraction on Monday will be dainty Mary Pickford in "Madame Butterfly," some of the scenes of which the majority of Plainfielders remember were taken right here in town at the Japanese Gardens in Leland avenue, and numerous other scenes were enacted in this section of the State, which makes this feature doubly interesting to local film fans.

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

Heading the fine big vaudeville which Manager Shannon brings to the Plainfield Theatre this afternoon for the last half of the week is the pretentious singing and dancing novelty, "Theo, the Balloon Girl." Nothing like it has ever been seen in this city before. "Theo" is assisted by six "dandies," and beside the fine singing and dancing numbers they give, there is a great surprise in the scenic part of the production. Beside this headline feature, five other acts are on the new bill. They include Mae Healey and Company, singing and piano offering; Benny and Mildred, in a farcical skit, "The Plumber"; Jessen and Jessen, singing and dancing; Courney and Company, in their latest original sketch, "She's a Pippin," carrying special scenery, and Joe Brenner, comedian.

Entries are coming in fast for the amateur performance which is to be given tomorrow night. Six acts have already been listed by Dave Rogers, treasurer of the theatre, and he asks that all who intend entering, notify him at once.

--Astor Theatre--

The star attraction at The Astor Theatre today will be Carter De Haven in "The Wrong Door," a Blue Bird film production. In this screen production Carter De Haven is seen to good effect, being both humorous and pathetic, and in this superb feature the Blue Bird Film Co. have created another motion picture masterpiece. Mary Fuller presents a number of very human touches which are skillfully contained in this feature, being adopted when very young, and falling in love with the son of her guardian being one of the many thrilling situations. On Friday and Saturday Charles Frohman presents the famous star who created a sensation in the picture version of "The Eternal City," Pauline Frederick, in a picturization of the "Spider," by William H. Clifford. Also on Friday we will show the Paramount-Bray cartoons No. 6, the Selig Tribune No. 32 and other star attractions, and on Saturday Helen Holmes, in "The Girl and the Games," which is an added attraction in two parts, and other Broadway features. Always a good clean show. We cater to the children and the women, our theatre is well lighted and ventilated, and pictures are the best that money can procure. Our motto: "Quality, not quantity." We give Travelstamps.

EDUCATOR'S NOTEBOOK

New York—Educators here are speculating as to the success of a unique experiment to be tried by Louis A. Hoffman, a bachelor, of New Orleans and New York, who is to spend $6,000 to test the value of woman's education. He proposes to send two girls to college, and to learn from observation of the girls while in college and their results after leaving college whether education of women pays. While his generous offer may prove a boon to two bright young American girls, the test would prove nothing of a general nature, say prominent educators. The girls might prove brilliant or dullards, might be actuated to study harder or to neglect study by the attitude of their benefactor, and whatever they accomplished would not be a fair test for the sex, in view of the large field of woman's education now in operation in America.

Chicago—Much favorable comment is heard on the decision of the Religious Education Association that religious education should be done in the home, the church, or the private school, and not by the public school not in official connection with the public school. The association held a meeting here a few months ago at which that principle was strongly endorsed. Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of the Methodist Episcopal church, was elected president of the association, and Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation, of New York, was chosen vice-president. The next convention will be held in Boston.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Tree planting on a large scale is being undertaken by the dozen young men of the senior class in the State Forestry Academy, and they have been detailed to help in reforestering the Black Forest, in Potter county. Over a half-million trees are being set out in one plantation. Sixty thousand of the trees are being transplanted by the students from the nursery at the academy. The boys live in tents, and are getting all the necessary experience to make them experts in forestry.

Bryn Mawr, Pa.—The faculty troubles at Bryn Mawr College have come into the public prints of late, and there is said to be under way a general shake-up at the institution. The discontent of members of the faculty toward Miss M. Carey Thomas, the president of the college, has culminated in the resignation of six instructors. It is claimed by some of the senior members of the faculty that Miss Thomas treats her faculty members as "laborers," and they assert she is capricious and arbitrary. Miss Thomas has met the issue by offering to co-operate to remove the causes of the complaint.

Meridian, Miss.—To prove to every farmer in the South that he can raise whatever he needs on his own acres, Meridian College has been developed to feed itself. President J. W. Besson, of the college, is a trained scientific farmer. Thirteen years ago, when the college buildings burned, he secured a location outside the city limits. There is in operation there now a thoroughly-equipped farm. His students come from thirty States and five foreign countries. The body, the hand and the heart are trained, as well as the head. Rich and poor families are sending their boys to Meridian College, which is trying to demonstrate that there is more future for the young man of the right calibre right on the farm than anywhere else.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Ten cents and a letter from a child to the New York Tribune has grown into a battleship fund to date of $11,377.86, and is still growing. The church of the living God since A. D. has grown from a handful of twelve faithful followers in a small upper room to a thousand and ten thousand of members. The sad difference is that the one seems to be a unity of aim (I am referring now to the difference between the battleship fund and the church) and purpose to share and share alike. The money flows in from all without one argument and without a question. Again we have amongst our midst a tabernacle, a body of faithful followers of Christ to raise up the fallen, to strengthen the weak, and to reprove the sinner. And as yet, not one word has been spoken of unity, and the writer wonders if there will be? People will live alike, sleep alike, work alike, and for the most part be alike. Until it comes down to the subject of religion. Then we are confronted with about 52 religious bodies (Almanac of 1916) striving for supremacy in members and in numbers, and yet we Christians expect others outside to "hit the trail," give our testimony, receive the right of confirmation, or join the church.

Looking at it from an outsider's point of view, may I ask is it any wonder if the unbelieving world sneers or jeers or remains undecided which way to go, or turn, and people of the unbelieving class remain silent? I would to God that Plainfield, N. J., Union county, might bring the whole population to its feet with the cry of unity.

"One Lord, One Faith, One Baptism,' this is what we want, and are going to have, in time. What is unity, you ask? Are you, dear writer, putting yourself in the place of a judge of another man's conscience to tell me how, or where or when I am to worship God? No, but there must be some common ground which we all might stand on. The sinner would join your church far quicker, if the body of Christ were not split up into several hundred pieces. Mission work is all right, God bless it, but standing on the unbelievers' platform I might answer you thus, I believe in God. Then what? Where shall I go? Must I stand on the bank for say ten years, first attending a Baptist, then a Methodist, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, Universal, Jewish Synagogue, or some other cults too numerous to mention? Answer me ye Tabernacle workers, my argument is only begun.

"TIZ" FOR SORE, TIRED FEET--AH!

"Tiz" is grand for aching, swollen, tender, calloused feet or corns.

Ah! what relief! No more tired feet; no more burning feet; no more swollen, aching, tender, sweaty feet. No more soreness in corns, callouses, bunions.

No matter what ails your feet or what under the sun you've tried without getting relief, just use "Tiz." is the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. "Tiz" cures your foot trouble so you'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't seem tight and your feet will never, never, hurt or get sore and swollen. Think of it, no more foot misery, no more agony from corns, callouses or bunions.

Get a 25-cent box at any drug store or department store and get instant relief. Wear smaller shoes. Just once try "Tiz." Get a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents. Think of it.—Adv.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-know authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Lizards Hear a Rumbling in the Elf Hill.

"Hark!" they cried. "What a buzzing!"

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

"ONCE upon a time," daddy began the bedtime story, "some lizards were nimbly running in and out among the clefts of an old tree. They understood each other well, for they all spoke the lizard language.

"'Listen to that!' cried one lizard. 'What a rumbling and brumbling is going on inside the old elf hill! I haven't closed my eyes for two nights for the noise. I might just as well have a big toothache for all the sleep I get.'

"'There is something doing inside the hill,' said a friend of the sleepless lizard. 'They propped up the top of the old hill on four red posts till cockcrow this morning to air it out thoroughly, and the elf maidens are practicing new dance steps. They must be planning to have a big party.'

"'I was talking to my friend, the earthworm,' said a third lizard. 'He came straight up out of the hill where he has been boring for a week. The miserable creature can't see, but he can feel his way and do a lot of eavesdropping. And what he heard! They are expecting grand visitors at the elf hill. Who they are the earthworm wouldn't say. Perhaps he did not know. All the will-o'-the-wisps are ordered for a procession of torches, and the elf maidens are getting the silver and gold plate polished up by putting it out in the moonlight.'

"'That's certainly news!' cried a lot of lizards. 'But whoever can the strangers be?'

"'Hark!' they cried. 'What a humming and buzzing! What on earth is happening now?'

"At this moment the elf hill opened, and an elderly elf maiden tripped out. She was hollow behind, like the inside of a mask, but otherwise quite attractively dressed. She was the old elf king's housekeeper and a distant cousin of his. Upon her forehead she wore an amber heart. She moved her legs at a great pace—trip, trip! How she tripped over the ground! In no time she was down in the swamp talking to the night jar.

"'You are invited to the elf hill tonight,' she said to him. 'Make yourself useful. Be so good as to take charge of these other invitations. We are going to have some very grand guests—goblins—who always have something interesting to say. So the old elf king is making a great show of our party.'"

Daddy stopped and looked at the clock. The children knew, then, that 'twas time to go to bed.

"Here's a kiss for you, daddy," they said, running upstairs.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Young Gordon's Business Sense Fades Before His Wife's Ambitions.

"I could not buy the house, after all. Mrs. Townsend wanted a larger payment down than I could make. She said, however, that if I could make the payment at the end of the year she would allow all that I had paid for rent on the purchase price." Ralph Gordon was talking over his plans with his bride-to-be the evening before the wedding.

"Not bought it. Why I have told all the girls that you had bought it and that we were to start housekeeping in our own home." There was reproach in the tone and disappointment in the pretty face that looked up at him.

"I had hoped to be able to buy it, and I am sure we can save the necessary amount for the payment this year. Most of our furniture has been given to us; at least a great deal of it," he corrected, as he saw the look of surprise on her face. "We have all the clothes we shall need for a long time——"

"You mean all I will need for this season," interrupted the girl with a toss of the head. "I do not suppose you expect me to begin wearing last season's hats next fall."

"Oh, of course not; but I am getting a good salary and we certainly will not need it all to live comfortably. Mrs. Morton says you could get a little maid to come and wash dishes and do cleaning. Then by having a woman come two days a week to do laundry work and general cleaning you could get along very well."

"Who is Mrs. Morton, pray?" There was aloofness in her tone.

"She is the wife of the junior partner of the firm, who lives next door to our house. You will like her, I am sure. She is young and attractive." Ralph drew the girl close to his side as he replied.

"Do you mean she has no maid?" was the next question.

"None but the little girl I spoke of."

"Who does the cooking?" asked Ethel, sitting up and looking at him in astonishment.

"Why, she does," answered Ralph.

"I know nothing about cooking," exclaimed the girl.

"Well, you can learn, can't you?" Ralph pinched her dimpled chin.

"I do not propose to be your cook, if that is what you mean. I am not used to housework and you know it." The lips were drawn into a thin line of determination.

"But, my dear," expostulated Ralph, "the cooking for two would not be a very heavy job, and Mrs. Morton assures me that a good maid is almost impossible to get in Fairport."

"Then we will take one from here. I do not propose to begin to drudge right away—that is one sure thing." There was silence for a time; then Ralph said, drawing the girl close to him again:

"I thought you would be willing to do this to help us get ahead so we could make the payment on the house. It is a beauty."

"A maid will not cost so much that we cannot afford it. We can take one from here. I would not have the girls think I did my own cooking for anything," came in low tones from the head on his shoulder.

"Great Scott! Ethel. What have 'the girls' to do with our arrangements. It is nothing to them what we do." Ralph's tone was irritated.

"They will be coming out to see me, and I will not have them think I have m arried a man who expects me to do his work for him. You always said your mother was wrong, and that being able to work was not a necessary qualification for your wife."

There were tears in the blue eyes that looked so clear and limped two inches from his own. He kissed the eyes and lips as he said:

"Well, we will see if we can get a maid to go down from here."

—Mother's Magazine.

Intelligent Motherhood.

The great requisite before the birth of a little one is a healthy, happy, tranquil mother and father; natural living; plenty of wholesome exercise; early hours; plain, nourishing food; sensible dress and a looking forward, happily expectant, with no fears to disturb the advent of the new life.

The baby's after care has also been grossly magnified. Such overscrupulousness in feeding and universal germ destruction has driven many young mothers to distraction and their babies with them. Safer a little underdoing than so much overwork—safer for mother and child.

The majority of older and younger mothers are today such strangers to tranquility and repose that the strength needed to carry them happily through pregnancy is wasted and the little one is born with nerves on edge, demanding constant care.

Motherhood should never be thought of as hazardous, any more than living should be so considered. Both are natural and one fraught with no more danger than the other. A mother heroic? Yes; but heroism is that upon which real mothers thrive. It is always there unless destroyed by bugaboo utterances of those who should be saying better things. The optimistic writer and talker is desired, not the pessimistic, to prepare women for the natural ordeal which crowns womanhood—maternity.

Not that this is woman's only work, but it is her highest; and all other occupations and self-cultivation should be but to better fit her for this greatest work—the nurturing and training of children for finest manhood and womanhood.

Wrestling.

A mother recently invited nine boys to celebrate the tenth birthday of her only son. They came at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. It was the program that they should visit with each other until 6 o'clock. Then they should have supper and play together until 8 o'clock, when they should depart for their homes. The young guests came promptly at five, but they did not follow the schedule very closely. By a quarter-past five there was a tumult in the house. Every boy was doing his level best to put another boy on his back on the floor. The mother was distressed. She thought that well-brought-up boys, when invited to a birthday party, would behave themselves. She expected they would visit about current affairs in the community. She overlooked the fact, even if she were familiar with it, that boys visit with their biceps. One boy cannot get a line on another one until he sees whether he can put him on his back. Boys who have been separated for a few weeks engage in a contest of muscle when they meet. They do not inquire after the health and spirits of one another. They make inferences regarding these matters after they have tried out each other's muscles.

A home containing boys which does not make some kind of provision for wrestling is a poor home after all. Boys who are suppressed in their attempts to wrestle will never quite outgrow the craving for it. A boy's muscles are literally bursting with energy which must be expanded in wrestling and the like or it will break out in less desirable ways.

Let any parent or teacher who is troubled with the restless, uncontrolled actions of boys from seven to fifteen, send them out of doors for a wrestling match. Then let them come back into the house or the school. It will be found that the virus which was circulated in their muscles will be drained off for a time. They will probably be reasonably self-controlled for a considerable period, until a new supply of energy is generated in the muscles and this must find expression in the instinctive way.

Football, tug-of-war and similar games indulge the same instinct as wrestling, and furnish a good substitute for it. Every normal boy should have opportunities to play these games.

Concentration.

There has been a good deal, said, first and last, in pedagogical circles about concentration through desire—that is, getting interest and attention through doing what you want to do—and there is much to be said for this idea. But concentration which is based upon desire fails when desire fails. Concentration which lasts is based upon a disciplined will, and a trained will is acquired, so far as I have observed, by one process only, namely, the constant facing of matters which have both the imperative of interest and necessity behind them. With children's minds the imperative, sufficiently developed, causes intellectual cravings which amount to a necessity by and by, and almost automatically compel attention and concentration upon the things which are before the mind.

Concentration through the trained will is the secret of all successful self-organization.

SUFFRAGISTS TO HOLD STATE WIDE CELEBRATION

At the meeting of the State Board of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association held in Orange last Friday, the choice of a date for the annual "Suffrage Day" was considered, and the resulting decision should prove interesting to the people of the State. May 12, appointed by Governor Fielder as "New Jersey Day," was also chosen by the suffragists as their day, in deference to the spirit of State patriotism.

This combined celebration is significant of the co-operative attitude of the suffragists toward public issues, regardless of the State's hesitation in conferring the right of active participation in these issues. All of the celebrations held by the suffragists on May 12 will be planned so as to bring the ideals of State pride and State achievement before the people who attend them. Delegations were present at the board meeting from ten of the twelve Congressional districts.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

NO PROMINENT FIGHTERS.

Some people are beginning to realize that we have not any really great boxers or fighters at the present time, or, perhaps, to put it another way, we have so many great fighters that few stand out prominently. Most of us are still young enough to remember when the name of John L. Sullivan stood for the superlative in fighting ability. Bob Fitzsimmons was so far ahead of any other fighter of his time, everything considered, that his name was a household word wherever fighters were known. Jim Corbett represented a newer and better type of fighters. Terry McGovern was as well known as the president of the United States. George Dixon was the greatest featherweight champion the world has ever known, and Tommy Ryan and Kid Lavigne, welterweight and lightweight champions, have never been equaled in their respective classes. There are more fighters today than ever before, but we think the reason that we have no pre-eminent fighters, aside possibly from Willard, is that we are boxing nowadays and not fighting. We are having ten round exhibitions and no unlimited round prize fights. We believe the science of boxing, or, of fighting, if you please, is much more advanced than it ever has been, but we think we have stated the reason why we have no fighters now who stand out head and shoulders above the rest.

FITZSIMMONS HAS THROWN UP THE SPONGE.

Speaking of "Ruby Bob" Fitzsimmons we're now inclined to believe that even his most ardent admirers have thrown up the sponge. Bob is now only a shadow of the Fitzsimmons who won the three world's pugilistic titles and he wouldn't stand up for thirty seconds with even the most scorned of present day white hopes. Weak as a feather, bent and shriveled up, the Cornishman presents a sad appearance. His one diversion nowadays is to relate experiences of his palmy days and tell how he "knocked 'em cold" when youth was his. Several times during the past week he has visited Plainfield and those who know him have been forced to turn and watch the worn out figure of the former champ as he ambles on his weary way. Broken in health, broken in spirit and financially down and out, Fitzsimmons has taken every count but the final one, but he is still admired by the ring fans who saw him at his best and is hailed as the greatest scrapper who even donned a glove.

ALL ATTENTION HAS BEEN TURNED TO NEWARK.

In the eyes of the athletic world Newark is the capital city of the country just at present. The 250th anniversary celebration of Jersey's biggest city will be marked by one of the choicest sport programs a single municipality has ever promoted in the short space of six months. Athletes from all parts of the country, some even from Plainfield and Central New Jersey, will compete for the thousands of dollars worth of prizes. It is the chance of a life time for the Jersey athlete and we expect to see some sensational performers developed ere the year rolls by. Now is the time to organize and Plainfield should make sure that it has its share of athletic clubs on the list when the sport curtain rolls up.

FARMERS WILL HAVE ALL CREDENTIALS THIS WEEK.

Saturday will mark the second series of City Baseball League games. The Farmer A. C. will appear Saturday with all the credentials for a regular league outfit. Last week it performed as a temporary combine and up to Monday its franchise was left unacted upon. But now the Farmers have been given the endorsement of the league moguls and the City League is ready to proceed merrily on its season's journey. It bears the outward appearance of a healthy, kicking, well-bred youngster and here's hoping that prosperity dogs its footsteps between now and October. Who knows what it may wind up to be?

Women! Automobiles? Most certainly! Yet it was only a few years ago that to the average woman an automobile meant only a distinguished and luxurious conveyance, which would cradle her over the city streets or rough country roads with the comfort and speed of an express train, so it seemed. The idea of a woman driving a motorcar was preposterous, outlandish, to women as well as men. She didn't know anything about it; she couldn't even start it. But to her an automobile ride was always an exhilarating experience, much more so than to trail behind "faithful Dobbin" or a spirited thoroughbred in an unromantic vehicle, even though she had to relinquish the driver's seat together with the pleasure of handling the reins, and had not the slightest opportunity of experiencing the thrill of driving a powerful motorcar. The best automobile made then was only partially perfected, compared with a modern car, and the tendency of manufacturers being toward big, heavy machines, it was impossible for any one but a strong man, thoroughly versed in the whims and caprices of gasoline motors, to handle a motorcar. Of course, the development of the automobile has been influenced by the experience which manufacturers had with those cars of previous years, the result being that the modern car is the extreme antithesis of earlier models. Light weight, simple construction, dependable service, comfortable, easy to operate, and reasonable in price the motorcar of today can be operated with equal facility by either women or men.

No ball player, however much of a star he may be, is greater than the game itself, and it is an old adage that no man, whatever his talents, is absolutely indispensable in this world. The time must come to every ball player when this will be brought home to him. The discovery was made by Tris Speaker when President Lannin, of the Red Sox, wrogn weary of Speaker's holdup and holdout tactics, announced that he had decided to do without his star outfielder and had disposed of his claim to him to the Cleveland Indians. The announcement was a great shock to the fans of the country, but an even greater one to Speaker himself, apparently. Tris evidently nursed the idea that baseball in Boston would close up shop without him. It won't.

PLAINFIELD HIGH DEFEATS SOMERVILLE

Wins Poorly Played Game at County Seat by Score of 12 to 10.

The Plainfield High School baseball team went to Somerville yesterday afternoon and took a 12 to 10 verdict from the High School tossers of that place. Considering the wretched condition of the field, the P. H. S. outfit did well, and on several occasions signs of teamwork developed. That the pitching staff is still weak was shown when Davidson had to relieve Hutchcroft on the mound in the fifth frame.

Somerville drew the first tally in the second session by getting two runs as the result of errors. The locals came back and tied things up in the third, when Dunham started off with a screaming two-sacker and followed in the next with a three-bagger. One more run in the first half of the fifth gave Plainfield a four-run lead, but then it was that the homesters turned loose and touched Hutchcroft for five hits, which, with a walk and a passed ball, gave six runs. High got the lead back in the seventh and eighth, when six runs were scored to Somerville's two.

The members of the home team seemed to run wild on the bases, despite the good throwing of Apgar, stealing eleven sacks. In the last inning the umpire called three Plainfielders out on strikes in succession, when each one took only one swing apiece. The score:

KID M'COY ENJOYS SPORT AT EXPENSE OF CORBETT.

Jim Corbett and Kid McCoy, the two former great heavyweights, met recently in New York.

"You're looking heavy," said McCoy as he eyed Corbett.

"I don't weigh as much as you do," said Jim.

"Indeed, you do," answered the inventor of the corkscrew punch.

"Let's get on the scales," said Corbett. "The man who is too well fed will lose the championship," said Jim, with a laugh. Just then some one handed Corbett a clipping to read. Jim looked at it, blushed a bit, squinted closer and finally reached—for his spectacles.

"Well, upon my word!" shouted McCoy in high glee. "I may be running to seed, but I haven't had to fall back on the cheaters. Look at this old bird using grannie's specs. They'll never catch the Kid resorting to them."

TEAM MATCH PLAYS BY WOMEN GOLFERS

Montclair Scores Sweeping Victory Over Forest Hill by Score of 12 to 0.

With only three defaults in the three sections engaged, the members of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association carried out the first of their series of team matches yesterday. Two of the defaults took place in the New Jersey Division, where Glen Ridge failed to put forward a team to oppose Englewood, and Norwood won in like manner from Westfield. The other was in the Long Island-Staten Island division, where the Richmond County Country Club, of Dongan Hills, S. I., was saved the long journey to Bayshore, L. I., through the inability of the South Shore Field Club to raise a team.

Montclair Golf Club scored a sweeping victory by the maximum of 12 points to 0, scored by the Nassau system, over the Forest Hill course, and Nassau Country Club, of the Long Island-Staten Island section, was almost as severe on Woodmere, winning by 9 to 1. As an offset to this, Westbrook and Piping Rock played to a tie of two points at Piping Rock, and Dunwoodie and Century tied at 5 all at Dunwoodie.

Most of the clubs were represented by their strongest players. Mrs. L. J. Grumbach, who recently defeated Miss Lillian B. Hyde in Florida, won a hard-fought match from Mrs. L. L. Blake, of Cranford. The summary of the New Jersey section follows.

WESTFIELD HIGH BOWS TO N. P. H. S.

Borough Boys Take Game on Hyde Oval by Score of 10 to 3.

The North Plainfield High School team won another game yesterday when it defeated the Westfield High School aggregation on Hyde Oval by a score of 10 to 3. The locals gathered a total of thirteen hits off the opposing twirlers, while Dilts did not have to extend himself to hold the visitors in check.

In comparing the relative strength of Plainfield High and North Plainfield High, both of which have met Westfield, the borough boys have a slight advantage. The borough and city teams will meet on Parker Field, Saturday, May 13.

STATE GOLF ASSOCIATION ANNOUNCES TITLE PLANS

Secretary Nathan S. Schroeder of the New Jersey State Golf Association sent out yesterday the formal notice of the tournament for the State championship, to be held at Englewood, June 1, 2 and 3. The event will be conducted along the lines of a regular club tournament, with four sixteens to qualify, the winner of the first sixteen being the title-holder for the year.

There will also be competition for beaten eights and a gold medal for the winner of the low score in the qualifying round. On the final day of the tournament the annual association handicap will be played, for which all players, except finalists, are eligible. The club having the lowest four scores in the qualifying round will win the team championship trophy and the individual players will receive prizes. This tournament is closed to residents of New Jersey or golfers who are members of Jersey clubs and not of any other clubs.

MATCH GAME POSTPONED.

The match game between Art Voorhees and Coyne to be played on Gates' alleys has been postponed until next Tuesday.

Seen and Heard on the Street

Tax Collector William R. Townsend discovered on North avenue yesterday for the first time in his young life actually not in a hurry.

Well-known East End pest who has a habit of punctuating conversations by picking threads, real and imaginary, off your coat, being introduced to a prominent boroughites, of the same species who calls you by your first name one second after being introduced. Introduction was given at Somerset and Front streets by an East Front street merchant who drives home the pointlessness of his sentences with the peroration, "Be-lieve me!"

Group of youngsters on East Ninth street tramping all over a fine pansy bed in search of a baseball five minutes after a woman in the house had finished two hours' work getting the bed in just the shape she wanted.

Indignant residents on West Front street, below Plainfield avenue, expressing their feelings in vehement terms because the Public Service trolley sprinkler goes as far as Plainfield avenue and then turns back, leaving the thick dust to the west to be sprinkled down by the first rain that comes along.

Young woman walking down Park avenue yesterday afternoon attracting widespread attention by her flashy costume, a skirt of awning material with vertical black and white stripes three inches wide, a pongee coat with alternating old gold and purple stripes at least four inches apart and a green grass hat as big as a Mexican sombrero.

Whitney Frazee, Plainfield's veteran express messenger, staggering off a New York train last night with the following assortment of miscellaneous "must-have-them-in-a-hurry" articles draped about his manly form: Package of automobile inner tubes, section of stove pipe, a carburetor, a remodelled gown, box of Loft's fruit candy, a pair of buckskin button shoes, casket name plate that had just been engraved, assortment of seeds, package of hair restorer, half yard flesh colored tulle, a package of patent medicines, a bundle of fishing rods, baby's go-cart in compact form, an emergency set of false teeth, a fancy dog collar and a dozen or more theatre tickets tucked inside his vest pocket.

AUTO SEASON OPENS MAY 13.

Eastern Campaign at Sheepshead Bay Track Starts on This Date.

The eastern automobile racing season for 1916 will be officially opened on May 13, when the contest for the Metropolitan cup, heralded by motor enthusiasts as the great event of the year, will be held at the new Sheepshead Bay speedway, New York. In addition to the contest for the Metropolitan trophy there will be other races—for the Queens County cup, the Coney Island cup and the William Kemble cup. Twenty thousand dollars in cash prizes will be offered.

Many noted drivers from the Pacific coast will come east with the assurances of a long season's campaign.

A probable added feature of the first day's racing will be an attempt by Barney Oldfield to negotiate the speedway circuit in a minute or better. In a letter to Fred Wagner Oldfield offers to wager $5,000 he can complete the two mile course within the minute.

The contest for the Metropolitan cup will mark an innovation in automobile racing, in that the distance of the race will be only 150 miles. The distances of the other contests will be as follows: Queens County cup, fifty miles; Coney Island cup, twenty miles, and the William Kemble cup, ten miles. Thus the public demand for shorter races, with livelier action, will be met.

The American Automobile association, it also was announced, has definitely decided to inaugurate, with the holding of the Metropolitan cup race, the proposed plan to keep an official record of points scored by all drivers. This is not only destined to stimulate interest throughout the country in motor racing, but is calculated to establish it as a permanent sport. The records will be kept on the same basis as the official ratings of the baseball stars, so that the organized bodies interested in automobiling in any part of the country may turn at any time to some recognized authority to ascertain the official standing of any driver.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Manager Stelle, of the Plainfield High School baseball team, has announced that a game has been scheduled with the Barringer Reserves of Newark for Decoration Day on Parker Field. He is also trying to arrange a date with either Battin or New Brunswick, previous games being called off on account of rain. The next game for the locals is at Pennington on Saturday.

From present indications it looks as if Plainfield High School would have a track meet again this year. Meetings of the four classes are being held now to organize teams and get ready for a meet. The Sophomores have gotten the start on the other classes by holding a meeting and electing Wilson Field captain and Martin Snyder manager. John Noll, who coached the fellows that entered the Penn relay last Saturday, will have supervision over affairs if a meet is held.

CHAPTER I.

I Don't Mind if I Do!

THAT year no rain had fallen for a score of days in the hill country. The valley road that wound upward and still upward from the town of Morrison ran a ribbon of puffy yellow dust between sun baked, brown sodded dunes; ran north and north, a tortuous series of loops on loops, to lose itself at last in the cooler promise of the first bulwark of the mountains.

Since early afternoon Caleb Hunter had been sitting almost immobile in the shade of the trellis which flanked the deep verandas of his huge white, thick pillared house on the hill above the river. It was reminiscent of another locality—the old Hunter place on the valley road.

Morrison had changed since Caleb Hunter's father topped with the white columned house that hill above the river. In those days it had been little more than a sleepy if conservatively prosperous and self sufficient community, without industry of any sort, or, it might be added, ambition or seeming need of one.

From the Hunter verandas a half dozen red roofed, brown shingled bungalows, half camps and half castles, were visible across the land stretches where the cattle had grazed before. And just beyond Caleb Hunter's own high box hedge Dexter Allison's enormous stucco and timber "summer lodge" sprawled amid a round dozen acres of green lawn and landscape gardening, its front to the river.

The fishing was still far above reproach a little farther back country, and Dexter Allison owned the sawmills that droned in the valley. His men drove his timber down from the hills in the north; his men piled the yellow planks upon his flat cars which ran in over his spur line that had crept up from the south. His hundreds and hundreds of rivermen already trod the sawdust padded streets of the newer Morrison that had sprung into being beyond the bend; they swarmed in on the drives, a hard faced, hard shouldered horde, picturesque proficient and profane. They brought with them color and care free prodigality and a capacity for abandonment to pleasure that ran the whole gamut of emotions, from raucous roarer chanties to sudden, swift encounters which were as silent as they were deadly. And they spent their money without stopping to count it.

The younger generation of the older Morrison was quick to point out the virtues of this vice. And after a time, when the older generation found that the rivermen preferred their own section of the town, ignoring as though they had never existed the staid and sleepy residential streets above, they heaved a sigh of partial relief and tried to forget their proximity.

It was the hottest day of the hottest fortnight that the hill country had known in years. The very temperature gave color to Allison's statement that the heat had driven them north from the shore—him and his wife and Barbara, their daughter of ten, and the half dozen or more guests whose trunks, coming on the next day, made an even more imposing sight than had Allison's own. And yet as he sat there in the shadow, methodically pulling upon his pipe, Caleb Hunter smiled from time to time reminiscently.

He was nodding his head drowsily when a haze of dust to the north caught his vagrant attention. Quite apparently it was raised by a foot traveler, and the latter were not frequent upon that road, especially foot travelers who came from that direction. Trivial as it was, it piqued his interest, and he lay back and followed it from lazily half closed eyes. It topped a rise and disappeared, the dust cloud, and reappeared in turn, but not until it had advanced to within a scant hundred yards of him could he make out the figure which raised it. And then, after one sharp glance, with a quick intake of breath, he rose and went a trifle hastily out across his own lawn toward the iron picket fence that bordered the roadside. He went almost hurriedly to intercept the boy who came marching over the brow of the last low hill.

Caleb Hunter, particularly in the last year or so, had seen many a strange and brilliant costume pass along that wilderness highway, but as he hung over the front gate he remembered that none of them had ever before drawn him from his deep chair in the shadow. For him none of them had ever approached in sensationalism the quite unbelievable garb of the boy who came steadily on and on, who came steadily nearer and nearer. With a little closer view of him the watching man understood the reason for the dense cloud of dust above the lone pedestrian, for when the boy raised his feet with each stride the man sized hobnailed boots which incased them failed to lift in turn. Indeed, the toes did clear the ground, but the heels, slipping away from the lean ankles, dragged in the follow through. And the boy's other garments, save for his flannel shirt and flapping felt hat, were of a size in keeping with the boots.

For a time Cafeb had been at a loss to make out the object which the boy carried upon one shoulder, balanced above a blanket tight rolled and tied with a string. Not until the grotesque little figure was within a dozen paces of him did he recognize it, and then at the same moment that he caught a glimpse of an old and rusted revolver strapped to the boy's narrow waist he realized what it was. The boy was toting a double springed steel trap, big enough it seemed to take all four feet of any bear that ever walked—and it was beautifully dull with oil!

Caleb stood and stared, mouth agape. A moment or two earlier he had had to fight off an almost uncontrollable desire to roar with laughter, but that mood had passed somehow as the boy came nearer, for the latter was not even aware of his presence there behind the iron fence. He was walking with his head up, thin face thrust forward like that of a young and overly eager setter with the bird in plain sight. The world of hunger in that strained and staring visage helped Caleb to master his mirth, and when at a tentative cough from him the small figure halted dead in his tracks and wheeled even the vestige of a smile left the wide waisted watcher's lips. Then Caleb had his first full view of the boy's features.

There were wide, deep shadows beneath the gray eyes, doubly noticeable because of the heavy fringe of the lashes that swept above them; there was a pallid, bluish circle around the thin and tight set lips. And the lean cheeks were very, very pale, both with the heat of the sun and a fatigue now close to exhaustion. But the eyes themselves as they met Caleb's were alight with a fire which afterward, when he had had more time to ponder it, made him remember the pictured eyes of the children of the crusades. They fairly burned into his own, and they checked the first half jocular words of greeting which had been trembling upon his lips. His voice was only grave and kindly when he began to speak.

"You—you look a trifle tired, young man," he said then. "Are you—going far?"

The boy touched his lips delicately with the point of his tongue. His gravity more than matched that of his questioner.

"Air—air thet the—city?"

The words were soft of accent and a little drawling. There was an accompanying gesture of one thumb thrown backward over a thin shoulder. But Caleb had to smile a little at the breathless note in the query.

"The city!" he echoed, a little puzzled. "The city! Well, now, I"— And he chuckled a bit.

The boy caught him up swiftly, almost sharply.

"Thet's—ain't thet Morrison?" he demanded.

And then Caleb had a glimmer of comprehension. He nodded.

"Yes," he answered quietly, "that's the city. That's Morrison down there."

"I thought it war," he murmured, and a thread of awe wove through the words. "I thought it est nachelly hed to be! Haow—haow many houses would you reckon they might be daown—daown in thet there holler?"

The owner of the white columned house gave the question its meed of reflection.

"Well, I—I'd say quite a few hundred at least."

The odd little figure bobbed his head.

"Thet's what old Tom always sed," he muttered, more to himself than to his hearer. "An'—an' I guess I ain't never rightly believed him till naow." And then, "Is—is New Yor-rk any bigger?" he asked.

The man at the picket fence smiled again, but the smile was without offense.

"Well, yes," he answered; "yes, considerably bigger, I should judge—twice as large at least, and maybe more than that."

The boy did not answer. He just faced about to stare once more. And then the miracle came to pass. Around a far bend in Dexter Allison's single spur track there came careening an asthmatic switch engine with a half dozen empty flats in tow. With a brave puffing and blowing of leaky cylinder heads, it rattled across an open space between piles of timber in the mill yard and disappeared with a shrill toot of warning for unseen workmen upon the tracks ahead. The boy froze to granite-like immobility as it flashed into view. Long after it had passed from sight he stood like a bit of a fantastic figure cut from stone. Then a tremor shook him from head to foot, and when it came slowly about Caleb saw that his small face was even whiter than it had been before beneath its coat of tan and powdery dust.

He swallowed hard and tried to speak and had to swallow again before the words would come.

"Oh, I—may—die!" he broke out falteringly then. "There goes a injine! A steam injine, wa'n't it?"

Long afterward, when he had realized that the boy's life was to bring again and again a repetition of that sublime moment of realization—a moment of fulfillment unspoiled by surfeit or sophistication or a blunted capacity to marvel, which Caleb had seen grow old and stale even in the children he knew—he wondered and wished that he might have known it himself, once at least. Years of waiting, starved years of anticipation, he felt after all must have been a very little price to pay for that great, blinding, gasping moment. But at the time, amazed at the boy's white face, amazed at the hushed fervor in the words he forgot, he spoke before he thought.

"But haven't you ever seen an engine before?" he asked.

As soon as the question had left his lips he would have given much to have had it back again. But at that it failed to have the effect which he feared too late to check. Instead of coloring with hurt and shame, instead of subterfuge or evasion, the boy simply lifted his eyes levelly to Caleb's face.

"I ain't never seed nuthin'," he stated patiently. "I ain't never seed more'n three houses together in a clearin' before. I—I ain't never been outen the timber—till today. But I aim to see more naow—before I git done!"

"The view is excellent from my veranda," said Caleb as he waved a hand behind him. "And—you look a little warm and tired. If your business is not of too pressing a nature—have you"—he broke off, amazed at his helpless formality in the matter—"have you come far?"

And he wondered immediately how the boy would receive that suggestion that he hesitate, there with the "city" in front of him, a fairy tale to be explored. And again he was allowed to catch a glimpse of age old spirit—a glimpse of a man sized self discipline—beneath the childish exterior.

The boy hesitated a moment, but it was his uncertainty as to just what Caleb's invitation had offered and not the lure of the town which made him pause. He took one step forward.

"I been comin' since last Friday," he explained. "I been comin' daown river for three days naow, and I been comin' fast!"

Again that measuring, level glance.

"An' I ain't got no business—yit," he went on. "Thet's what I aim to locate after I've hed a chance to look around a trifle. But I am tired a little, an' so if you mean thet you're askin' me to stop for a minit—if you mean thet you're askin' me that—why, then—then I guess I don't mind if I do."

"That's what I mean," said Caleb.

And the little figure preceded him across his soft, cropped lawn.

CHAPTER II.

The Logical Custodian.

CALEB HUNTER had never married, and even now at the age of forty and odd in particularly mellow moments he was liable to confess that, while matrimony no doubt offered a far wider field for both general excitement and variety, as far as he himself was concerned he felt that his bachelor condition had points of excellence too obvious to be treated with contumely. Perhaps the fact that Sarah Hunter, four years his senior, had kept so well oiled the cogs of the domestic machinery of the white place on the hill that their churnings had never been evidenced may have been in part an answer to his contentment.

For Sarah Hunter, too, had never married. To the townspeople, who had never dared to try to storm the wall of her apparent frigidity or been able quite to understand her aloof austerity, she was little more than a weekly occurrence as dependable as the rising and setting of the sun itself. Every Sunday morning a rare vision of stately dignity for all her tininess, assisted by Caleb, she descended from the Hunter equipage to enter the portals of the Morrison Baptist church. After the service she reappeared and, having complimented the minister upon the sagacity of his discourse, again assisted by Caleb she mounted to the rear seat of the surrey and rolled back up the hill.

They often joked each other about their state of single blessedness, did Caleb and his sister. Often, hard upon his easy boast of satisfaction with things as they were, she would quote the fable of the fox and the high hanging grapes, only to be taunted a moment later with her own celibacy. But the taunt and the fable had long been stingless. For Sarah Hunter knew that one end of Caleb's heavy gold watch chain still carried a bit of a gold coin worn smooth and thin from years of handling; she knew that the single word across its back, even though it had long ago been effaced so far as other eyes were concerned, was still there for him to see. And Caleb, rummaging one day for some lost article or other in a pigeonhole in Sarah's desk, in which he had no license to look, had come across a picture of a tall and black haired lad brave in white trousers and an amazing waistcoat. Caleb remembered having been told that he had died for another with that same smile which the picture had preserved—the tall and jaunty youngster. And so their comprehension was mutual. They understood, did Caleb and his sister.

But sure as he was of Sarah's fundamental kindness Caleb experienced a twinge of guilty uncertainty that August afternoon as he closed the iron gate behind the grotesque little figure which had already started across his lawn. For the moment he had forgotten that the sun was low in the west. He had overlooked the fact that it was customary for the Hunter establishment to sup early during the warm summer months. But when he turned to find Sarah watching, stiff and uncompromising, from the doorway he remembered with painful certainty her attitude toward his propensity to pick up any stray that might catch him in a moment of too pronounced mellowness—stray human or feline or lost yellow dog.

"Supper is served, Cal," she drawled in her gentle, almost lisping, voice.

Caleb received the statement as if it were an astounding bit of hitherto undreamed of news.

"Comin', Sarah!" he chirped briskly. "Comin' this blessed minute!"

And then, with an attempt at disingenuousness:

"I—I've a friend here, Sarah, whom I'd like to—er—present to you. This is my sister, Miss Hunter," he announced to the silent boy, "and this young man, Sarah, this young man is—er—ah—Mr."—

"I'm Steve," said the boy mildly. "I'm just Stephen O'Mara."

"Certainly!" gasped Caleb. "Quite so—quite so! Sarah, this is just Steve."

The frail little woman with her quaint dignity of another decade failed to move. She did not unbend so much as the fraction of an inch. But hard upon the heels of Caleb's last words the boy went forward unhesitatingly. Hat in the hand that balanced his big steel trap, he stopped in front of her and offered one brown paw.

"Haow d'ye do, Miss Hunter?" he saluted her gravely, and with a slow smile that discovered for her a row of white and even teeth: "Haow d'ye do? I—I reckon you're the first dressed up lady I ever did git to know!"

The calm statement took what little breath there had been left in Caleb's lungs. It left Sarah breathless too. But after an infinitesimal moment of waiting she held out her own delicate fingers and took the outstretched hand.

"Haow d'ye do, Steve?" she answered, and Caleb was at a loss to interpret the suppressed quality of her voice. "And I—some day I am sure it will be a great pleasure to remember that I was the—first!"

Then she faced her brother.

"Will your—will your friend, Mr.—Steve—remain for supper, Cal?" she asked.

And Caleb, quick to see an opening, made the most of this one.

"Stay for supper!" he repeated her question, and he laughed. "Stay—for—supper! Well, I should hope he would. Why—why, he's going to stop for the night."

From the vantage place there at the top of the steps Sarah stood and surveyed her brother's wide and guileless face for a second. Then her lips began to twitch.

"Very clever, Cal," she [illegible] him. "Quite clever—for you!"

And she nodded and withdrew to see that the table was laid for three.

Caleb, chuckling, watched her go; then, with a nod to the boy, he started to follow her in. But Steve paused at the threshold, and when the man stopped and looked back to ascertain the cause of his delay he found that the boy was depositing the bear trap upon the porch floor—found him tugging to free the rusty old revolver from his belt.

"I'll leave Samanthy here," the one called Steve stated, and Caleb understood that he meant the trap. "An' I reckon I'd better not lug my weapon into the house neither, hed I? She might"— He nodded in the direction of Sarah's disappearance. "Old Tom says womin folks that's gentle born air kind-a skittish about havin' shootin' irons araound the place. And I don't re[illegible] on it's the part of men folks to pester 'em."

Caleb didn't know just what to say, so he merely nodded approval. Again he had been made to feel that it was not a boy, but some little old man, who was explaining to him. Silently he led the way upstairs, and after he had seen the blanket pack deposited in one corner of Sarah's beloved guest room, after he had seen the rusty coat peeled off as a preface to removing the dust accumulation of the long hot day from hands and face, an inspiration came to him. While the boy was washing, utterly lost to everything but that none too simple task, he went out of the room on a still hunt of his own and came back presently with the thing for which he had gone searching. He found the boy wrestling a little desperately with a mop of wavy chestnut hair, which only grew the more helpless with every stroke of the brush.

"Never mind that." Caleb met the misapprehension in the boy's eye. "Never mind that. And I—I've taken the liberty of digging out this old canvas shooting coat. It's one I got for Sarah—for my sister—but, as you say, women folks are mighty skittish about anything that has to do with a gun. She never would go even so far as to try it on, but if you don't mind— That coat of yours must be a trifle hot for this weather, I should say."

Steve reached out a hand that trembled a little and took the coat. He took it and stared at it with that same strained and hungry look which he had bestowed a half hour before upon the "city."

"Do you mean," he asked, and his lips remained parted breathlessly upon the question—"do you mean—this yere's for me?"

Caleb thought of the "injine"—the "steam injine."

"I mean just that if you'll have it," he replied.

The boy slipped his little body into the garment and wheeled to survey himself in a mirror. In comparison with his old coat it was the purple of a Solomon. There was a cartridge web across its front, with loops, and after he had looked long and long at his reflection the boy thrust both his thumbs into the belt it made.

Then: "Them's fer ketridges," he announced solemnly.

He scowled judiciously and nodded.

And, "I'll hev to git me some the first thing in the mornin'," he said.

At table the boy talked freely, always with his wide eyes upon the face of his questioner, always in the grave and slightly drawling idioms of the woods. Again he confided that he had never before been out of the timber. He explained that Old Tom's untimely taking off a fortnight back had been alone responsible for this pilgrimage. And that opened the way for a question which Caleb had been eager to ask him.

"I suppose this—this Old Tom was some kin of yours?" he observed.

The boy shook his head.

"No," he answered, "no. I ain't never hed no kin. I ain't never hed nobody—father ner mother, neither!"

Caleb saw Sarah start a little and bite her thin lips. But the birdlike movement of surprise was lost upon the speaker.

"I ain't never hed nobody," he reaverred, and Caleb, straining to catch a note of self pity or plea for sympathy in the words, realized that the boy didn't even know what the one or the other was. "I ain't never hed nobody but old Tom. And he was—he wasn't nuthin' but what he called my—my"—the sentence was broken while he paused to get the phrase correctly—"he was what he called my 'logical custodian.'"

Guiltily Caleb knew that his next question would savor of indelicacy, but he had to ask it just the same.

"Still I suppose his—his taking off must have been something in the nature of a blow to you?" he suggested.

The boy pursed his lips.

"Wall, no," he exclaimed at last nonchalantly; "no-o-o. I can't say's it was. We'd both been expectin' it, I reckon. Old Tom he often sed he knew that some day he'd go and git just blind, stavin' drunk enough to try an' swim the upper rapids, and two weeks ago he done so."

And the rest of the words were quite casual.

"I kind-a reckon he'd hev made it as that," he offered his opinion, "if they'd hev been a trifle more water. But the rocks was too close to the surface for comfortable swimmin'. The Jenkinses found him down in the slack water Sunday noon or thereabouts, and they sed he'd never be no deader, not even if he'd a-died in a reg'lar bed, with a doctor helpin' him along."

Caleb threw his sister one lugubriously helpless glance. Sarah had choked apparently upon a crumb of bread and was coughing stranglingly.

This time when Caleb lifted his eyes he met a startled gleam behind Sarah's half dropped lashes. She was peering steadily into the boy's lean, untroubled face. Caleb voiced the query which he knew must be behind her quiet intentness.

"You said your name was O'Mara, I believe. I suppose that was—an—Old Tom's last name too?"

Steve laughed. He laughed frankly for the first time since he had halted hours before outside in the dusty road.

"Why, Old Tom had a dozen different names in the last few years," he replied. "He had a new one every time he went outen the woods for a trip. But he always sed he mostly favored Brown or Jones or Smith, they bein' quiet and common and not too hard to remember. He just changed names whenever he got tired of his old one, Old Tom did. But he always did say, too, that if he'd hed as good a one as O'Mara he'd a-kept it—and kept it proud."

At the conclusion of that statement it was Miss Sarah's gaze which went searching across the table for her brother's eyes. But the boy just ran on and on, totally oblivious to their glances.

He told them of his lonely days in the woods shack, when Old Tom went down river and was three or four weeks in returning; he dwelt upon blissful days in the spring when he had been allowed to play a man's part in the small drives which he and Old Tom and the Jenkinses began and which Old Tom and the Jenkinses alone saw through to market in Morrison. He touched lightly and inconsequentially upon certain days when Old Tom would hang for hours over an old tin box filled with soiled and ink smeared memoranda, periods which were always followed by days of moody silence and a week or more of "lessons" in a tattered and thumbed reader which the woodsman had brought up river—lessons as painful and laborious to Old Tom as they were delightful to the starved mentality of the pupil. And Old Tom, the boy explained, was pretty likely to be "licked up fer quite a spell" after such a session, which invariably began with an exploration of the battered tin box.

The boy told Caleb of days and nights on the trail—boasted unconsciously of Old Tom's supercunning with trap and deadfall and even poisoned bait. And that brought him to the beautifully oiled bear trap which he had left outside the door.

"I brung Samanthy along with me," he stated. "I brung her just because somehow I kind-a thought mebby Old Tom'd be glad if I did. Next to me he always sed he set a heap o' store on thet ole critter. He sed Samanthy was as near to hevin' a woman around the house as anything he knew on—she hed a voice like a steel trap, and when she got her teeth sot in a argument she never did let up. I brung her along with me, and the gun he give me, but I didn't take nuthin' else."

Caleb waited there until he knew that the boy had finished.

"You never bothered about that old tin box?" he inquired casually.

The boy shook his head again.

"Old Tom, whenever he went away for a spell, always sed I wan't to meddle with it," he explained. "This time I reckoned his goin' was just about the same thing, only he won't be comin' back, so I—I just locked the box up in the cubberd and hitched the staple into the door and come down myself."

By the time that meal was finished the boy's eyes were so heavily lidded that, fight as he would, they still persisted in drooping till the long lashes curled over his cheeks. And in spite of Caleb's remonstrances it was Sarah who saw him upstairs and into the huge guest room with its four poster and highboy and spindle backed chairs.

PUPILS TO KEEP NEW JERSEY DAY

Historic and Patriotic Scenes to Be Enacted.

STATE OUTLINES PROGRAM

Groups of Indians, Dutch, Quakers and Puritans to Be Shown In Tableau—Object Is to Arouse Pride In Local Achievements.

Trenton, May 4.—In keeping with the spirit of Governor Fielder's proclamation designating May 12 as New Jersey day, the state department of public instruction has prepared a program for the celebration of the occasion in the public schools of the state. This includes a number of patriotic and instructive features, the latter dealing particularly with the past and present of New Jersey.

As an opening for the exercises it is suggested there may be a procession either through the school buildings or on the grounds, showing groups of Indians, Dutch, Puritans and Quakers, to be followed by the singing of "America" and reading of the governor's proclamation.

Among the suggestions for scenes from colonial and Revolutionary days are the Indians meeting Henry Hudson, the landing of Carteret or the legislative council of Indians, Quakers buying lands from Indians, Molly Pitcher at the battle of Monmouth, Washington's reception at Trenton or Washington crossing the Delaware.

In considering New Jersey of today some of the suggestions in the program as topics are the state's market garden, farm and dairies, fisheries and oyster beds, manufacturing, transportation facilities, pleasure resorts and scenery and schools. The exercises may be concluded by a tribute to the flag, including a recitation, flag salute and singing of "America."

As outlined in the tentative program, the purposes of the celebration are to show New Jersey's part in making the nation and her contribution to its welfare at the present time; to arouse pride in local achievements and interest in local history; to stimulate state and national patriotism and to make pupils intelligent concerning the significance of the flag and to deepen their reverence for all that it represents.

THINK KAISER WILL MEET U. S. DEMAND

Hope of Settlement Has Been Revived.

Washington, May 4.—"Revived hope, but no undue optimism."

This characterizes President Wilson's frame of mind on the submarine issue. Meanwhile Secretary Lansing awaits official word from Ambassador Gerard confirming press dispatches from Berlin to the effect that Germany will issue new instructions to submarine commanders and otherwise define its attitude on future submarine warfare against merchantmen.

The tenor of these censored dispatches is regarded here as hopeful, the intimation being that Berlin will satisfy the American demands.

The vital point in the stand of the United States is that Germany's so called illegal submarine warfare must stop and stop now

Officials here foresee a possibility that the crisis may be averted, or at least postponed, by Germany's agreeing temporarily to abandon the present methods of submarine warfare endangering the lives of noncombatants on the high seas. If this vital point in the American demand is met the danger of a diplomatic break will be dissipated.

Interest therefore centers now on whether or not Berlin will unequivocally yield on this vital issue.

Colonel House, who has conferred with President Wilson frequently on the submarine controversy, is in Washington again. He had a long conference with Secretary Lansing. Colonel House is known to share the president's view that a diplomatic break may be averted by a definite and unequivocal reply.

CASEMENT TRIAL TO BEGIN AT ONCE

Sir Roger to Be Hanged With Silken Rope if Found Guilty.

London, May 4.—Sir Roger Casement will be brought to trial in London within a few days on the charge of high treason, it was announced today, following the execution of Irish rebel leaders yesterday morning.

Baron Reading, Lord Chief Justice of England, will preside. Unless Sir Roger escapes death sentence because he is found to be insane, he will be hanged with a silken rope—a "privilege" accorded condemned members of the nobility by ancient custom.

The rank and file of the Irish rebels will be dealt with leniently, it was stated today. Sir Edward Carson, Ulster leader, and John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, have joined in an appeal to the Government for mercy. It is believed the majority of the Sinn Feiners will receive light sentences and that a few will be deported.

ARMOUR BUYS BANKRUPT BUTCHERS PRODUCING PLANT

Chicago, May 4.—It is expected that Armour interests have bought the Butchers Packing Plant at Indianapolis which was sold recently by receivers. It is understood that the firm contemplates spending between $200,000 and $300,000 on improving the plant.

TO DECIDE ON FIRM POLICY TOWARD MEXICO

Washington, May 4.—As the result of a long message from Gen. Scott, Secretary of War Baker will hold a conference with President Wilson today. The whole question of the future policy in Mexico will be reviewed in the light of the recommendations made by the chief of staff. It is expected the White House will issue a statement later today.

HUMANE SUNDAY.

Cities throughout the country will observe "Be Kind to Animals Week" from May 15 to 20, inclusive, and May 21 will be observed as "Humane Sunday." During these days, merchants throughout Plainfield who deal in humane articles, such as harnesses, collars, blankets, nets, etc., for horses and dogs and also pure foods for animals and birds will do well to call attention to "Be Kind to Animals" week in their advertisements in the daily papers.

QUALIFIED AS COMMISSIONERS.

The following Plainfielders qualified as commissioners of deeds before County Clerk Abram P. Morris at Elizabeth yesterday: William T. Banks, Pauline Botterstein, Ida M. Willard, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., William McD. Coriell, Miss M. L. Stryker, George H. Fisher, Jr., George York and Harvey L. Rothberg.

LETTER CARRIERS TO ATTEND.

Delegations of letter carriers and postoffice employes will attend a Tabernacle meeting tomorrow night. All employes and clerks of the neighboring postoffices are invited to meet the Plainfield delegation at the Plainfield postoffice not later than 7:30 p. m. morrow night.

GAS MASK FOR U. S. ARMY.

Invention of Professors Prager and Estabrook of City College.

New York, May 4.—Announcement was made here of a patent of a gas mask for use in trench warfare for the United States army by William A. Prager and William B. Estabrooke, instructors in the chemistry department of the College of the City of New York. The device is said to be extremely light and comfortable and is founded on the theory of the absorption of gases by certain substances.

The apparatus has attained wide attention from military men who have in preliminary tests found the mask practicable for use by the war department. As a result arrangements have been made for the inventors to deliver lectures and give demonstrations of their patent at the Plattsburgh summer camp this month.

WHAT DO YOU

know about the printing of that most wonderful book—the Bible? Read the interesting facts and figures about it given below, and perhaps you will know more!

Specially Bound in Genuine Limp Bible Leather, Folding Cover, Red Edges, Round Corners, Gold Lettered Back, Full Size 9⅝ x 6¾ inches.

PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS

offers the very best edition ever printed for popular use, to its readers, in what might be called a "gift distribution:"

The Big Print Red Letter Bible

Fascinating Figures About The Bible

Over 200 million copies of the Bible have been printed. Touching end to end, they would go 'round the world—25000 miles. Piled one on another, it would take 4000 mountains like Mt. Everest, the highest in the world, to reach the topmost book. But this is not all. The public libraries of the entire world could not contain them. It would take two of the largest ships ever built, loaded to the deck, or a hundred freight trains, with 25 cars to the train, to transport them. Stacked in columns, they would make 100,000 Eiffel Towers, the tallest structure ever built by human hands. To print them would require at least 100 billions of pages of type.

The mere physical facts about the Bible stagger the imagination. All the other books ever printed seem microscopic by comparison. The Bible has been read by more people than any ten thousand other books. Today it forms the basis of religion for several hundred millions of the most enlightened peoples of the earth. The greatest war in history began in 1914, and shook the world from center to circumference. As a result, untold millions of people, startled out of their lethargy, took to the Bible to save their sanity and restore their mental vision. The first year of the war saw more Bibles sold than in any other year since it was printed.

It was the consideration of these facts that led this newspaper, in conjunction with all the leading newspapers of the country, to seize upon the psychological moment in which to inaugurate a nation-wide revival of Bible-reading. The edition now offered in these columns is the same as is being offered by the leading papers everywhere—not for profit to themselves—but for the benefit of their readers.

We invite comparison with any other edition of the Bible. We challenge competitive examination; secure in the knowledge that the Famous Red Letter Edition we offer, is easily first—and beyond any ordinary offering by publishers who seek only profit.

Every night the people go to the Tabernacle they see something interesting for it is very interesting to watch the delegations as they march into the Tabernacle. Last night the Knights of the Golden Eagle came in a good sized delegation, followed by the members of the Y. W. C. A. Of course the Dutch Arms Band led them in as it is the official delegation band.

The delegations had hardly been seated when Mr. MacEwan called the names of the Knights and Y. W.'s when each in turn received three rousing cheers from the choir.

The quartet rendered a fine selection. Every time they sing Plainfield receives a musical treat.

"Billy" Sunday finished up a great campaign in Trenton about the middle of February. The ministers were very much pleased with the results and a delegation are coming to Plainfield Saturday night.

There was a fine looking lot of young women from Cranford and a good crowd of people from New Providence among the delegations last night.

Plans have been made for what promises to be a great meeting for the Christian business men and professional men in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium tomorrow afternoon at 12:30. It will be an important one and will last for only half an hour. Dr. Biederwolf and the National Male Quartet will be present.

"Mac" sang a solo which was finely rendered and well received.

Dr. Biederwolf has that power of saying a great deal in a few words which he proved last night when he extended his word of welcome to the delegations represented.

Tomorrow afternoon he will preach on, "Shall We Recognize Our Friends In Heaven?"

Keep your eye open for news about Saturday. Remember it's Community Day and there will be big doings in the pine temple.

RECREATION NOTES.

The P. A. N. will meet in the Washington School tonight. During the meeting, arrangements will be made to increase the membership and organize a West End athletic association.

The social club will meet and the library will be open for games.

Tomorrow night, the Dramatic Club will hold a reunion and the Dunbar dance will be held.

RAILROAD REFUSES TO REVEAL POLITICAL GIFTS

Washington, May 4.—Solicitor J. W. Folk, of the I. C. C., threatened Milton H. Smith, of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, with a jail term if he would not answer questions before Commissioner Meyer today in the I. C. C. investigation of the financial practices of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad. Mr. Smith refused to answer his questions relative to contributions made by the L. and N. Railroad to political parties in Tennessee, Kentucky, Alabama, and elsewhere. On advice of counsel Mr. Smith refused to answer. "I will appeal to the courts," said Folk, "to compel you to furnish this testimony. It is required by the Senate resolution and is necessary in this investigation."

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.
(Case No. 1)

To Morris Liebman and Mrs. Morris Liebman, his wife, Max Spiro and Frank Butensky:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, in a cause wherein John B. Cortelyou and Josephine C. Bessonett are Complainants, and you, Morris Liebman and Mrs. Morris Liebman, his wife, Max Spiro and Frank Butensky, and others, are defendants, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainants, on or before the 15th day of June, next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by the Security Realty and Construction Company, a corporation, to the complainants, dated August 4th, 1911, upon lands in the City of Plainfield, Union county; and you, Morris Liebman, are made a defendant because you are the owner of the premises; and you, Mrs. Morris Liebman, are made a defendant because you have an inchoate right of dower in the property; and you, Max Spiro, are made a defendant because when you took title to the premises you assumed and agreed to pay the mortgage obligation; and you, Frank Butensky, are made a defendant because you hold a second mortgage upon the property.

Dated April 14, 1916.

WIND SLAIN BOY FOUND.

Children See Body Hanging From Rock in Passaic Falls.

Paterson, May 4.—Halfway down the Passaic falls, suspended by his coat from a jagged rock, the body of Samuel Braem, three years old, of Passaic was found. He had been blown into the Passaic river and drowned on April 18.

Young Maria Busa and Luigi Campana of Wayne avenue, Passaic, were passing the falls when they saw the body hanging. They ran to a policeman. With a rope men got the body to shore.

John Braem will give the young discoverers the $50 reward he had offered.

ACCUSES JITNEY MEN.

Atlantic City Woman Brings Very Serious Complaint.

Atlantic City, May 4.—Harry Hogan, a jitney driver, and Edward McMann were arrested on complaint of Mrs. May MacLaren, who told the police that they attempted to attack her.

She said she got into the jitney to go to her home and that the two men turned aside and drove to the Meadow boulevard, where she fought them until her screams attracted help. They were held without bail for hearing.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

EXPERTS RECOMMEND A REGULAR AUDIT OF CITY FINANCES AND PUT WORK ON OFFICE OF CLERK

WOULD COMBINE TWO OFFICES—PLAINFIELD NEEDS POLICE SUPERVISION AT NIGHT AND A SMALL RESERVE FORCE.

MUCH PRAISE FOR ALL LOCAL OFFICIALS

Four Additional Firemen and System of Training for Members of Department Also Suggested, as is Permanent Pavement for Downtown Streets and Collection of Garbage and Rubbish by City.

Included in the recommendations for municipal improvement in Plainfield, made by experts of the New York Bureau of Research, that conducted a survey of the local government, are the establishment of a modern system of municipal accounting, and the securing of a regular audit of city finances by combining the office of city clerk and auditor; the installation of police patrol supervision at night; the appointment of two detectives and the establishment of a police reserve force; the appointment of four additional firemen and the introduction of a system of training for members of this department; the appointment of members of the Board of Health for four years instead of two; the reorganization of the poor and charity departments through legislative action; the combination of streets, sewers and sidewalks departments under one head; the installation of permanent pavement on downtown streets; the immediate building of a number of storm sewers and the creation of a city department to collect garbage, ashes and rubbish.

This report is in the hands of Mayor Calkins and members of the finance committee of the Council, and 1,000 copies have been ordered printed so that all taxpayers who desire a copy may have one. A summary of the report, showing all recommendations made in condensed form, follows:

Briefly stated, this survey shows that the opportunity of Plainfield's government for self-improvement is not so much the reduction of present cost as it is the giving to the people of more and better service at the present cost.

The present mayor has sensed the situation with unusual perception, and his official messages are replete with practical constructive suggestions for local betterment. With the co-operation of Council, many of his suggestions have been made effective, but there are many others upon which adequate action has not yet been had. A number of the recommendations of this report have already been urged upon Council and the citizenry by the mayor. They are included herein by way of emphasis and further elucidation. These and all other recommendations of this report are made, not in a spirit of criticism, but rather in a spirit of friendly constructive co-operation to the end that the desire which is common in the minds of city officials and employes and taxpayers of Plainfield may become effective—the desire for still more efficient and economical local government.

There are, of course, certain changes which should be made immediately, others which should be made as soon as may be conveniently, but concerning which a month or two will make no great difference; and there are still other changes which are very desirable but which cannot be made effective without favorable action by the State Legislature. The recommendations of the report are underlined. Those which it is believed should receive early attention are also emphasized by the placing of a small asterisk (*) at the left-hand margin.

The establishment of a modern system of municipal accounting and a more complete yet simple method of auditing expenditures and the accruals and collections of revenue is the most important of the "first steps" which should be taken. The shortcomings of the present accounting methods are set forth in detail in the pages which follow, as are also detailed suggestions for a new system. The system should be centralized in the city clerk's office an dthat official should also make a thorough and complete audit, not only of outgo, but also of all revenue accruals and collections. At present there is no current audit whatsoever over revenues. With the functioning of the city clerk's office as accountant and auditor, it is obvious that a man should be appointed to that office who is qualified with the technical experience necessary to do that class of work.

The recommendations for improving the city's budget methods as well as the methods of assessing and col-

GERMANY DEFIANTLY DENIES CHARGE OF RUTHLESS SUBMARINE WARFARE AND OFFERS TO ENTER INTO FURTHER PARLEY WITH U. S. OVER FUTURE CONDUCT

Contends She Has Always Acted Fairly Toward Neutrals.

CONTRADICTS WILSON

Denies Assurances Were Ever Given as to Armed Vessels—Puts Blame on American Government.t

Berlin, May 5.—Germany's reply to the Note of the United States, which was made public today, defends Germany's submarine warfare. Germany does not regard the reply as final in the submarine question, and asks more time in which to investigate charges made by the United States which are not proven. The Note points out that the Imperial Government has made repeated concessions to the United States that have been advantageous to the cause of the Allies, adding that no such consideration has ever been shown neutrals by Great Britain and her allies.

The contention of the Imperial Government is that the submarine warfare of the nation has always been conducted with regard to the rules of war. The exception has been in the case on enemy trade carried on in the war zone waters around the British Isles. The Note states, however, no assurances were ever given to the United States in respect to such trade, it was declared by the Foreign Office. The United States is charged with responsibility for the dangers confronting citizens of that country traveling upon ships flying the flag of a belligerent nation. If the United States had accepted the proposals of Germany, the Note says, the greater part of accidents to citizens of the United States would have been avoided.

The German Government still stands by its offer to come to an agreement along these lines, says the Foreign Office. It is alleged that the United States has made a series of statements to Germany which have for their gist the charge that the German Admiralty has been conducting its under-water warfare ruthlessly and without regard for the laws of war and humanity. This is denied. It is also charged that representations were made to the German Government by the United States which were not substantiated by facts. The Note opens with mention of the Sussex case, and the first sections of it are less conciliatory than had been expected. In fact, there is a defiant tone about it.

Wall Street Hears News.

New York, May 5.—The publication of the text of the German answer this morning came as a surprise to the street and the reading of it carried the conviction in the minds of the speculative element that a diplomatic rupture must be expected. wit the Wall street district and long before the opening the board room was full of selling orders, many of them for large amounts. It was feared by some of those handling these orders that opening in stocks would be so wide as to make their execution unsatisfactory and to avoid trouble many of these orders were stopped by arrangement with brokers having buying orders in hand so that the reported sales on the tape did not in any way indicate the full volume of the initial trading. As soon as the gong sounded there were offerings of stocks at sharp concessions all around the room. The first prices were made at the extreme low levels because buyers in nearly all cases waited for bargains and as a result opening quotations showed losses from 1 to 6 points in many issues. The railroad stocks acted independently of the miscellaneous issues, only a few in this group showing losses of over 1 point at the opening and nearly all these declines

"MEN AND WOMEN WE WANT ARE OUT ON STREETS," BIEDERWOLF TELLS PASTORS AND CHRISTIANS

FINDS TABERNACLE FILLED WITH PEOPLE WHO HAVE ALREADY ACCEPTED CHRIST AND WHO ARE MEMBERS OF PLAINFIELD CHURCHES.

SAYS PROCRASTINATION HAS POPULATED HELL

Crowd of 4,500 Hears Strong Sermon on "Tomorrow"—Everyone Finds Decision Harder as They Grow Older, Declares Evangelist, and Man Over 40 Has Only About One Chance Out of Eighty Thousand of Salvation.

Procrastination is not only the thief of time, but it robs Heaven of its priceless jewels and makes Hell the high capitol of lost, immortal souls, according to the Rev. William E. Biederwolf, who preached to a crowd of 4,500 in the Tabernacle last night on "Tomorrow."

"Go to the confines of the lost world tonight and talk with those who are there—bitten with remorse and stung by the fanged hounds of Hell," said the evangelist. "Say to them, 'Did you not know there was a Hell to shun and a Heaven to gain? Did you not know there was a God to pardon and a Christ to save?' and they will say: 'Yes, we knew it all too well; we heard it over and over again, but we put it off—we put it off and we missed it at last.'"

Dr. Biederwolf said that men and women would find the acceptance of Christ harder and harder as they grew older; that they would become hardened to sin until they could no longer hear the voice of conscience—and as proof of his statement he asked every professing Christian in the audience to stand up. More than 4,000 of the 4,500 people in the audience rose. He then asked every one that had accepted Christ before they were 25 years of age to remain standing, and at least 3,800 of the 4,000 Christians were on their feet. When he asked those who had given their lives to God after they passed the age of 25 and before they reached 35 to rise, only about 100 stood up; and the last call, that for men and women who had become Christians after fifty years of age, brought only five or six.

"If you are here tonight and past twenty, your chances of being saved are very small indeed. If you are past forty, your chances are almost as eighty thousand to one against you; and if you are past sixty and still outside the kingdom of Christ, you are almost as good as doomed tonight," said the minister in his final plea for converts.

When Dr. Biederwolf first called for Christians to rise and found that almost eighty-five per cent. of his congregation were church members and professed followers of God, he turned to the ministers sitting on his left and said, "Look, pastors and church people! The Tabernacle is filled with professing Christians, while the people that we want to reach are out on the streets or at home reading the newspapers. The ones that need salvation are not here." He demanded that every minister and every Christian make a special effort to bring at least one unsaved person to the Tabernacle each night.

There was a large delegation of business women of the city present, and another from the Commercial Travelers. A small body of ministers from Somerville and Long Branch occupied seats of honor on the platform.

In his welcome to the business women, Dr. Biederwolf expressed appreciation of the hard fight that many of them made on a small wage and declared that it was a wonderful tribute to American womanhood that so few girls employed in the big stores and shops were bad. He said that business men should be more considerate of the girls employed in their establishments and that, as a rule, they were entitled to more money than they received.

He told the traveling men of his joy over the great improvement in their ranks within the past decade. A few years ago, he said, the man who could tell the "smuttiest" stories and "cuss" the loudest sold the most goods; but now things are vastly different and no business house of good standing will send out a representative of this class. Dr. Biederwolf urged all those present to become a member of the Gideons, which is the Christian Traveling Men's Association.

After a selection by the quartet and a solo by Mr. McEwan, Dr. Zelle read the scripture lesson.

Tomorrow afternoon, Dr. Biederwolf will preach on the "Fancy Showbox," he said. He urged that there be a good crowd at the Tabernacle, Saturday night, when a big delegation from Norristown, Pa., will be present.

MISS BENNETT BRIDE OF O. F. LAMPARTER

Attractive Ceremony Performed in Metuchen by Rev. Dr. James G. Mason.

Miss Sadie Le Claire Bennett, of Metuchen, niece of William Van Sickle, of this city, and Oscar F. Lamparter, also of Metuchen, were married at 7:30 o'clock last night at the home of the bride by Rev. Dr. James G. Mason, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Metuchen, only the immediate relatives being present. A reception followed which was attended by 275 guests.

The bride was gowned in white satin and Chantilly lace with draped train. The veil formed a cap of Chantilly lace, which was caught up by orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies-of-the- valley, and her only ornament was a diamond pin, the gift of the bridegroom. The couple were unattended. Cortelyou's orchestra furnished the music for the wedding and reception.

The decorations were elaborate, palms and blossoms being used in the room where the ceremony was performed and the dining room and rest of the home were decorated with roses, carnations, sweet peas and bowers of apple blossoms, the color scheme being pink and white.

Many beautiful gifts were received by the bride, comprising cut glass, silver, furniture, linen, china and gold. During the reception an elaborate supper was served. Later in the evening the couple left on an extended trip. They will reside in Metuchen upon their return. Each guest at the reception was presented with a pink rose as a favor.

There were guests present from Newark, New York, Jersey City, Rahway, Plainfield, New Brunswick, Linden, Perth Amboy, Tottenville, Fords, Woodbridge Asbury Park, Trenton, Philadelphia and Metuchen. Mr. Lamparter is in the employ of the Pennsylvania railroad and both he and his bride are well-known and popular.

LACE CURTAIN CALLS OUT HEADQUARTERS MEN

Box 26 called out the apparatus from headquarters at 8:15 last night to the home of Mrs. Waldorf, 132 Crescent avenue. Some lace curtains had caught fire and threatened to spread flames to the woodwork of the house. The blaze was extinguished before damage was done.

CHAMBER FAVORS SKY LINE LIMIT

Want Buildings in This City Restricted to Six Stories in Height.

DISCUSS ADVANTAGES

Trolley Extension to South Plainfield is Urged, and a Committee is Named to Confer with Company—Boost for Letter Carriers.

Questions pertaining to the establishment of a sky line in Plainfield, whereby no building shall exceed six stories in height; the extension of the trolley system to South Plainfield; a boost for the fund being raised to entertain the State Letter-Carriers' Association here on May 30; and a decision not to take action on proposed referendum legislation which would prohibit "price-cutting" in business—were the principle topics discussed at the May meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night. David T. Kenney, the president, occupied the chair and led in the various discussions.

Mr. Kenney called the members' attention to the fact that the committee in charge of arrangements for the letter-carriers' convention had sent out several hundred letters, asking for contributions, at a cost of $30, and the responses scarcely paid more than the expense entailed. He suggested that every contribution helped, no matter how small. He said that wealthy citizens felt that if they gave anything it should be a large sum, whereas he was assured that gifts of $1 and $2 would be gratefully received. Mr. Kenney paid a high compliment to the letter-carriers, adding that they are second only to the men in the army and navy, being "on the job" every day. He hoped that the citizens would make a generous response to the fund being raised.

There was considerable discussion regarding the proposed sky line, and it was the unanimous opinion that a six-story building should be the limit permitted here. Such an ordinance adopted by the city council, Mr. Kenney said, would bring contractors and builders to this city, because of the stability that it would create. He said that he had talked with big property-owners and all agreed that a sky line would be a great benefit to the city.

There was a strong sentiment in favor of the extension of the trolley to South Plainfield, and Mr. Kenney appointed Peter J. McDonough and W. H. Hobbie a committee to interview the company. No route wa sselected, the members preferring to leave that matter to the discretion of the company. The fact that there are now several hundred people traveling between Plainfield and South Plainfield every day, as the result of industrial conditions, was cited as a good reason for the extension.

The United States Chamber of Commerce presented to the local body several referendums referring to various trade matters, including proposed legislation on "price-cutting," but the members thought it would be unwise to take any action at the present time, believing that every business man should be permitted to conduct his affairs according to his own ideas.

DEATH ENDS CAREER OF T. A. KURZHALS

Veteran Barber Passes Away After Two Years' Illness From Infirmities of Age.

Following an illness extending over a period of two years, Theodore A. Kurzhals, for more than half a century a resident of Plainfield and proprietor of a barber shop for nearly all that time, died last night at his home on West Sixth street. Infirmities of age had been causing his failing health and for the last six weeks he had been confined to his bed.

Mr. Kurzshals was born in Germany in 1833, but came to this country in 1862. After remaining in New York for two years he removed to Plainfield, opening a barber shop on East Front street, where Schwed Brothers' clothing store is now located. At the time it was considered one of the finest establishments of the kind in this part of the State. Later Mr. Kurzhals removed the business to 140 Park avenue, the premises now occupied by William Feiring, and from there he went to 108 West Second street. He remained at this place until he retired from business about twelve years ago, selling his shop to his son, the late Theodore A. Kurzhals, Jr. From that time Mr. Kurzhals had been leading a retired life.

In his younger days Mr. Kurzshals took an active interest in local affairs, principally as a member of the old volunteer fire department. He was a member of Gazelle Engine Company and later joined the Exempt Firemen's Association. He was also a member of Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men and Plainfield Lodge of Odd Fellows. In late years he had been an attendant at the Congregational church.

Beside his wife, Mr. Kurzshals is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Arthur K. Adams, of Duer street, and one son, Hugo Kurzhals, of Jacksonville, Florida. Two other sons, Theodore A. Kurzhals, Jr., and Albert Kurzhals died within the past few years. The funeral will be held at his late home, 430 West Sixth street, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and interment will be in the Evergreen cemetery. Rev. Dr. C. W. F. Attlee will be in charge of the service.

MERCHANTS' DAY SOON.

Within the next ten days there will be a Merchants' Day in connection with the Biederwolf campaign, on which all local stores will be asked to close for at least two hours in the afternoon while the service is in progress. This was announced from the pulpit of the Tabernacle last night. A preliminary conference of merchants and professional men was held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms at noon today to arouse enthusiasm for the event. Dr. Biederwolf is also planning a big downtown demonstration, when thousands of Christian people will meet on the street at 7 p m. for a short service and a parade. This will be held within a short time, possibly on "Merchants' Day."

MONTH'S MIND MASS FOR MOTHER GABRIEL

Bishop James A. McFaul Conducts Impressive Service at St. Joseph's Church.

Rt. Rev. James A. McFaul, bishop of the diocese of Trenton, conducted a solemn month's mind mass for the late Mother M. Gabriel Redican, of Mt. St. Mary College, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning in St. Joseph's church. Assisting the bishop during the service were the following priests from nearby cities:

Monsignor C. H. Mackle, of Elizabeth, high priest; Rev. P. J. Petrie, of Atlantic City, celebrant; Rev. W. T. McConnell, Belmar, deacon; Rev. John Caulfield, Hopewell, subdeacon, and Rev. J. F. Baldwin, chaplain of Mt. St. Mary College, was master of ceremonies. Other clergymen seated in the sanctuary were Rev. P. J. Hart, rector of St. Joseph's church, Rev. Father J. J. Zimmer, Raritan; Rev. A. Poli, Raritan; Rev. Edward Dunphy, Dunellen; Rev. J. J. McGrath, Stony Hill; Rev. Richard Ryan, Somerville, and Rev. M. Spillane, of Trenton, secretary to the bishop.

The edifice was filled wih alumnae and students of Mt. St. Mary College and many friends of the deceased, who came to pay their respects to the memory of the superioress of the Sisters of Mercy. The musical portion of the service was rendered by the choir from the college.

WRITER KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Further Details Received as to How Malcolm W. Strong Lost His Life.

News despatches from Los Angeles, Cal., give further details of the accident on Wednesday night, when Malcolm W. Strong, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Strong, of Central avenue, lost his life. Clinton H. Stagg, a well-known author, was killed at the same time. Mr. Strong, who was a playwright, being engaged in writing moving picture plays for the Universal Film Company, Mr. Stagg and George Foster Platt, former stage manager of the Little Theatre, New York, where all passengers in an automobile, when a tire burst and the car upset.

Strong and Stagg were pinned beneth the machine, being killed almost instantly. Their bodies were removed to a mortuary at Hollywood, near Los Angeles. Mr. Strong was 33 years of age, and had had a successful career. He was born in New York and spent his boyhood days here. Later he was graduated from Leland Stanford University. The family, which is grief-stricken, is now making arrangements to have the body brought to Plainfield for burial.

DRAINAGE CASE IS NON-SUITED

George W. Sarson Fails to Prove Charge Against Plainfield Realty Co.

The case of George W. Sarson, of Washington, N. J., against K. & G., incorporated, and the E. & E. Realty Corporation of Plainfield, was nonsuited in the Supreme Court yesterday. Sarson wished to recover the money he had paid for a mortgage on property in East Second street, this city. He claimed that he had paid $25,295 for the mortgage, believing the representations of the defendants as to the value of the property, and that he had later found that the land was not worth $9,000.

The defendants, represented by Attorney W. Howard Demarest, had different estimates of the value of the land and of the miscellaneous property paid in exchange for the mortgage. They rested their case principally, however, on the contention that the plaintiff had no grounds of suit on the basis of deceit. Judge Silzer agreed with them. He pointed out that if a man can recover damages for deceit simply because he relied on the word of the other party to a purchase and found it not true, anyone has a suit who thinks he has made a bargain. Judge Silzer said also that the plaintiff in this case had a chance to investigate before accepting the defendants' estimate of the value of the property. The plaintiff's attorney was Alfred B. Cosey.

M'ALL ASSOCIATION ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Mrs. Charles Parkhurst Chosen President at Closing Session in Elizabeth.

Officers were unanimously re-elected at yesterday morning's session of the second and last day of the thirty-third annual convention of the American McAll Association held in the Westminster Presbyterian church Elizabeth. The officers chosen were: President, Mrs. Charles C. Colgate, of New York; vice president and acting president, Mrs. Abraham R. Perkins, of Philadelphia; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. L. Wayland, of Philadelphia; recording secretary, Edward Y. Hill, of Philadelphia. Most of the directors were also re-elected.

Reports of the secretary, Mrs. H. L. Wayland, and of the treasurer, Mrs. A. R. Perkins, proved interesting features. The former report told of the work accomplished in France by the mission despite the war, and emphasized its part in the humanitarian work of the struggle, not only among the soldiers but among the women and children at home. The treasurer's report showed total funds of $74,038.63. Included in the large number of delegates present were several from Plainfield. The convention closed yesterday afternoon.

BOYS WOUNDED, SLEUTHS HELD

Five Railroad Detectives Are Arrested.

WERE CHASING ROBBERS.

Shots Fired In Air, Say West Shore Police—One Lad Seven Years Old Receives Bullet In Neck—Both Boys Are Expected to Die.

Hoboken, May 5.—Two boys, one seven and the other seventeen, are in a serious condition in St. Mary's hospital following a gun battle between railroad detectives and thieves who had tried to rob a train. The boys, James da Puzzo, seven, of 417 Jackson street, and Joseph Esposito, seventeen, of 432 Jackson street, had been attracted to the scene by the sound of the firing. The doctors at the hospital say they will die. Five railroad detectives were arrested.

Harry Tyndell of 283 Mountain avenue, West Hoboken, a detective in the employ of the West Shore railroad, was riding on a train laden with iron bars. The train was going southward on the West Shore tracks. At Fifth street Tyndell saw four men throw iron bars from one of the cars. He fired four shots. They jumped from the car and ran, he after them. He captured one and was leading him up the tracks with the intention of taking him to police headquarters when the three other thieves returned, set upon him and rescued their companion.

The neighborhood was aroused by the sound of the firing. A crowd soon collected around Tyndell, who had a bleeding head, where he had been struck by a stone.

Albert Dischler of 2733 Boulevard, North Bergen, another West Shore detective, was two blocks away when he heard the firing. He ran down the tracks. When he saw the crowd he drew his automatic revolver and fired eight shots, he admits. He says he fired the shots into the air to disperse the crowd. One of the bullets entered the Da Puzza boy's neck, piercing the spinal column. Another struck Esposito in the abdomen, finding a lodgment in his liver.

Walter Montefore of 496 Fifth street called up police headquarters. The reserves were sent to the scene of the shooting. When they arrived they found five railroad detectives standing about the two wounded boys. The police rushed the wounded off to the hospital, and Roundsman William Donohue, Detective Sergeants Kiely and Fullam and Patrolmen Romano, Finkelstein and Kennedy arrested the detectives. The detectives seized, besides Tyndell and Dischler, were Joseph Cheregghine of 423 Jefferson street, this city; James McDonald, 403 Grove street, Jersey City, and Walter Towey, 335 Garden street, this city.

Taken to police headquarters, Tyndell and Dischler were remanded to jail to await the outcome of the boys' wounds. The three others were released in $500 bail as witnesses.

AGED JANITOR SHOOTS.

Eighty-year-old Man Held For Attack on Owner.

Newark, May 5.—Charles Burton was arraigned before Judge Pilgrim in the Fourth precinct police court charged with shooting at Richard Reininger, owner of the apartment house at 193 South Seventh street. The shots went wild, and Reininger, who is superintendent of the Newark Rivet works, ran out of the garage in the rear of the apartment and called Patrolmen Kass and Sanson, who made the arrest.

"I'm a lucky man to be here, judge," said Reininger. "The bullets were pretty close."

"Eighty years old and a janitor," said Burton. "I'm sorry, but I don't remember shooting at Mr Reininger. I—I bought the gun to shoot myself, judge."

"Why was that?" asked the court.

Burton did not answer for a few seconds, but stood with bowed head, and he murmured again softly:

"Eighty years old and—only a janitor."

ELOPES WITH SON-IN-LAW.

Father and Daughter Say They Found Spouses Together.

Netcong, May 5.—The disappearance several weeks ago of Mrs. David L. Lake and her son-in-law, Joseph Sommers, was explained to the community when Mr. Lake and his daughter, Mrs. Sommers, returned from Allentown, Pa., and declared that they had found Mrs. Lake and her son-in-law together. Mr. Lake and Mrs. Sommers announced that they would sue for divorce.

Mrs. Lake is forty-one years old. Sonimers is twenty-six. He married Miss Carrie Lake four years ago. They have one child, three years old. Besides Mrs. Sommers, Mrs. Lake also is the mother of a grown up son and two daughters.

Boy Absent, Mother Distraught.

East Orange, May 5.—Despite the efforts of his parents and the police no trace has yet been found of Joseph Hornstein of 50 Main street, this city, who disappeared from his home a week ago because of alleged ridicule of his "riley" haircut. The lad's mother, Mrs Peter Hornstein, is on the verge of collapse at her home.

HAVE ROSY CHEEKS AND FEEL FRESH AS A DAISY—TRY THIS!

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all of the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonsrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling beter in every way.

THE NEW STATE SANITARY CODE

Department of Health Adopt Five Rules Governing Many Nuisances.

EFFECTIVE AT ONCE

Local Boards of Health are Required Under the Law to See that Provisions are Strictly Enforced in all Municipalities.

Trenton, May 5.—According to an announcement made this afternoon the State Department of Health at its meeting Tuesday enacted five regulations concerning nuisances as a part of the new State Sanitary Code which the department has under preparation. These are the first regulations of the proposed code to be finally enacted and put in force throughout the State.

Under the act creating the department these regulations have all the force of law anywhere in the State, and in fact are a part of the State law for the prevention of disease. Local boards of health are required to enforce these regulations in the same manner as they are required to enforce the State laws concerning health matters. The regulations will be printed and a copy sent to each local board of health at an early date.

Making the first regulations of the State Sanitary Code refer to nuisances that affect health follows the same course pursued in the enactment of health laws. Health legislation originally dealt largely with nuisances. Later enactments dealing with other phases of the health problem have resulted from more recent developments in knowledge concerning the manner by which the infective material causing disease is transmitted from one person to another.

The regulations adopted Tuesday deal specifically with that class of nuisances that are known to injuriously affect health and that are already prohibited by health authorities in all progressive communities. By enacting these regulations at this time the State Department of Health provides the means by which local boards of health may prevent the occurrence of typhoid fever and other intestinal infections that are more prevalent during the summer and fall seasons. Vigorous action begun at once and carried on throughout the summer should result in limiting very materially the amount of typhoid fever due to flies and polluted wells. The same action with respect to mosquito breeding places should limit the amount of malaria in New Jersey during the coming summer and fall.

The regulations as adopted read as follows:

Regulation 1. No person or private or municipal corporation shall maintain or permit to be maintained anything whatsoever which is a hazard or a danger to human health.

Regulation 2. No person or private or municipal corporation shall maintain any well, or other supply of water used for drinking or household purposes, which is polluted in any manner that may render such water injurious to health, or which is so situated or constructed that it may become so polluted.

Regulation 3. No person or private or municipal corporation shall maintain, use or permit to be used any privy or other receptacle for human excrement, unless such privy or other receptacle is so constructed and maintained that flies cannot gain access to the excremental matter contained therein, and unless such excremental matter shall at all times be prevented from flowing over or upon the surface of the ground. Every privy or other receptacle for human excrement located within 100 feet of any stream, the waters of which are used for drinking or domestic purposes, shall be provided with a water-tight vault.

Regulation 4. No person or private or municipal corporation shall permit any human excrement, or material containing human excrement to remain on the surface of the ground, nor shall such excremental matter or material containing such excremental matter be buried or otherwise disposed of within 100 feet of any stream, well, lake, spring or other source of water used for drinking or domestic purposes; nor shall any such material be deposited in any place where it is likely to gain access to such waters. Provided, however, that this regulation shall not apply to effluents from sewage disposal plants which have been, or hereafter may be, approved by the State Department of Health.

Regulation 5. No person or private or municipal corporation shall maintain, or permit to be maintained, any accumulation of decomposing animal or vegetable matter in which fly larvae exist on any premises upon which is located any hotel, boarding house, lodging house, restaurant or any other establishment in which foods intended for sale or distribution are prepared, handled or sold, or at any point on any other premises within 250 feet of any dwelling occupied by another.

Regulation 6. No person or private or municipal corporation shall maintain or permit to be maintained, any pool, pond, ditch, stream or other body of water or any cistern, privy vault, cesspool, rain barrel or other receptacle containing water, in which mosquito larvae exist.

Regulation 7. These regulations shall take effect on June 1, 1916.

LETTER-CARRIERS' FUND REACHES $1,200 MARK

The citizens' committee in charge of the arrangements for the entertainment of the State Letter Carriers' Convention here, May 30, met last night and reported the cash on hand at present to be $1,200. The sum of $300 additional is needed to make the convention a success, the actual expenses being $1,550.

The committee will ask the merchants and residents along the line of march to decorate for the big parade. The line of march will be announced within a few days. About fifty new contributions to the fund were reported last night.

EPXERTS RECOMMENDATIONS

lecting taxes are all somewhat technical and are, therefore, not set forth in this summary.

Police Are Efficient.

Plainfield's police department is organized in accordance with the most approved modern plan, and is efficiently managed. The force could be used to greater advantage, however, if provision were made for proper patrol supervision during the night hours; relieving the sergeants of desk duty; the permanent assignment of at least one, and preferably two, members of the force to detective service; the installation of a flashlight system through which to communicate with the patrol force on posts; the establishment of a small reserve force; and the introduction of the patrol booth system to replace the present suburban patrol. Although the records are for the most part in accordance with good practice, they can be much improved without additional clerical help or the introduction of any costly system.

Need More Firemen.

While the department of fire is properly organized and for the most part well managed, its efficiency could be greatly increased by the appointment of four additional men; the introduction of a proper system for the training of the firemen; the amendment of the procedure so as to provide for the dispatching of the same amount of apparatus in response to a telephone alarm as a box alarm; and the establishment of a fire prevention commission.

No changes are suggested for reorganization of the health department. It is at present performing its duties very satisfactorily. A number of suggestions are made which look toward a more continued and complete health program in Plainfield. It is proposed to secure such result by the appointment of members of the board for a term of four years instead of two; the transfer of the city physician from the poor department to the department of health; the coordination of the nursing activities of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society and the Visiting Nurses' Association with other health department functions under the direction of the board of health; revision of the sanitary code; a more thorough medical investigation of communicable diseases and an improved control of diphtheria; the discontinuance of routine fumigation following contagious diseases, or by making such fumigation self-supporting through more adequate fees; the promulgation of a new milk ordinance providing for the grading of milk and the tuberculin testing of dairy cattle; the establishment of an infant clinic during the coming summer months; the grading of all food stores according to conditions found and the requirement of certificates of health from all food handlers; the co-operation of the police in the enforcement of sanitary regulations; better supervision of the disposal of garbage; the discontinuance of much of the routine sanitary inspection now performed which is unproductive from a health standpoint; by the improvement of birth registration through the issuance of acknowledgement of the receipt of birth certificates to parents; by the examination of baptismal registers, wider publicity and the co-operation of health department inspectors, nurses, and other employes.

More Relief for Poor.

The overseer of the poor is conducting the affairs of his office in strict accordance with the law and the limitations placed upon him by Council. It is believed, however, that out-door relief of the poor in Plainfield may be rendered more effective and at less cost to the city if the following suggestions for changes and readjustments were made effective; transfer of social and economic investigation of applications for relief from the poor department to the Charity Organization Society, which is better equipped to conduct such investigations and by making an appropriation to the Charity Organization Society sufficient to cover the cost of the additional service required in making these investigations; transfer of the city physician from the department of poor to the department of health and by coordinating those nursing functions now under the control of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society and the Visiting Nurses' Association with other functions of a related nature in the health department; establishment in the office of the overseer of the poor of a city employment bureau; employment of the resources of the Industrial Home through more intensive farm operations and the utilization of such labor as may be found among the able-bodied poor of the city.

The organization of the street department and the related public works activities is effective. The elasticity obtainable through the present centralization of responsibility in the office of the street commissioner and engineer of sewers is very desirable. In this connection it is suggested that if possible proper legislative steps be taken to insure reorganization of the public works functions into a single department—a department of public works.

Paving Need Not Serious.

The local paving problem is not serious. The deterioration and breaking down of many of the roads in Plainfield are largely caused by the drainage conditions. Undermining and disintegration is of course worse during the spring thaws than at other times. This is especially true of the Netherwood section of the city. It is urged that the policy of constructing water-bound macadam roads be discontinued except on purely residential streets where traffic is entirely local.

Certain permanent pavements should be constructed in the business section of the city and along West Front street, which is the most heavily-traveled of the through traffic highways. For all other through traffic streets, such as Park avenue, East Front street, Seventh street, etc., it is suggested that the existing water-bound macadam be replaced with a bituminous macadam or asphaltic concrete, the choice depending upon the pavement policy to be followed by the city and upon the volume of traffic, which can be known only by the local street department.

The question of sewers and sewage disposal is not given extensive attention in this survey, the city having already employed a competent consulting engineer for this purpose. It is urged, however, that the question of storm water sewers be given consideration in the immediate future, because in certain parts of the city there is evidence that the difficulty of highway maintenance is largely caused by the entire lack of adequate drainage facilities.

The question of street cleaning is also one which must be met in the near future. At the present time the cleaning of permanent pavements and adjacent streets in the center of the city is being carried on by contract. The price paid is not excessive if the work is done well. No examination of the cleanliness was possible at the time of the survey. The function of street cleaning is one which should eventually be conducted by the city under the proposed department of public works. The question of removing snow from sidewalks is one which causes considerable annoyance. It is recommended that the ordinance now in existence with respect to this feature be strictly enforced and that the city refrain from removing snow from sidewalks in the future, or undertake the cleaning of all sidewalks and include the cost of such work in the annual appropriations.

It is recommended that all sidewalk and curb construction be done under city supervision and that an annual contract be let for this purpose.

Collection of Garbage.

The collection and disposal of ashes, garbage and rubbish is a function which should be carried on either by the city or under city supervision instead of the present method. Responsibility and control of this important work can only be obtained through administering it by a public official who could be held accountable. It is recommended that a special study be made of the local situation to determine upon plans for organizing a street cleaning department charged with the cleaning of the city streets, and the collection of ashes, garbage and rubbish.

The records of the street and sewer departments and such cost accounting as is carried on indicate the progressive spirit of the administrative head and his assistants. It is believed, however, that the records should be further improved in that considerable duplication now exists. Certain changes in the methods of recording the statistical and cost information are suggested, all of which aim toward simplification and greater utility.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, MAY 5, 1916.

Plainfield has recently been mentioned as the prospective home of two more big automobile manufacturing concerns. In fact one industry has purchased a site, and will soon have a factory under course of construction. There is no limit to the great good that can be accomplished in this city by making it a more important industrial center, if our public spirited citizens keep on the look-out for manufacturers seeking new factory locations. There is no reason why many more plants, employing hundreds of hands, cannot be induced to locate here. There are plenty of available sites along the railroad, shipping facilities could not be better, the schools, churches and other institutions are of the character that will attract workingmen who wish to bring their families up amid wholesome surroundings, and there are a hundred and one other reasons which make this city particularly desirable. Most factories will in no way detract from the beauty of the residential sections, for they are far removed from that part of the city where heads of big concerns would want to locate their plants. If the local civic bodies could only get together on this matter, we believe that inside of a year new industries, employing hundreds of hands, can be secured for Plainfield.

Among other things which the surveyors recommend in their report on the city government is the establishment of a municipal system of collecting garbage and ashes. Plainfield has been far behind the times on this score for such a long while, and it has been so well known that this was needed, that the people will only say "it should have been arranged long ago." The present method is bad. In fact the amount of paper blowing around on some of the streets is a disgrace, and radical departures should be made to correct the condition. It is certainly to be hoped that no matter what is done about other parts of the report, the city fathers will immediately put the machinery in motion for the establishment of a satisfactory garbage and ash collection system.

Plainfield is to be honored next month by a visit from a former President of the United States, William Howard Taft, who will be one of the speakers at the Chautauqua to be held in this city. Whether or not people approved of him as a President, everyone will honor him as one of the big men of the country, and he will undoubtedly be greeted by a great throng when he comes here. His presence on the Chautauqua program will assure the success of the meetings, for the price of a season ticket will not be a great deal more than the price of the single tickets for the one meeting at which he will speak.

When a German Zeppelin returning from a raid on English and Scotch cities was abandoned off the coast of Scotland Wednesday six members of the crew stayed behind to destroy secrets of its mechanism so that English military officers could not learn how the big dirigible was operated. Three of them died there. Such sacrifices, far away from the heat and excitement of the battlefield, show that there still exists in the hearts of German soldiers a love and respect for country that refutes all rumors of the Kaiser's people suing for peace. The war will end when Germany is whipped.

Postal inspectors have been at work in this city trying to correct the deplorable state into which the service has fallen in the last few months. They have made a number of recommendations, and expect that things will be much improved here within a very short time. It is said that they have recommended more carriers, and these will probably be allowed. The fact that one of the inspectors lives in this city has made it possible for the department to get first hand information about conditions here, and the job was tackled with no uncertain hand by the two men who went at it.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, says that Plainfield is lacking in public spirit, and criticizes Mayor Calkins for taking more interest in small things than in the great ones. Perhaps Dr. Saunders, whose opinion everyone respects, is right, but to the average person it looks very much as if Mayor Calkins' term of office will later be referred to as one when big things were done. Certainly he has a splendid record to date.

The city of Plainfield has no more faithful servants than the two strudy horses that pull the hook and ladder truck. It makes the heart of every humanitarian ache to see these handsome specimens pulling that heavy wagon to and from fires, straining every muscle and doing something that should be done by a powerful motor tractor. The City Council plans to purchase a new hook and ladder truck this year, and it is to be hoped that it will soon be ordered.

Yes, gentle reader, the rabbit which some one kindly placed in the yard in the rear of the Press office, about which comment was made in these columns on Tuesday night, is gone at last. Somehow or other the man whom the street department sent to bury it, wandered into another yard and buried someone's cat, which explains why the bunny remained so long within sight and smell of the Press staff.

The Stars and Stripes shall wave again
Upon the sea,
Hurrah!
There'll be upon the commerce lane
More ships than we E'er saw.
While European war is played,
We'll capture all the foreign trade—
With powers of every rank and grade
The grand old flag shall be displayed.
The British lion's paw
Will have to loosen up a bit;
There's not the slightest doubt of it.
For Yankee ships will carry tin
And coal to fill the foreign bin,
And wheat and corn and oats and rye
And oils and varnish, far and nigh—
And steel and iron, copper, brass,
And putty, paint and lead and glass—
And apple sass—
And breakfast food and great machines,
And cups and saucers, soup tureens
And limousines;
Electric fans and baseball bats,
And shoes and stockings, pants and hats;
And beer and booze and sealing wax,
And linen, silk and carpet tacks;
Fly swatters, lumber, nails and tools,
And dressers, tables, chairs and stools.
And then, by gum, the whole wide world
Will know the grand old flag's unfurled
To scour the seas as slick as grease—
And gather the reward of Peace.

MERRY, MERRY MAYPOLE

- Proctor's Theatre -

Never before in the history of local amusements has there appeared such wonderful photoplay attractions as those that are being presented and are booked to appear at Proctor's. Today, for instance, dainty Marguerite Clark, one of the most popular and well-liked of screen ingenues is featured in what is conceded to be one of her best picture, entitled "Still Waters," which was produced by the famous Paramount Company. The big local movie play, entitled "It Happened in Plainfield," is also shown today, and the latest chapter of "The Social Pirates" also appears. Tomorrow will prove to be a big day for the little ones, among the features particularly interesting to them being Minerva Courtenay imitating Charlie Chaplin in "The Champion;" "World War in Kidland," an extremely amusing comedy enacted entirely by child scren stars headed by Master Joseph Monahan. The management have made arrangements whereby a series of these juvenile comedies will appear at Proctor's Saturday of each week, starting tomorrow. Musty Suffer and Mutt and Jeff will also evoke storms of wholesome merriment from the little ones, as well as those of more mature age. "It Happened in Plainfield," the local photoplay enacted entirely by local talent, will be seen for the last time tomorrow, while the dramatic part of the program will be taken care of by Hamilton Revelle in "The Price of Malice." On Monday Proctor's will offer the most extraordinary program of photoplays ever offered in this or any other city, when Charlie Chaplin, the highest paid comedian in the world, who receives $670,000 a year, will appear in his latest, greatest and most expensive creation, his burlesque on "Carmen," a mammoth four-reel, riproaring comedy, the booking of which was made at enormous cost. In addition to this wonderful attraction on Monday, the management presents Mary Pickford, the highest salaried woman in the world in "Madame Butterfly," many scenes of which were taken right here in town and in this vicinity but a short while ago. Two such popular stars on one program at no advance in prices is a crowning achievement indeed, and one which will go down in local history as one of the greatest photoploy entertainments ever offered for the amusement of local theatregoers.

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

The Plainfield Theatre will ring with mrriment tonight for another of those laugh-producing amateur nights will be held in connection with the regular program. Seven entries have ben received, and it will be left to the audience to decide which of the acts is to receive the prizes. All the amateur acts last week were exceptionally good, and the big crowd which attended received more than twice its montey's worth. There is always a capacity attendance at these affairs, and it is a case of "come early and avoid the rush."

The new bill which opened for the last half of the week contains six big feature numbers, the headliner being "Theo, the Balloon Girl." This act is a singing and dancing affair, ending with a startling balloon ascension directly over the heads of the audience. "Theo" has an assisting company of "dandys" and the act is equipped with special scenery and electrical effects.

Today's feature of the moving picture part of the program is the continuation of "The Strange Case of Mary Page," the serial film, which has many hundreds of followers. The Pathe semi-weekly will be among the special offerings for tomorrow. Remember that there are three performances daily at the Plainfield Theatre, afternoons at 2 and evenings at 7 and 9.

--Astor Theatre--

"The Spider," the great production in which Pauline Frederick is starred by the Famous Players Film Company, will be the attraction at the Astor Theatre today and tomorrow. When she was a very young and beautiful girl, Valerie St. Cyr deserted her husband and her little daughter to share the fortunes of Count Du Poissy, a far-famed roue. They lived as happily as their circumstances would permit until Valerie conceives the idea of having her portrait painted by Julian St. Saens, a young artist of exceptionally strong moral sensibilities. Entirely unknown to Valerie, Julian has fallen in love with her daughter, Joan, who is employed at a flower shop. The Count abducts the girl and takes her to one of his old haunts, while Julian receives a note to the effect that Joan has sought employment with the despised Valerie. Joan hears the Count telephone the news of her capture to Valerie, and, realizing that she is in grave peril, seizes a dagger from the wall and stabs the Count as he attempts to embrace her. In addition to Pauline Frederick, the cast includes such distinguished names as Frank Losee, of "Old Homestead" fame, Thomas Holding and others of great renown. On Monday, Jesse L. Lasky presents the leading character star of the screen, Theodore Roberts, in a superb picturization of the American classic, Mark Twain's "Pudd'nhead Wilson," with the consent of the Mark Twain Co., a photoplay of combined humor and stirring drama, tempered by a deep note of human sympathy and heart interest. This will be a genuine treat for all ages, as a great many will remember the wonderful works of Mark Twain. Always a clean moral program at the Astor Theatre; nothing sensational, and our motto, "Quality, Not Quantity," will be the password. On every Saturday, Helen Holmes, in "The Girl and the Game," and other pictures for the kiddies which they will enjoy. We give Travelstamps.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

The Kaiser's Capstick has grabbed the red-hot poker with both hands! In his letter to the secretary of the Elizabeth Kaiserites, he gratefully accepts their support, and murmurs that "this indication of 'confidence is 'increasingly' esteemed and gratifying."

This clears the air. We were too optimistic; the prodigal has not returned; he is still tending the trough in the far country.

Note the significant word "increasingly" Does not this indicate that this morsel of German delicatessen becomes "increasingly" appetizing, pleasurable and desirable to his palate as he observes the vanishing backs of the American voters in the Fifth New Jersey District, who are flying from him as from a political leper?

Of course, the honorable Congressman is not a "confidence" man—he won't abuse the confidence of these trustful, simple-minded Germans, but will strive to merit it.

About one hundred and forty years ago Hessian mercenary troops ravaged some of the fairest spots of New Jersey, as their descendants and compatriots did a year and a half ago in Belgium. Their sympathizers in this country are here and now waging internal war on us again, this time with bomb plots, conspiracies to detsroy railroads, steamships, canals and factories; with forged passports, falsified clearance papers for steamships, intimidation of Senators and Representatives, etc., ad nauseam. Does anyone ever hear of German-American societies passing resolutions condemning these and similar practices and crimes of the highly-organized German propo ganda?

In lawyers' jargon Capstick stands convicted on a bill of attainder (for treason) pro confesso; or, in the language of the street, "he admits the corn."

The degradation of the American Congress is one of the most disquieting signs of the political times Here's an illuminating illustration. Recently on the floor of the House Congressman Garner, of Texas, boasted that he had secured a $60,000 postoffice building for a cross-roads town in his district, for which he admitted that a $5,000 building would be more than adequate, and then in an eloquent peroration in true Texan style, he shouted: "We Democrats are in control, and every time one of these Yankees get a ham, I am going to get a hog!"

From which, and many another incident, we gather that the chief qualification of a Congressman is ability to extract for his district large hunks of patronage and contracts from the national "pork barrel;" and in view of the appallingly low standards of patriotism prevailing among his associates, perhaps we expect too much from the Kaiser's Capstick; but it is certainly up to the American voters in the Fifth New Jersey District to decide with a bang how they like his record and what they are going to do about it.

The circus is over; Capstick's American former constituents have left the tent to him and his Teutonic shouters.

Yours truly,
HOWARD McWILLIAMS,
1007 Hillside ave., Plainfield, N. J.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Dear Sir—

In answer to F. W. Bird, I would like to say, through the columns of your paper, that I think this city is fortunate that it has a man of ability who is willing to devote 75 per cent of his time to the city's interest whether he pays taxes or not.

Mr. Bird has plenty of time on his hands, and if he had this city's interest at heart he would offer his services to the city instead of criticising those who are willing to do and are trying to serve their city to the best of their ability.

Supposing mistakes are made, active people make a lot of mistakes, but they also do world's of things that are not mistakes that more than overbalance them.

The man who never makes a mistake never accomplishes much—in fact, is a "dead one," and ought to move up to the cemetery.

Mayor Calkins and I do not agree in all things, but I like him better for that—wouldn't care for a person who didn't have a mind of his own and the backbone to defend it.

The purchase of the City Hall site was not "slipped across" by the Mayor, it was before the Public Affairs Committee, of which I was then a member, for some weeks before a site was definitely determined upon, and every member of the Council knew all about it before it was finally brought before the Council for action.

Regarding the site being way off on one side, as he says, anyone who is able to walk at all can easily walk from the North avenue station to it in five minutes, and it is geographically about the centre of the city.

Maybe I am a "slick fellow" or a "good mixer," but I surely am a taxpayer and try to be a good councilman.

When I retire from business I shall gild my hammer and never use it again.

Very truly,
CHARLES C. GRAVES.

POLICE AND FIREMEN PRAISED.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

I would like to ask for space in your paper to speak of the efficient work of Chief Doane and the fire department in their very prompt response to the alarm at my house at 8:30 last night. Marion Ackerman first informed us that we had a fire as he saw the blaze from his home across the street and very kindly offered his help. At the same time Patrolman Baeder had seen the flames in the upper story window and promptly turned in a general alarm so that the engines were clanging down the street almost as soon as we knew ourselves of the fire. This is not the first time this winter that I have had reason to know how watchful and efficient our police-patrolmen are. That the fire was not more serious was due to the bravery and quick action of William Bailey, the colored butler, who at first fought the fire single-handed, throwing blazing bureau drawers out of the window at great personal risk. A small detachment of Boy Scouts marched over from the Crescent Avenue church and lined up quietly on the street ready to help if opportunity offered. We did not know they were there till we saw them quietly marching away. I was particularly impressed with the courtesy of the fire chief and his men and I take pleasure in thanking them and the other men in this way.

(MRS.) ALICE L. WALDORF,

WITTPENN DONATES ATHLETIC TROPHY

Local A. A. U. Athletes Asked to Participate in Elizabeth Games

On Sunday, June 11, the Singer Employes Association will hold its annual charity athletic games, the proceeds of which, as has been the custom in the past, being donated to a charitable institution. This year the Egenold Day Nursery of Elizabeth will be the recipient.

The games will be held in Bennett Field, Elizabethport, the spacious athletic field of the association, and will consist of a 100-yard dash handicap, 120-yard high hurdle handicap, 880-yard run handicap, one mile run novice, two mile run handicap, 1200 yard relay handicap, running high jump, throwing javelin and seven mile road walk handicap, starting in Newark and finishing in the field.

The above events are open to all registered A. A. U. athletes. There will be a special one mile manufacturers' relay, closed to manufacturing concerns. The Hon. H. Otto Wittpenn has donated a handsome trophy for this event and in addition to the trophy, the members of the winning team will receive solid gold medals. The second team will be given gold-filled medals.

The prizes for the open events are of exceptional value, consisting of bronze statues for first, second and third.

Entries will close Saturday, June 4, with Arthur J. Garthwaite, 563 Meadow street, Elizabeth.

SHAMROCKS TOOK ONE RUN VERDICT THIS TRIP

The Shamrock A. C. defeated the Central A. A. yesterday by the close score of 10 to 9. O'Keefe's pitching, Ed Connors' hitting and Hickey's fielding won the game for the Shamrocks. Hickey played good ball. The Shamrocks used but one pitcher, who was better than both the Centrals had. The Central A. C. found O'Keeffe for three hits, and he fanned nine. For the losers, Newell and Sullivan starred.

PLAINFIELD ATHLETIC NINE PLAN AN ACTIVE SEASON

The Plainfield Athletic Nine held an enthusiastic meeting in the Washington School last night, the object of the gathering being to increase the membership and organize along definite lines. Officers elected were as follows: President, Joseph Newell; vice president, William Barry, and secretary and treasurer, Robert Clarkson. The charter members of the organizationn beside the officers are Cyril Poling, Leo Keating, Francis Connolly, John Newell, James McCarthy, William Messler, Elmer Brandt, Peter Cowley, John Connors and William Schlick.

The club will be principally for West End boys between the ages of fourteen and seventeen years and they will engage in athletics, debating, community work and choral singing. Next Thursday the club will hold union meeting for the purpose of increasing the membership roll.

N. P. H. S. NOTES

The juniors would like to know who took their flag.

John Dawe and Ernest Pruden have received word that they passed their recent examinations in typewriting.

The juniors will present "The Deacon Entangled" at Columbus Hall tonight.

Twelve seniors have entered the composition contest on the "Life of Shakespeare," under the direction of the Independent Magazine. The winner will receive a gold medal.

S. Frederick Smith, music supervisor, has begun rehearsals for the commencement exercises.

A prize of $5 has been offered to the girl in the senior class who makes the most attractive graduation gown.

The baseball team has scheduled a game for tomorrow with present and former Leal School stars. The next school contest will be with Roselle High on Wednesday.

"NEW JERSEY DAY" WILL BE OBSERVED IN THIS CITY

"New Jersey Day" will be observed throughout the State on Friday, May 12, the object of the day being to awaken interest in New Jersey's resources and attractions. The State has developed unequally; its growth of late years has been more rapid than that of any of the older States, yet many of its great advantages are unrecognized. Henry C. White, of this city, is a member of the governing board of the Department of Conservation and Development, the latter department working in conjunction with the governor for the observance. Plainfield clubs will have special programs on the day and the Department of Education had made provision for a general celebration in the public schools throughout the State.

—Among the readers of this newspaper's classified columns are possible buyers for any desirable real estate in this city.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

HAVEN'T CONFIDENCE IN THE OFFICIAL SCORERS.

According to reports the City Baseball League has been offered so many trophies it doesn't know what to do with them all. Suggestion has been made that one of the "extras" be offered for the best individual batting average. This naturally brought up the question of the competency of the official score keepers and strange to relate the various team leaders were not willing to rely on the ability of their tally men in determining the prize winner. That's just the point. We might as well follow the same system as last year in keeping scores if we're not going to place confidence in our tally men. Just as soon as the matter of deciding a City League Ty Cobb was broached the competency of the scorers was brought up and the league moguls were so shaky regarding the matter that they decided not to offer the cup for that purpose.

• • • • • •

MAY HAVE BEEN THE BEST COURSE AFTER ALL.

On the other hand the discouraging of the practice of dealing out prizes that would tend to inspire individualism may have been a good thing on the part of the City League officers. On a circuit of this kind team work is needed and unless the six outfits are going to work together as six units there will be discord and disruption. Individual batting trophies are bound to stir up a feeling of animosity among the players in the league and a natural soreness would be awakened. Wounds that result from these sources are hard ones to heal and looking the matter squarely in the face it would seem that the course the City League took in refusing to put up a batting trophy was a proper one, even though it was discouraged for some other motive.

• • • • • •

TRAP-SHOOTING HAS COME HERE TO STAY.

So active have the gunners been during the trap-shooting season hereabouts that this brand of sport has established for itself a firm footing that is bound to stick tight. No finer set of marksmen has ever been brought into prominence in this section than those developed at the traps of the Climax, New Market and Metuchen Rifle Clubs this year and we expect to witness a general picking up and another bound into popularity when the season opens up once more. The shooters are still prominent at the traps and the season will linger with us for some time to come. The preparedness policy is getting its boost from Plainfield and vicinity in this roundabout course and in the long run it may prove the most effective.

• • • • • •

A RELIC OF BY-GONE BASEBALL DAYS.

One of the relics of by-gone baseball days lies on Randolph road, opposite the old horse show grounds. Probably no baseball rendezvous in this State is better known to the baseball public than Crescent Oval. This time-honored lot was the scene of many a red-hot conflict between New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania rivals when father was a boy and many of the old-timers turn their heads and shed a tear when they pass by. Parker Field has taken its place as a baseball center and although it is one of the classiest fields for ball playing in New Jersey it will probably never be subjected to the use that Crescent Oval underwent as an athletic center.

• • • • • •

BIG SIX NOT IN USUAL GOOD TRIM.

Christy Mathewson has announced his appearance in a come-back stunt to take place this afternoon. "Big Six" is one of the few baseball hurlers who doesn't yearn for the limelight and we're surprised to find that he has admitted that there is a grave possibility of his not being able to hold up his share of the Giants' pitching burden this year. Mathewson is probably a more interesting character to Plainfield baseball lovers than any other twirler of big league calibre. This is due largely to the relationship he holds with Plainfield people, although it must be admitted that his pitching ability has been his big drawing card for popularity. Many times he has tried the Plainfield Country Club's golf links as an exerciser and one would not be surprised to see him lay off for a month or two and sojourn around these parts recuperating.

• • • • • •

PROFESSIONALISM IN GOLF.

Following the decision of the board of directors of the Western Golf Association, to the effect that golfers who availed themselves of the free train offered by a club of California for the championship event to be held there, would forfeit their amateur standing, the directors of the club have withdrawn the offer. This was a perfectly natural act and one which occasioned little or no surprise. The Western Golf Association has gone to a remarkable length in throwing about its members drastic rules to preserve their amateur standing, and yet one who is but half-heartedly interested in their affairs cannot help but wonder if the officials have not gone too far.

We believe that so good a game as golf is, and one which attracts to it such high class people, should of course have quite drastic rules as to amateurism, but we do not believe it is necessary to be foolish about it. We think the directors went a little too far when they professionalized such a man as Ouimet, for example, and it strikes us as a little absurd to make a rule which professionalizes those who accept courtesies at the hands of a club. To carry this rule to its final conclusion one would be apt to professionalize himself if he accepted the ordinary courtesies of a club without charge. If the board of directors are so anxious to take out of the game all aspects of commercialism or gain, a more sensible rule would be to professionalize all who bet on golf, but of course, no such rule will be adopted because instantly about 99 4-5 per cent. of all the golfers of the country would become professionals. We do not believe there is a game over which there is so much betting as golf, and for a lot of bettors to get high minded notions as to professionalism, is a little diverting to say the least.

TABS KEYED UP FOR SUNDAY BALL GAME

Clinton Avenue Aggregation Will Be the Opponent in First Contest.

On Sunday the T. A. B. S. will open their Sunday baseball season with the Clinton Avenue nine, of the City League. This game will take place at Avon Oval, at the end of the Arlington avenue trolley line. The game will start at 3:30 p. m. The line-up for both teams will be as follows:

T. A. B. S.—T. Denny, cf; J. Denny, p; Kid Brennan, lf; Willie O'Loughlin, c; Rosenson, ss; McCarty, 2b; De Nitzeo, 3b; Winters, 1b; Lawton, rf

Clinton Avenue—Gunzelman, lf; Brown, 3b; Pennoyer, 2b; Bergen, c; Jaeger, ss; J. Dixon, p; Miller, cf, Hendry, 1b; Apgar, rf.

By "J. A. G."

To the loyal students of both N. P. H. S. and P. H. S., the baseball supremacy of this vicinity is a topic demanding more than passing interest. Some one has to win and, in the past, that "some one" has been the team that, really, looked the better, as far as the "sight" of the "dopester" was concerned. But this year, green material adorns both sides. It is next to impossible to pick a winner. And it is no easy task to value the ability of the new men.

Pitchers.

Let us consider the pitching staff. In Oscar Dilts, N. P. H. S. has a veteran. Dilts is not the Dilts of last year. He is better. His "stuff" is along a new line and is subject to perfect control. As a fielding pitcher ,Oscar has few peers, while with the stick he is a valuable asset. The Red-and-Blue cohorts have four pitchers, all of whom are good but not one of whom is as experienced, at least in scholastic circles, as Dilts is. Wendell Hutchcroft, a southpaw, has the goods but lacks control; Sam Davidson is also there with the "stuff" and should show up well. Sam is coo' and does not wilt under fire. Clarence Eder and "Bunny" Dealaman round out the corps. Each of these lads is said to be good, but, as we have not seen either work, we are not in a position to judge.

Catchers.

It seems to be the prevailing opinion that N. P. H. S. is at sea for catching material. The notion is al' wrong. Andy McDonough is a first-class backstop and Newt. Mair is good. Andy is new behind the breastworks, but he is an adept apprentice. He is discreet, a good hitter, fielder and runner; and, what is most necessary, uses his head. Of course, the catching problem at P. H. S. is solved. "Box" Apgar is excellent—no comment, other than that, is necessary. Art Kyle—like Newt. Mair, a first baseman—is very good behind the plate. Coach Ralph S. Patch is not worrying about the catching situation.

At First Base.

A "find" adorns first for the Canadians. He is not a star, but is consistent. His hitting ability is pronounced, as was demonstrated in the game with Westfield. In Mair, N. P. H. S. has a capable first-sacker and, if need be, a good catcher. Art Kyle, guardian of the first station on this side of the brook, is a "vet." His ability is realized. He is not green and the Canadians know it.

Second Base.

At second, Yates, a mere slip of a lad, is doing splendid work. If the P. H. S. warriors count on hitting everything through second, trouble is in store for them. If Gerald Linke ambles around second for P. H. S., honors will be about even. Linke is no star, but he is steady. A slip, now and then, is excusable. Gerald's ability to hit in the pinches was demonstrated when P. H. S. handed Westfield High that 12 to 11 defeat.

That Short Position.

"Tut" Dawe and Bob McDowell are both able artists—which is the better is a mere matter of opinion. We have an opinion, but it counts for little. Let it suffice to say that both can be depended on.

The Difficult Corner.

Warren Townley is a fixture at third. He has a wonderful arm and is a good fielder. His clouting, at one time, terrorized all of Plainfield. Just now he is not so determined with the willow. However, at his worst he can outhit fifty or more so-called "leaguers." We do not know who will play third for P. H. S Linke, Lewis, Coudray and, perhaps, Dunham may get a chance at the job. With the exception of Dunham, none of these lads are unusual. All are fast and clean ballists.

The Outfield.

With Kirch, Van Mater and McDonough featuring on Hyde Field, things look rosy. While Van Mater is no slugger, Kirch and McDonough are good with the stick. In fielding ability, all three shine. "Bus" Dunham, Phil Mills, Leonard Lewis and Jim Noonan do the running act "on this side of the border." Dunham is great, featuring difficult catches; Mills is a second Joe Harter—that's a compliment. Noonan is good, and covers a great deal of ground. All four know how to hit.

And the "Subs."

Seidel, Townley, Chandler and La Porte adorn the bench for N. P. H. S. Of the four, Seidel, perhaps, gets the most work. He is not much of a hitter and does not like to slide. However, he is full of "pep" and should "get over." Of the others, we know little. The most promising recruits at P. H. S. are Morris Klein and Sam Semer. Semer is very fast but is light, while Klein, a heavier man, is not so fast. Both are willing to hit They can do it, too.

Were we "Jawn" McGraw, we would pick a winner. But we are not "Jawn" McGraw. A "cub" gets little credit for picking a winner; and if he picks a loser, his judgment gets a severe jolt. You, gentle reader, realize our position.

However, after seeing P. H. S. tackle Westfield and after viewing the combat engaged in by Westfield and our friends on the other side, we come to a definite conclusion. The conclusion is that we had better not say anything.

The battle is carded for one week from next Saturday. Let us be patient.

ELIMINATION CONTEST TO PICK TENNIS TEAM

Tennis has taken a new lease of life at the Plainfield High School and, as a result, the competition for places on the team is very keen. McAnneny, Case, Carter and Eggie at present compose the first squad, all having been members of last year's team, but will have to hustle some to keep their places.

The list of challengers for berths has become so large that it has been decided to hold an elimination contest first and the four successful ones will meet the members of the first team. In that way every one wishing to try will get a chance and some good material may result. The first meet of the season is being played this afternoon on the local courts with Flemington as the opponent. Nine meets have been scheduled for the next three weeks.

THIS FELLOW GOT OUT BEFORE WE SAW HIM

He Tossed This Masterpiece on Our Doorstep and Beat It.

"Farmer" Mack wishes to state to the public that he is not a water carrier, but a regular baseball manager.

Joe Guine is a fine lad. He is captain of the Shamrock A. C. and is just like a stone wall at shortstop.

John O'Keeffe is a fine ball player. He is a pitcher of the Shamrock A. C He is good at bat, and every time he gets up the ball is sure to go for a ride.

"Dutch" Butscher is a good outfielder. Talk about luck, every grounder that comes to him is a lucky bouncer.

GREEN "RIME."

About the Shamrock A. C.:
Listen, my friends, and you shall hear
A little poem that I will make
'Tis about the Shamrock A. C.,
A classy little Irish team.
Joe Guine is its captain,
A trim little fellow, too,
And every time he yells "play ball,"
The ground is sure to shake.
John O'Keeffe is its pitcher,
A good little Irish pitcher,
And every time he throws the ball
It's sure to be a strike.

SWIMMING MEET IS POSTPONED UNTIL THURSDAY

The swimming meet scheduled to take place in the P. H. S. swimming pool yesterday afternoon between the local High School girls and those of South Side, of Newark, was postponed until next Thursday. Included in the list of events will be diving for form, 40-yard dash, dive for object, 20-yard dash and relay. An admission will be charged sufficient to defray the expenses of the visiting team.

In their one previous meet of the year with the Plainfield Grammar School girls, the P. H. S. squad had little difficulty in winning, and, with the advantage of a number of weeks of practice, should annex the coming one also. Miny Taylor and Emily White are the mainstays of the team, although Ruth Thomas, Ruth Fuller, Ruth White and Ruth Enander have done excellent work too.

GAMES TOMORROW.

Netherwood at Tabs.
First Baptist at Clinton Avenue.
Hope Chapel at Farmer A. C.

UMPIRES.

Henry Hansen.
James Montross.
Frank Melange.

Although it is yet too early to anticipate decided shifts in the team standings of the City Baseball League some good games are looked forward to tomorrow afternoon and a couple or more teams may be entered in the first place tie when the clouds roll by. The league is now firmly footed and the competition during the remainder of the season should move along smoothly.

Last week Netherwood, First Baptist and Hope Chapel opened the season with victories and the Tabs, Farmers and Clinton Aves. trailed along without a win. All three of the last named, however, are determined to pull down a victory to even up matters tomorrow and the winners are equally as determined to come out in the van and make it two straight.

As drawing cards the three games last Saturday surpassed the highest expectations of the trio of managers and as the season warms up it is only reasonable to expect that the patronage will increase and that all six outfits will be money makers.

Several new faces will appear in the lineups of the Clinton Avenue, Hope Chapel and Tabs teams this week and should materially strengthen each combine. The official scorers and umpires worked to perfection last week and they will probably be given permanent berths.

The lineups for the three games follow:

CLEVELAND STRIKE AVERTED

Railway Employees, 1,123 to 496, Accept Compromise.

Cleveland, May 5.—A strike of railway employees was averted when motormen and conductors of the Cleveland Railway company decided by a vote of 1,123 to 496 to accept the company's compromise offer.

The terms call for a wage increase of 2 cents an hour, effective at once, with an additional increase of 1 cent May 1, 1917, and a minimum day of five hours, effective at once.

The first year men have been getting 20 cents and hour and the others 32 cents. The company estimates the advance will cost $232,000 in two years.

Many People Leave Metz.

London, May 5.—Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent wires that, according to trustworthy information he has received, the civilian population of Metz, in Lorraine, is leaving the city.

Seen and Heard on the Street

Two young men, thinking more of their personal comfort than the idiotic edict about May 15, walking down North avenue in white duck trousers and wearing brand-new straw hats.

West Third street young man whose "lady friend" lives near Muhlenberg Hospital, pretending to be hard of hearing when the taxicab boys hailed him as he was leaving the Plainfield Theatre Wednesday night at 11:45, just too late to catch the last Arlington avenue car.

Well-dressed, middle-aged woman alighting from a Union car at Watchung avenue and Second street, yesterday noon and releasing a white poodle she had been carrying in a leather bag safe from the prying eyes of the stern conductor, who has memorized well the rule about allowing no animals on his conveyance.

Small boy using auto horn on bicycle and scaring pedestrians at Watchung avenue crossing.

Several Plainfield women boarding the 5:19 New York Express Wednesday night and searching in vain for a place to sit down in a crowded car while a portly "gentleman," weighing at least 250 pounds, and a smaller friend, equally lacking in etiquette, sat in one seat and occupied the one in front of them with their feet, grip cases and sundry bundles.

John Manley, button-holing a married friend on Madison avenue and freeing his mind of the following bit of originality: If you must drink and cannot get along without your booze, I would suggest the following solution to your bondage of habit:

1. Start a saloon in your home.
2. Be the only customer, you will have no license to pay.
3. Give your wife $2 to buy a gallon of whiskey, and remember there are 96 drinks in a gallon.
4. Buy your drinks from no one but your wife, and by the time the first gallon is gone she will have $7.60 to put in the bank and $2 to start in business again.
5. Should you live ten years and continue to buy booze from her then die with snakes in your boots, she will have money to bury you respectably, educate your children, buy a house and lot, then marry a decent man and quit thinking about you.

GERARD GIVEN GERMAN REPLY

Wilson to Act at Once if Unfavorable.

SLIGHT HOPE OF AGREEMENT

Cabled Forecasts of Contents Made Bad Impression on the President. Germany Stands Firm as to Treating Armed Liners as Warships—Trouble Feared in Berlin.

Washington, May 5.—The situation in regard to the continuance of diplomatic relations with Germany is described as "critical." Berlin will not yield unconditionally to President Wilson's demand that she declare and effect an immediate abandonment of her present methods of submarine warfare.

Ambassador Gerard at Berlin has sent a forecast of the German reply, and although he regards it as favorable it is so involved and indefinite that neither the president nor Secretary of State Lansing was able to form a clear conception of what Germany's position really is. This in itself has made an unfavorable impression on the president, who, it is understood, insists on definite and unequivocal assurance that the submarine menace to noncombatants immediately cease.

According to forecasts that have reached Washington, the imperial government apparently stands firm in the determination to treat armed liners as warships. Germany also makes its restrictions on submarine operations dependent on concessions by the United States, but what these concessions are is not clear. Above all it is not yet known whether Germany will hold its submarine operations in abeyance pending discussion of conditions to which it desires the United States to assent.

President Awaits Note.

Under the circumstances President Wilson is suspending judgment until he receives the official text of the German note. Its wording will determine whether or not a diplomatic break is to follow. There is every indication that the president will act without delay if he finds that the worst fears are realized—namely, that the German reply is vague, noncommittal and conditional.

The only hopeful sign so far received is the indication that Germany has agreed to conduct her submarine campaign in the war zone on a cruiser basis provided that the United States assents to Germany's proposals submitted for consideration. It is pointed out that if Germany puts these new orders into effect at once as a means of starting the proposed discussions the crisis might be averted by Germany's compliance with President Wilson's basic demand. Mr. Gerard's message indicates that this may be done. But there is nothing definite even on this all important point.

Secretary Lansing said that Mr. Gerard's dispatch was so confusing that it was impossible for him to say what it meant. He did not know whether to regard it as favorable or otherwise. The same information came from the White House.

Fear Trouble in Berlin.

Reports reached the White House and the state department from Berlin that the imperial government feared a political upheaval in Berlin following the publication of "Germany's concessions" to the United States. But even this did not dispel the feeling of pessimism that has followed Mr. Gerard's cable.

The president, it is explained, is in no mood further to ask for interpretations of what Germany's reply means or to discuss conditions set forth by it. There is no minimizing the fact that the situation has reached a dangerous point. The main hope left is that the official text will not make Germany's ceding to the president's basic demand dependent on the involved conditions which are contained in the German note.

President Wilson, therefore, attaches the greatest importance to the exact language of the German note, which refers to modification of the German admiralty order of Feb. 4. The wording of the text on this point probably will decide whether a diplomatic break is to be averted.

In the face of the indefinite official information concerning Germany's reply the statement was made in authoritative circles that President Wilson will immediately reject any reply which does not meet his demand that the submarine menace to noncombatants' lives cease from now on.

"TOMORROW"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

Text: "And He Said Tomorrow."—Exodus 18:10.

About two hundred years before these words were spoken Jacob went with his family down into Egypt because they had a famine up in Palestine. During this time they had become a great race of people, but they were slaves toiling under the burning rays of Egypt's sun and God sent Moses down to Pharaoh, to say to him that Jehovah, the God of the Hebrews, wanted him to let the people of Israel go.

And Pharaoh said: "Who is this Jehovah? Who is this God of the Hebrews that I should obey his voice and release my slaves? I know Ra, the hawk-headed God; I know Osiris, and I know Isis and I know Apis, the sacred bull, but who is this Jehovah that I should hearken unto him? These people are my slaves and I will not let them go." And then God said to Moses: "Stretch out your rod over the river and over the ponds," and Moses stretched out his rod as God commanded, and frogs came up and covered the face of the land of Egypt. Now a frog is not such a bad sort of thing in his own way, but when he gets in your way, it is altogether another matter and if the frogs were only content to croak away in the frog pond, his frogship might be endured, but when he comes uninvited into your home, gets onto your chair just as you are going to sit down, hops into bed with you, gets into the oven and is baked up in the bread, he becomes quite an unwelcome visitor. And so Pharaoh called for Moses and said: "Entreat the Lord to take away these frogs and I will let your people go." And Moses said: "When? When shall I ask God for this thing and when will you do the thing God wants you to do?" And strange to say, Pharaoh said: "Tomorrow."

Would Wait Another Day.

The marginal reading says "Against tomorrow," and we'd like to have enough respect for Pharaoh's good sense to think that he meant "before tomorrow" and that he'd like to get rid of these frogs as soon as possible, but the Hebrew will only allow one meaning, and that is that Pharaoh said he'd wait another day. Just why, we do not know. One theory is that he thought it would take Moses that long to intercede with this Hebrew God, just as it did the Egyptian to intercede with their gods. But what is more probable is that Pharaoh thought that possibly after all this seeming miracle of frogs was only some natural phenomenon and if he'd wait awhile some favorable wind would come along and sweep them out of the land and then he wouldn't have to obey the voice of this Hebrew God and lose his slaves. And so he said: "Tomorrow."

Procrastination has been called the thief of time, but it's more than that. It robs heaven of its fairest jewels and makes hell the high capital of lost, immortal souls. Once let the devil rock you to slep in the cradle of tomorrow and you'll not need your nurse to wake you up in perdition.

Go to the confines of the lost world tonight and talk with those who are there—bitten with remorse and stung by the fanged hounds of hell. Ask them why they are there? Say to them: "Did you not know there was a hell to shun and a heaven to gain? Did you not know there was a God to pardon and a Christ to save?" and they will say: "Yes, we knew it all too well—we heard it over and over again, but we put it off—we put it off, and we missed it at last."

I want to beseech you to end the struggle and to let God have His way with you.

"Well," says one, "I'm going to wait until I get better." Well, that's better than some people talk, who think they're good enough without Christ. You admit then the need of being better, but you make a mistake when you think you can make yourself better without Christ. Sin is a disease of your soul and there is no hope of recovery apart from the remedy which God has provided for it. You might as well have the smallpox and say you will not call for the doctor until you find yourself growing better. Yes, you might a thousand times better say that, for it is possible to convalesce from a bodily disease without the help of a physician, but when sin has touched the soul there is no way that you can help yourself; but there is a great physician who has the remedy that will do it.

Came to Call Sinners.

You say you are not good enough to be saved; and I quite agree with you, and you never will be. Jesus never called any man to receive Him because that man was good. He says: "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance," and all the good that you might do and all the character you might build up could never atone for your past. And just because you feel the need of being better is all the more reason why you should be led to let Christ clean up your past and help you on to victory in the days to come. Listen, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as wool, and though they be red like crimson, they shall be white as snow." God wants you just as you are.

I have read of an artist who desired a picture of the most wretched being he could find, and when he found perhaps the most miserable being of the street he offered him a sovereign if he would come the following day to his studio for a picture. Thinking to command himself he cleaned himself as best he could and promptly at the moment appeared, and when the artist saw him, he said: "Oh, sir, you've spoiled it all; I wanted you just as you were."

God wants you just that way; and I know you will say tonight:

"Just as I am and waiting not,
To rid my soul of one dark blot;
To Thee whose blood can cleanse each spot,
Oh, Lamb of God, I come—I come."

Christ will receive you; He'll forgive the past; He'll make you strong in the coming years and He'll stand for you in the day of judgment. Why do you wait, my brother?

"Well," says another, "I'm going to wait until I understand more about it." You say there's so much about God and the Bible and the Christian faith you can't understand. Well, you little, puny, pigmy, circumscribed, finite-headed soul, of course you can't. You say you can't understand the Bible. One reason you can't understand it, is because you're too contemptibly lazy to study it. But even if you did study it you'd likely find some things in it a little beyond you. Your skull might hold the biggest brain of the generation and yet you wouldn't be quite as smart as God. How much do you want to understand? I was reading about a fly the other day.

Do you know how many legs a fly has? Do you know about a fly's marvelous feet? Do you know they have two thousand bowed hairs by which they can roost on the ceiling upside down and never fall off? Do you know that a fly has 8,000 eyes, making 4,000 perfectly formed lenses, each one of which is a prism so absolutely perfect that photographs have been taken through them? What do you want to fuss with God for about things you don't know, and when you don't know any more about a fly than you do? You say that's wonderful. But it's not so wonderful.

Asked to Believe.

There's much in both the material world and in the spiritual that we can not understand because it transcends human reason, and we are asked to believe it. But you never have been asked to believe anything in either the material or the spiritual realm that can be shown to contradict human reason. There's a difference between transcending and contradicting reason. If you ask me to believe what I can show you contradicts reason, it will be in order for you to go back and sit down.

Sometimes some ecclesiastical dignitary will come out in a long coat and in a white tie and gold spectacles and read for an hour an essay on some abstract theme he don't know anything about and people call him a philosopher. I don't, I call him a foolosopher when he palms off that sort of stuff for a sermon. I've read a line or two myself and when I run across a little mystery, just because I know that as the heavens are higher than the earth so are God's ways and God's thoughts higher than mine, I am not going to make shipwreck of my faith because there are in the Bible and out of it some things I can't understand.

Sixty-five years ago there were eighty-four scientific theories on record, everyone of which said the Bible couldn't be true. But today there is not a scientist in the world who will lend his name to a single one of them. Talk about science! What is it! Nothing but the history of discarded theories! I'm for the science but not when it knocks the word of God. Science has come pretty much to itself in these last days and is pretty much one with the Bible, but if the time ever comes again when science says one thing and the Bible says another, I'm going to stick to the Word of God and let science with all her votaries go plumb to perdition.

"Well," says another, "I am going to wait till I have the right kind of feeling." Listen, friend. Of all senseless reasons for not coming to Christ, that is the worst. The night bell rang one night in winter, but the doctor said, "I don't feel like getting out of this warm bed and going through the cold to minister to the calling patient," and so he lay still and let his patient die. A sick man once said, "I don't feel as if this medicine will do me any good," and so he fell back on his pillow and died. A man once benumbed with the cold said he did not feel like using his limbs to run a bit and so he sat still in the sleigh and froze to death. A man once said he did not feel like working and so both he and his family starved. But these people were all rational compared with you. What kind of feeling would you like to have before you begin to do the will of God? Some people think they ought to feel very happy and others think they ought to feel very miserable.

Joy, Fruit of the Spirit.

Feeling is not the thing to begin with. It comes when you begin to do the will of God. The fruit of the Spirit is joy and peace and all that's good. The apple is not the cause of the tree, but the tree itself, its spirit and its life is the cause of the apple; and so you can never have the fruit of the Spirit until the Spirit of God works in you and through you, and this He can never do until you yield yourself to Him.

Suppose you were to drive along the highway some wintry morning and find a man sitting on a log, shivering in his shirt sleeves with an axe leaning by his side, and you say to him, "What are you doing, my friend?" And he says to you, "I came out here to cut down that big tree there." And you say, "Well, why don't you go at it? What are you waiting for?" and he says, "I'm waiting to get warmed up first." You would say to him, "Why, man, you will freeze to death sitting there; get up and go to work and as you begin to chop you'll begin to feel warm; your blood will begin to flow and you'll soon begin to sweat." But he says to you, "No, sir, I want to get warmed up first, and I'm not going to hit a lick until I do." Now, what are you going to do with a fellow like that?

Look at it how you will, my friend, feeling is not the thing to begin with. I suppose everyone here is willing to admit that you are under obligation to God. Well, suppose you are under obligation and in debt to your grocery keeper? Don't you pay that debt unless you feel like it? Of course, you do, if you are an honest man. You pay your debts whether you feel like it or not.

Again, I suppose every one here is willing to admit that you have sinned against God and are in need of His pardon. Suppose then you find yourself in the penitentiary for some offense and the governor comes and presents you with a pardon; must you go back into your cell for a week and work yourself up into some great state of joy or work yourself down into some sort of misery before the pardon is of any value to you? Certainly not! The pardon is yours and you are a free man if you will take it. No, friends, it's not the feeling; it's the grace of God and the obligation to man. "Do you mean to say" said a lawyer one day, "that I can become a Christian altogether on the basis of principle?" and I said, "I mean to say, there is no other way you can become a Christian." "Then," said he, "I'll begin now"; and he is an earnest, splendid Christian man today.

Why Wait?

Why do you wait, dear brother?

"Well," says one, "I am going to wait till I think I can live up to it." Well, then you'll wait a long time. No one ever has lived up to it but Christ Himself. It may be that you will not be the best Christian that ever lived, but you would be a thousand times better as a Christian than you now think you would. But the fine thing about it is, that if you will give yourself to Him and do the best you can for Him while you live, He'll make up for what you lack when you die.

But someone else says, "I'm afraid I can't hold out."

Can't hold out. You've been holding out now, some of you, until there's only another step between you and hell. You say you can't hold out. Well, let's look at that for a minute.

Well, I think I would rather start and fall than to stand before God in the last day and be compelled to tell Him I had never started at all.

Then again, if you start you have at least one chance of holding out, and if the whole thing is a matter of chance, common sense would teach you to take the one chance rather than not to start and have no chance at all. If you never undertook things until you knew how you were coming out, the world would call you cowardly and foolish and have no use for you.

But what I want you to see now, is that there isn't any chance about it. You must understand God a little better. Do you remember—no, you don't remember, but mother does—when you were learning to walk? She sat on one side of the room and said "Come!" and you started, but halfway across you went down. Now, did your mother become angry and say, "You're no child of mine any more; you started to walk and fell down, and I disown you and turn you out of the house?" No, but she ran and picked you up, kissed away the hurt, and helped you on your way.

God Better than Best Mother.

That's just like God, only God is better, kinder, more loving and more true than the best mother earth ever knew.

Friend, get this great truth! You can't fail to be a Christian, if you try. Now, don't misunderstand me; you don't try to be a Christian. You become a Christian.

Sister, when you were a younger woman, and some young man asked you to be his wife, you didn't say, "I'll try to be your wife," did you? No, but you said, "Yes, I will"; and now that you have become his wife, I trust that you are trying to be a good wife. It's just like that in giving yourself to God. You become a Christian; and now that you are a Christian, I trust you are trying to be a good one. And as long as you try, God will never let you go and never lose your soul. I meet a good many people who have forgotten their vows and are back in the world, and I ask them what is the matter, and they tell me they started, but that they didn't hold out. Now, just by way of illustration, suppose I should start to walk home from this meeting and after a while I should slip and fall, and you came along a few hours later and found me still lying there. You would say, "Why, Mr. Biederwolf, what are you doing lying here on the sidewalks of Plainfield?" Suppose I would say to you, "Well, I started to walk down your streets and I got along pretty well for six squares, but I slipped and fell, and I guess I won't try it any more; I'll just lie here and let it go." What would you think of me? Well, you'd think I struck my head when I lit. But that's just the way some people act about their Christian experience. You find them back-slidden, wandering from God, and living in sin, and you say, "What's the matter? What's gone wrong?" and they say to you, "Well, I started in the Christian life and I got along pretty well, I did first rate for about nine months or a year and a half, but I slipped and fell and I got discouraged and just gave up and let it go." Now what ought such a one to do under these circumstances? Just exactly what you would exect me to do if you found me lying on your sidewalk; get up and go on. And if you fall again, what are you going to do; lie there? No, get up, let God forgive you, and let Him pour new strength in your soul and go on, and if you fall again, get up and go on, and go on, and you can't fall, and God never will forsake you; and if you must stumble—although you need not—you'll get stronger as you go—but if one must stumble, I'd rather stumble on and stumble forward into heaven at last, than to stumble backwards into hell. You can't fail if you try; and man, woman, if you've got the least desire to become a Christian tonight, the way is clear and plain for you if you'll start and begin to work in it, and if you do not start and become a Christian this night, it will simply be because you do not want to.

And I want to give now two brief reasons why you should say "Today" and not "Tomorrow."

'andnot"Toorm'ow.' sthao a tay

The Honorable Way.

1. You ought to say "Today"; you ought to say "Now"—because it's the only way to be honorable with God. You are under obligations to God and you ought to meet that obligation just as soon as you possibly can and not try to satisfy God by telling Him you'll meet it some other time. That's mean in business, but in all frankness, in this matter I think it is the most contemptible thought that ever stirred a human breast. If a man were to come into your store and contract a debt and then were he to come to you some time later and say "I acknowledge the obligations; the debt is mine, for I made it, and I can pay it, I am able to pay it, but I guess I won't pay it now; I'll pay you next month"; and when the month is expired, he would come and say the same thing. "Oh, yes, the debt is all right, I acknowledge it, and I can pay you; but I guess I'll not pay you, I'll pay you next month"; and when the next month came, if he were to come again and say, "Oh, yes I can pay you, I'll pay you next month," and again, if he were to come and again and again, in a way like that, you would not trust that man for another dollar as long as you lived.

Now, I want you to deal as honorably with God as you expect other people to deal with you, and you will if you are a thoroughly honest man or woman.

2. The second reason I'll put in the words of Scripture. Proverbs, 27: 1, "Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." It may bring forth death. There are some sitting here who have been putting off this decision from day to day and if you give an honest testimony tonight you would say, "It seems to be growing harder as I grow older."

If you are here tonight and past twenty, your chances of being saved are growing very small indeed. If you are past forty, your chances are almost as eighty thousand to one against you. If you are past sixty and stall outside of the kingdom of Christ, you are almost as good as doomed tonight; yet God can save you, and I pray God that you may arise yourself and act before it is eternally too late. How many of you will say, "Pray for me tonight! I do have a desire to be saved. I do want to know Christ and I want you to pray for me now!"

Somerville was well represented last night, and although their favorite hymn was not in the book which is being used at the Tabernacle, "Mac" and the choir sang one which was in the book and which pleased Somerville just as well.

The Commercial Travelers were there, too. Dr. Biederwolf praised these men who are known as "Gideons," because they had been instrumental in changing the character and standard of the commercial travelers of today.

The biggest delegation last night was the business women of Plainfield, led by Mrs. Brake, and a big placard with the words "Plainfield Business Women for Christ"; and they certainly deserved the big cheer which was given them.

Dr. Biederwolf welcomed them heartily, saying in part that the girls deserved credit for the courteous way with which they met the selfish purchaser, especially when you go into a store five minutes before closing time have the girl get down all the goods around her, keeping her fifteen minutes over closing time and then decide to buy a spool of Clarke's No. 8 O. N. J.

Their favorite song was "Honey in the Rock," and they sang the chorus so well that "Mac" had them sing the whole song, accompanied by the choir on the choruses, which were made effective by humming and whistling.

After the choir had sung "Wounded for our Transgression," the employed women cheered so that everyone sang "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" as an encore.

The National Male Quartet sang "Shall I Crucify My Saviour"

Delegations for tonight will be the postoffice employes of Plainfield and vicinity; the city school teachers, and the ministers from Trenton.

Saturday is Community Day, everybody come. Bring your sandwich luncheon. Coffee and ice-cream will be served at the Tabernacle. The preaching service at 11 a. m. Luncheon at 12 p. m. From 2 to 3 p. m. is Chautauqua hour, in charge of Mr. McEwan. There will be special features during this time, and 3 o'clock is the preaching service. Community Day is one of the biggest days of the campaign, and everyone is a factor in the success of this occasion.

When Dr. Biederwolf offered the invitation last night, the employed women made good their slogan of "Plainfield Business Women for Christ," and nearly everyone walked the sawdust trail for Christ.

As a climax to the song service, the choir sang "Lo, Jesus Comes."

Dr. Zelie read the Scripture from the eighth chapter of Exodus.

"Mac" sang, "Thou Remainest, Christ, my Lord."

Dr. Biederwolf's sermon last night was taken from the Scripture reading, "And he said tomorrow."

BOY SCOUT COUNCIL PLANS DEMONSTRATION

Special Service to Be Held at the Tabernacle Friday Night, May 12.

George E. Hall, chairman of the finance committee, and William D. Murray, chairman of the executive committee of the Biederwolf evangelistic campaign, following a special meeting last night announced that at the revival meeting next Friday night at the Tabernacle, those present would be given an opportunity to help carry on the work started by Dr. Biederwolf among the scouts and boys who want to be scouts after their conversion in the meetings. The aims and purposes of the Scout Council will be outlined at that time.

One of the biggest demonstrations in the history of the scout movement is scheduled for that night, when the boys expect to break all records. Thus far 68 per cent. of the Plainfield scouts have "hit the trail." Simultaneously with the deliberations of the officers of the Biederwolf campaign a special meeting was held at the home of President Theodore G. Davis, of the Scout Council, in Irving place, when Chairman Edward Harding made his report regarding the scout camps in New Brunswick and Montclair.

Camp committees named last night are: Cook, dishes and cots, W. O. Smith; food supply, menus and cooking, Theodore G. Davis, whose experience in the George Junior Republic qualifies him for the place; sanitation, routine and camp management, Edward Harding, whose home with that of Louis H. Hosmer, is in close proximity to the camp.

The Scout Council will require about $600 with which to carry on this work and a plea for subscriptions to the fund is now being made in the hope that all who are interested in scout work will be induced to help in the movement. The council plans to introduce a number of features at the camp that will insure training in line with the scout motto, "Be Prepared." These plans provide for a camp conducted on military lines in a constructive sense, tabooing firearms and encouraging the work of first aid, succor of the helpless, bridge building, etc.

It is the plan of those who are working for this camp to make it possible for the employed boy to have some of the benefits of the camp life. Those who want to put in full periods of time at the camp, whether it be two, three, four, five, six or seven days, should find at the Plainfield Boy Scout Camp an ideal equipment for all the camp enjoyments, including swimming, spring board and tower diving, through the courtesy of Mr. Hosmer directly opposite the camp.

At the Boy Scout Council meeting at the Public Library Monday night details for raising the $600 will be discussed. All members of the council are urged to attend. It is hoped to open the camp June 1. Plans are underway for a scout demonstration of considerable proportions in the near future and the members of the council number 35, including Mayor Leighton Calkins, of this city, and Mayor W. L. Smalley, of the borough, will have an important part in it. Every member of the council is urged to meet the scout executive and commissioner Monday night.

He was of counsel in the defense of Jack Rose, informer at the trials of Charles Becker, the New York police lieutenant who was executed for the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

TRIAL OF FAY NOW NEARING ITS CLOSE

German Lieutenant Prodded by District Attorney.

New York, May 5.—The jurors who for more than a week have been listening to stories about the invention of a high explosive mine by Robert Fay, former lieutenant in the German army, will soon have to decide the question whether Fay and his two alleged co-conspirators, Walter Scholz and Paul Daeche, are guilty of plotting to blow up munition carrying ships.

The jurors had an opportunity to listen to all three defendants and make a study of them on the witness stand. Fay fell into the merciless hands of John C. Knox, assistant United States district attorney. Mr. Knox had pointed questions for Fay on various phases of the testimony he had given so voluubly, and on many occasions he drove the lieutenant into a corner.

Fay declined to answer several questions, giving as his reason his desire to protect persons who if mentioned in connection with the purchase of explosives might have suspicion thrown upon them. He characterized the confessions which he made to Chief William J. Flynn of the secret service and Captain Thomas J. Tunney of the local police department as "packs of lies." He said he just wished to satisfy his captors.

Fay said that after his arrest the police refused to give him anything. That he characterized, with a smile, as "the vacuum treatment," and he said he talked because he wished to get something to eat, although he had testified that Captain Tunney had ordered food for him immediately.

Miss Carrie J. Debele has returned to her home in Philadelphia after a visit in this borough with her sister, Mrs. Martin Bowman.

SPRAINED HER WRIST.

While roller skating along North avenue yesterday forenoon Ruth Shively, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Shively, fell on the sidewalk and sprained her right wrist. She was unable to go to school today.

FRACTURES HIS LEG.

Frank Jaruszewski, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jaruszewski, of 722 Bound Brook road, last evening had his leg broken when a motorcycle fell on him. The motorcycle had been left standing at the side of the Bee Hive store on North avenue by its owner, who went into the store to make a purchase. When the machine fell on him the lad yelled with pain, and Abe Victorson, proprietor of the Bee Hive, came running out and carried him in his store. Dr. Cooley was immediately summoned, and, after bandaging the limb, he took the lad home in his automobile.

WISHES STORY CORRECTED.

Herman Beiler wishes to deny the story that he was attacked and bitten by a dog in the yard of Mr. Erlich, it being stated that the animal rushed at him, and implying that it was running at large. Mr. Beiler says that the dog attacked him in the kitchen of Mr. Erlich's home, it having made its escape in some way from the cellar.

EX-U. S. ENVOY HELD AS REBEL

British Arrest James M. Sullivan of New York.

PAGE TAKES UP THE CASE

Former Diplomat Is In British Jail Charged With Aiding Revolt—Government Kept Matter Secret Until Wife Appealed to Ambassador—Connolly Was Not Shot.

London, May 5.—Former United States Minister to Santo Domingo James M. Sullivan was arrested in Dublin in connection with the Sinn Fein revolt and was at once transported to England, where he is now held.

The arrest of the American ex-diplomat had been kept a secret by the authorities, but the news became known through a letter from Mrs. Sullivan to Ambassador Page asking the latter to intercede in her husband's behalf.

The American ambassador promptly communicated with the foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey. Details of the charge on which Sullivan is held and other circumstances regarding his arrest are unknown. At the foreign office it was explained that Major General Sir John Maxwell, commander of the military forces in Ireland, must be communicated with before any statement concerning Mr. Sullivan's case could be made.

A Statement Next Week.

Premier Asquith announced in the house of commons that the government would make a statement on the causes of the Irish revolt next week. At present, he pointed out, it was not desirable to say anything more. He assured the house that all appropriate steps were taken to deal with the Irish rebellion and its instigators.

King George has sent the following telegram to Major General Sir John Maxwell, commanding officer in Ireland:

Now that the recent lamentable outbreak has been finally quelled I wish to express to the gallant troops of Ireland, to the Royal Irish constabulary and the Dublin metropolitan police by deep sense of the whole hearted devotion to duty and the spirit of self sacrifice with which throughout they acted. GEORGE R. I.

Sir Edward Carson, who stood loyally by the government throughout the rebellion, took occasion to fire his first hot shot at the prime minister in connection with the revolt. Addressing a Unionist meeting, the Ulsterite leader said:

"The Irish rebellion occurred through misjudgment and negligence. Premier Asquith used the bravery of the troops for covering the negligence and incompetence of his own colleagues."

Sniping Continues In Dublin.

Dispatches from Dublin say that individual sniping continues in the Irish capital. There were some brisk disturbances in the Harcourt street district. Military restrictions have been tightened. Some of the thoroughfares are blocked by troops, and nobody is allowed to pass without a permit.

Business in Dublin is still largely paralyzed. The question as to how the damage is to be covered is being discussed between the military and civil authorities. There seems to be a general assumption, dispatches say, that the English taxpayers will foot the bill.

Another topic of discussion is the surrender of arms. Nobody expects great results of the attempt to disarm the Sinn Feiners and the Larkinites. Many hold a general disarming of all volunteers in the country as necessary.

Search of the house tops and empty houses increases the casualty list daily. Many dead snipers are being found, but the majority of bodies are those of men, women and children who were hit while watching the fighting.

Sir Matthew Nathan has resigned as undersecretary to the chief secretary of Ireland, following the example of his superior, Augustine Birrell. Sir Robert Chalmers, former governor of Ceylon, will succeed him temporarily.

It developed that James Connolly, who was the "commander in chief" of the rebellion, was not, as had been announced, executed. Connolly is in prison, severely wounded. Through a misunderstanding of Premier Asquith's announcement it was said that he was among those shot to death upon being convicted of treason. Those actually executed were Patrick H. Pearse, Thomas J. Clarke and Thomas MacDonagh.

Nothing was given out officially as to the fate that awaits Connolly after he has sufficiently recovered to be tried.

U. S. ARMY SCOUT KILLED.

Body of P. H. Holly Found Near Villistas' Haunts.

Headquarters Punitive Expedition, Near Namiquipa, Mexico, via Radio to Columbus, N. M., May 5.—P. H. Holly, a resident of El Paso, Tex., who formerly lived at Buhillos, Mexico, where he operated a large cattle ranch and farm, and who has been acting as scout for the American forces under General Pershing, was killed while looking for signs of Villistas in the vicinity of Rubio, about forty miles south of this camp and twenty-five miles northeast of San Antonio.

His body was found by a detachment in search of him when it was discovered he was overdue. It is believed that Holly was a victim of a small band of Villistas.

Probably So.

"No, Harold," said the sweet young thing after listening to his proposal. "I am very sorry if you have misunderstood my feelings toward you, but I can never be anything but a sister to you."

"Oh, that's it, is it?" said Harold as he dusted off the knees of his trousers. "Then I suppose that sissyfied simp I saw you flirting with at the dance last night is my future brother-in-law."—Pittsburgh Press.

Sir Roger Casement, who was captured by British authorities while attempting to land arms from Germany on the Irish coast, will probably meet the fate of Pearse, Clark and MacDonagh, signatories of Ireland's declaration of independence.

TWO BADLY HURT IN AEROPLANE FALL

Thompson and Blakeley Nearly Meet Death.

Garden City, N. Y., May 5.—De Lloyd Thompson, the aviator and preparedness advocate who recently "bombarded" New York and Washington from the sky, and Harold W. Blakeley, aviation instructor for the Sloane Aeroplane company, fell 600 feet at the aviation field here.

Both were so severely injured they were taken to the Nassau County hospital, and the machine in which they were riding, a big Sloane tractor biplane, owned by the New York national guard and used for training military aviators, was badly smashed. Thompson's left leg above the ankle was fractured, and Blakeley, it is thought, may have suffered internal injuries.

Thompson had accompanied several friends to the field to watch the flights when it was arranged that Blakeley should take him for a ride in the big Sloane. Thompson, one of the best aviators now in this country, uses the Nieuport control on his machine. The national guard machine has the Deperdussin control, totally different in system. Thompson, it is thought, was eager to learn the other system and went up.

Before any one really realized what was happening the Sloane, weighing nearly 3,000 pounds and with its propeller hauling it along at a speed of eighty miles an hour, smashed nose first into the turf a half mile south of the hangar whence it started.

Both men were found buried under a pile of wreckage.

DEFENSE PARADE CUT DOWN

More Than 50,000 Marchers Have Had to Be Eliminated.

New York, May 5.—It was announced at the headquarters of the citizens' preparedness parade that 50,000 marchers have had to be eliminated. The figures indicate now that there will be about 150,000 in line on May 13. If any more were allowed to march the parade would extend into the early hours of May 14.

The cost of the parade is estimated at $75,000. The trades to be represented in it will bear almost all of this expense.

Seven More Lusitania Suits.

New York, May 5.—Preliminary notice was filed in the United States district court of seven more damage suits to be filed against the Cunard Steamship Company, Ltd., as a result of the Lusitania disaster. This brings the number of Lusitania actions filed or to be filed up to thirteen.

Plenty Left.

When Oscar Hammerstein was building his London opera house a head carpenter came to him one day with the information that a mechanic had just had two fingers cut off by a circular saw.

"Don't bother me!" shouted Hammerstein. "Don't bother me! Hasn't he eight fingers left?"—Saturday Evening Post.

RED MEN ARE FOR BIG ARMY AND NAVY

State Convention Adopts Resolution of Judge William Newcorn.

Declaring for the perpetuation of American institutions, both past and present, the Improved Order of Red Men, in State convention in Newark, yesterday, passed a resolution strongly advocating an adequate army and navy to uphold the dignity of American citizens at home and abroad. The resolution was introduced by Judge William Newcorn, of Plainfield, and it was adopted by unanimous vote of the 1,000 delegates attending the New Jersey convention.

The resolution follows:

Whereas, The Improved Order of Red Men is a distinctive American fraternal organization, its membership comprising American citizenship of every nationality and origin and one of its fundamental principles, in addition to its fraternal features, being the perpetuation of American institutions both past and present.

Therefore, Resolved: That the Great Council of New Jersey, in Great Sun session assembled, being composed of one thousand representatives of the 82,000 members of the Order in this State, pledges its aid and support to the Government of the United States in upholding the dignity and integrity of the American citizens, whether at home or abroad, and in the maintenance of the high, humane ideals that American citizenship represents to its citizens and to the world at large, and be it further

Resolved: That we favor the enactment of such legislation as will provide an adequate army and navy and such other armament as will insure the protection of life and property at home, the respect of American citizenship and rights in every portion of the world and the enforcement of the Monroe Doctrine, and

Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Senators and Representatives of New Jersey in the Congress of the United States.

SAM DAWSON IN TOWN YEP! CIRCUS IS COMING

Cook and Wilson Wild Animal Show to Be Here Two Weeks From Today.

"Colonel" Sam Dawson, one of the best-known veteran circus advance agents in the United States, is in this city today in charge of the advance car of the Cook and Wilson wild animal circus, which shows here on Friday, May 19. Mr. Dawson has been in this city a number of times before, ahead of different shows, and has a number of acquaintances here. The show which he is advertising is a new one, with its winter quarters at Trenton, and is said to have pleased audiences in all the cities in which it has exhibited.

The circus is primarily a wild animal exhibit, but there are a number of feature circus acts as well. The principal feature is a group of all-forest-bred lions, every one of which was not only born in the jungle, but also evaded capture until they had almost reached their maximum growth. It is a well-known fact that it is a comparatively easy matter to train animals when they are taken in hand by skillful trainers while they are still young, and that the difficulty of educating wild beasts increases with their age. Notwithstanding this fact, the Cook and Wilson group of forest-bred lions is said to present the most sensational act of its kind ever seen in a wild animal circus. Cleverly as they have been trained, it would be quite unsafe to exhibit these lions on an open stage, and consequently they are presented in a great steel, safety-first arena, in which they can be seen to advantage with absolutely no danger to the audience.

The Cook and Wilson lions, which comprise the only group of actually forest-bred lions in the United States, are in worthy company. Scores of other remarkably trained wild beasts, schools of educated horses and ponies, herds of elephants and other entertaining animals, and a modern circus performance, with plenty of merriment-creating clowns, are offered for the wonderment and enjoyment of the amusement-loving.

EX-RECORDER HENRY BUNDY DROPS DEAD IN LINDEN

Henry Bundy, former recorder of Linden, and well known to many Plainfield people, dropped dead while at business in his real estate office in Wood avenue, near the Pennsylvania Railroad station, that place, about 10:30 Wednesday morning. Although he was eighty-six years old, Mr. Bundy had been in comparatively good health until this week, when he complained of not feeling well.

Mr. Bundy was born in Jersey City and made that place his home until he came to Linden. Before coming to the latter place, Mr. Bundy served as justice of the peace in Jersey City for fifteen years and had the distinction of not having any one of his cases appealed to a higher court. One son, Herbert Bundy, survives the deceased.

New Blouses in White Sale

Good morning! says this fresh, piquant blouse of batiste with hemstitching where one might expect seams.

A saucy pointed embroidery in green or another color borders the sailor collar and comes down the front, thus forming a background for white crochet buttons.

Priced surprisingly—only $2.50.

Three kinds of blouses at $5.75 are equally uncommon.

One is of voile—with rippling ruffles edged with creamy Valenciennes and tied with black ribbon.

Another of crepe de chine with sailor collar.

The third model at $5.75 is of crepe Georgette, with a collar that started to be a Pierrot frill and resolved itself into a ruffle that reaches half way to the waist. A colored edging on the frill is decidedly Paris-like.

Irish lace is being revived—as notice the Irish picot edge on another crepe Georgette blouse at $6.75.

All are new and specially prepared for this half yearly sale.

Third floor, Old Building.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Old Trold Chieftain Chooses His Bride.

Chuckled Until He Nearly Choked.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

"DON'T forget our story, daddy!" cried Jack and Evelyn.

"'Have you no more daughters?' an old Trold asked his host, the elf king, who was giving a grand party.

"'The sixth comes before the seventh,' said the king, who could count. And forth came his sixth daughter.

"'I can only tell the truth,' said she. 'Nobody loves me, and I am busy enough making my own shroud.' At last the seventh daughter came.

"'I can tell as many stories as I want to,' said she.

"'Here are my five fingers. Tell me a story for each!' cried the old Trold.

"The elf maiden took hold of his wrist, and he chuckled and laughed till he nearly choked. When she came to his fourth finger, which had a gold ring on it, the Trold said: 'Hold fast what you've got. The hand is yours. I will have you for my wife.'

"But the elf maiden said that stories about Guldbrand, the fourth finger and Peter Playman, the fifth, had not yet been told.

"'Never mind; they will last till winter. Then you shall tell us about fairy frosts and sparkling moonshine. Nobody tells stories up where I live. So we will sit where pine logs blaze, where mountain sprites dwell and where salmon leap in the waterfalls, and you shall listen to the songs they sing. Believe me, we shall lead a merry life there in old Norway! But where are the lads?'

"All this time his sons had been running about in the meadows blowing out the will-o'-the-wisps who had come to make a torchlight procession.

"'Why are you two gadding about?' asked the old Trold. 'I have taken a mother for you. Now you take the aunt!'

"This aunt was the king's old maid housekeeper. So the lads said they had no wish to marry. They drank to their father's health and tipped up their glasses to show they were empty. Then they pulled off their boots and went to sleep on the table to show they were quite at home. But the old Trold danced about the room with his bride and exchanged boots with her, which is grander than exchanging rings.

"'There's the cock crowing!' cried the old maid housekeeper. 'Now we must close the shutters so the sun won't burn us up.' So the elf hill closed up. But the lizards went on running up and down tree trunks, saying to each other, 'How much I liked the old Trold!'

"'I liked the boys better,' said the earthworm. But then he couldn't see, poor creature!" Then daddy gave the children a good night kiss.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Nell Morton and Olive Ellson Discuss the Bride.

"Oh, Olive, I have seen the bride," said Nell Morton, coming briskly up the walk one clear autumn afternoon.

"What is she like?" asked Olive, showing great interest. "In our little society every addition is a matter of importance."

"She is very, very pretty; one of those pink and white, golden haired bisque effects that make you think of a china shepherdess, and she is not much bigger than one, either," laughed Nell.

"Do you mean she is one of those helpless little dolls that men put in their homes for playthings and ornaments?" asked Olive.

"I am afraid she would not be very useful," replied Nell, "but style! She certainly will make sleepy old Fairport sit up and take notice."

"From what you say I am afraid she will be rather a misfit in our crowd." There was disappointment in Olive's tone.

"She certainly will be an ornament to our society," laughed Nell, "and she may be quick to pick up useful bits of knowledge about housekeeping. Girls are as carefully shielded from all kinds of useful knowledge nowadays as if work were a malignant disease to which one must not be exposed."

"I am afraid you are right," replied Olive, catching her baby girl and holding her high above her head to the child's great delight. "What trouble it makes, too. When will mothers learn that to fit a girl to take the place in the world that she is likely to fill, is the surest means to make her happy."

"I should think their own experience with men would make them see that the surest way to make men loving and loyal is to make them physically comfortable." Nil chuckled reminiscently. "Poor Dick had a time of it at first. He was so good and patient."

"You were a pretty good housekeeper when you married. Dick had reason to congratulate himself. If all brides had your start there would be no cause for complaint." Olive's tone was decided.

"I had lots to learn. I pity the girl who starts with less knowledge," replied Nell. "However, Mrs. Gordon has a maid that they brought from the city with them, so perhaps she will get along all right. She is superintending the unpacking of the wedding presents in a pale blue silk kimona and lace cap."

"I would hate to have to pin my happiness and comfort to anything as transitory as a maid," sighed Olive. "I have not been 'tied up to one,' as the saying goes, because I could do the work if the maid failed me, but to be helpless and at their mercy—deliver me from that fate!"

"She may be born under a lucky star, and be able to keep a competent maid. There is one thing in her favor: if she knows nothing about housework she will let the maid go her own gait without interference, and they like that," said Nell, rising. "Well, as I am my own cook, I must trot along home and get supper."

"We must call on Mrs. Gordon as soon as they are settled." Olive followed her friend to the door. "I like young Gordon very much. I do hope his marriage will be a success."

"There are so many rocks to founder on," remarked Nell sagely.

"Yes, and incompetence in the homemaker is almost sure to bring shipwreck," replied Olive.

"Let us hope the bride is intelligent enough to see that," said Nell as she ran down the steps.

GERMAN NOTE DEFIANT

were quickly recovered.

Von Bernstorff in Seclusion.

Count Von Bernstorff, German Ambassador to the United States, remained in seclusion in the Ritz Carlton Hotel today, and refused to make any comment on the German note.

Berlin, via wireless to Sayville, L. I., May 5.—The text of the German reply to President Wilson's submarine demands, as transmitted to Ambassador Gerard last night by Foreign Secretary von Jagow, follows:

"The undersigned, on behalf of the Imperial German Government, has the honor to present to his Excellency the Ambassador to the United States Mr. James W. Gerard, the following reply to the note of April 20, regarding the conduct of German submarine warfare.

"The German Government handed over to the proper naval authorities for further investigation evidence concerning the Sussex as communicated by the Government of the United States. Judging by the results that investigation hitherto yielded, the German Government is alive to the possibility that the ship mentioned in the note of April 10 as torpedoed by a German submarine is actually identical with the Sussex.

"The German Government begs to reserve further communications on the matter until certain points are ascertained which are of decisive importance for establishing the facts of the case. Should it turn out that the commander was wrong in assuming the vessel to be a man-of-war, the German Government will not fail to draw the consequences resulting therefrom

"In connection with the case of the Sussex, the Government of the United States made a series of statements, the gist of which is the assertion that the incident is to be considered but one instance of a deliberate method of indiscriminate destruction of vessels of all sorts, nationalities and destinations by German submarine commanders. The German Government must emphatically repudiate the assertion.

"The German Government, however, thinks it of little avail to enter into details in the present stage of affairs, more particularly as the Government of the United States omitted to substantiate the assertion by reference to concrete facts. The German Government will only state that it has imposed far-reaching restraints upon the use of the submarine weapon solely in consideration of neutrals' interests in spite of the fact these restrictions are necessarily of advantage to Germany's enemies.

"No such consideration has ever been shown neutrals by Great Britain and her Allies.

"German submarine forces have had, in fact, orders to conduct the submarine warfare in accordance with general principles of visit, search and destruction of merchant vessels recognized by international law, the sole exception being the conduct of warfare against enemy trade carried on enemy freight ships encountered in the war zone surrounding Great Britain. With regard to these no assurances ever have been given to the Government of the United States. No such assurance was contained in the declaration of February 8, 1916.

Errors Are Unavoidable.

"The German Government cannot admit any doubt that these orders were given and are executed in good faith. They can in no kind of warfare be avoided altogether, and allowances must be made in the conduct of naval warfare against an enemy resorting to all kinds of ruses, whether permissible or illicit.

"But apart from the possibility of errors, naval warfare, just like land warfare, implies unavoidable dangers for neutral persons and goods entering the fighting zone. Even in cases where naval action is confined to ordinary forms of cruiser warfare neutral persons and goods repeatedly come to grief.

Mines Large Cause of Danger.

"The German Government has repeatedly and explicitly pointed out the dangers from mines, as they have led to the loss of numerous ships. The German Government made several proposals to the Government of the United States in order to reduce to the minimum for American travelers and goods the inherent dangers of naval warfare. Unfortunately, the Government of the United States decided not to accept the proposals. Had it accepted, the Government of the United States would have been instrumental in preventing the greater part of the accidents that American citizens have met with meantime. The German Government still stands by its offer to come to an agreement along these lines.

As the German Government repeatedly declared, it cannot dispense with the use of the submarine weapon in the conduct of warfare against enemy trade. The German Government, however, has now decided to make a further concession, adapting methods of submarine war to the interest of neutrals.

In reaching its decision the German Government is actuated by considerations which are above the level of the disputed question.

The German Government attaches no less importance to the sacred principles of humanity than the Government of the United States. It again fully takes into account that both governments for many years co-operated in developing international law in conformity with these principles, the ultimate object of which has always been to confine warfare on sea and land to armed forces of belligerents and safeguard as far as possible noncombatants against the horrors of war.

Britain Ignores All Rules.

But although these considerations are of great weight, they alone would not under present circumstances have determined the attitude of the German Government. For in answer to the appeal by the Government of the United States on behalf of the sacred principles of humanity and international law, the German Government must repeat once more with all emphasis that it was not the German, but the British Government, which ignored all accepted rules of international law and extended this terrible war to the lives and property of noncombatants, having no regard whatever for the interests and rights of neutrals and noncombatants that through this method of warfare have been severely injured.

In self-defense against the illegal conduct of British warfare, while fighting a bitter struggle for national existence, Germany had to resort to the hard, but effective weapon of submarine warfare.

As matters stand, the German Government cannot but reiterate regret that the sentiments of humanity which the United States extends with such fervor to the unhappy victims of submarine warfare are not extended with the same warmth of feeling to many millions of women and children, according to the avowed intention of the British Government, shall be starved, and who, by sufferings, shall force the victorious armies of the central powers into ignominious capitulation.

The German Government, in agreement with the German people, fails to understand this discrimination, all the more as it has repeatedly and explicitly declared itself ready to use the submarine weapon in strict conformity with the rules of international law as recognized before the outbreak of the war if Great Britain likewise was ready to adopt the conduct of warfare to these rules.

Britain Flatly Refused.

Several attempts made by the Government of the United States to prevail upon the British Government to act accordingly failed because of flat refusal on the part of the British Government.

Moreover, Great Britain again and again has violated international law, surpassing all bounds in outraging neutral rights. The latest measure adopted by Great Britain, declaring German bunker coal contraband and establishing conditions under which English bunker coal alone is supplied to neutrals, is nothing but an unheard-of attempt by way of exaction to force neutral tonnage into the service of the British trade war.

The German people know that the government of the United States has the power to confine the war to armed forces of the billigerent countries, in the interest of humanity and maintenance of international law.

Could Have Attained End.

The government of the United States would have been certain of attaining this end had it been determined to insist, against Great Britain, on the incontrovertible rights to freedom of the seas. But, as matters stand, the German people is under the impression that the government of the United Staes, while demanding that Germany, struggling for existence, shall restrain the use of an effective weapon, and while making compliance with these demands a condition for maintenance of relations with Germany, confines itself to protests against illegal methods adopted by Germany's enemies. Moreover, the German people know to what considerable extent its enemies are supplied with all kinds of war material from the United States.

It will, therefore, be understood that the appeal made by the government of the United States to sentiments of humanity and principles of international law cannot, under the circumstances, meet the same hearty response from the German people which such an appeal otherwise always is certain to find here.

If the German government, nevertheless, is resolved to go to the utmost limit of concessions it has been guided not alone by the friendship connecting the two great nations for over one hundred years, but also by the thought of the great doom which threatens the entire civilized world should the cruel and sanguinary war be extended and prolonged.

Germany Offered Peace.

The German government, conscious of Germany's strength, twice within the last few months announced before the world its readiness to make peace on a basis safeguarding Germany's vital interests, thus indicating that it is not Germany's fault if peace is still withheld from the nations of Europe.

The German government feels all the more justified in declaring that responsibility could not be borne before the forum of mankind and in history if after twenty-one months of the war's duration the submarine question under discussion between the German government and the government of the United States were to take a turn seriously threatening maintenance of peace between the two nations.

As far as lies with the German government, it wishes to prevent things from taking such a course. The German government, moreover, is prepared to do its utmost to confine operations of the war of the rest of its duration to the fighting forces of the belligerents, thereby also insuring the freedom of the seas, a principle upon which the German government believes, now as before, that it is in agreement with the government of the United States.

The German government, guided by this idea, notifies the government of the United States that German naval forces have received the following order:

In accordance with the general principles of visit and search and the destruction of merchant vessels recognized by international law as such vessels, both within and without the area declared a naval war zone, shall not be sunk without warning and without saving human lives unless the ship attempt to escape or offer resistance.

But neutrals cannot expect that Germany, forced to fight for existence shall, for the sake of neutral interests, restrict the use of an effective weapon if the enemy is permitted to continue to apply at will methods of warfare violating rules of international law.

Demand Incompatible.

Such a demand would be incompatible with the character of neutrality, and the German government is convinced that the government of the United States does not think of making such a demand, knowing that the government of the United States repeatedly declares that it is determined to restore the principle of freedom of the seas, from whatever quarter it has been violated.

Accordingly, the German government is confident that in consequence of the new orders issued to the naval forces, the government of the United States will also now consider all impediments removed which may have been in the way of mutual co-operation toward restoration of the freedom of the seas during the war, as suggested in the note of July 23, 1915, and it does not doubt that the government of the United States will now demand and insist that the British government shall forthwith observe the rules of international law universally recognized before the war as are laid down in the notes presented by the government of the United States to the British government, Dec. 28, 1914, and Nov. 4, 1915.

Should steps be taken by the government of the United States not attain their object it desires—to have the laws of humanity followed by all belligerent nations—the German government would then be facing a new situation in which it must reserve to itself complete liberty of decision.

The undersigned avails himself of this opportunity to renew to the American ambassador assurances of highest consideration.

VON JAGOW.

Germans Make Gains.

Paris, May 5.—French war statement: The German offensive on the front northwest of Verdun has been re-opened with terrific violence. The French war office in an official communique today admitted that the Germans had succeeded in penetrating the French lines at several points at Hill No. 304. Following a bombardment of the utmost violence the Crown Prince hurled his German legions against the French positions. At almost every point the Germans were hurled back, but at a few places the Teutons were able to gain a foothold in the French lines at Hill 304. On the west bank of the Meuse and in the Woevre district there were furious artillery duels throughout the night. Hill 304 is a key position and the Germans have been bombarding it with varying intensity for five days.

4 More Irish Are Shot.

Dublin, May 5.—Four more leaders of the Irish rebels were shot this morning. They had been found guilty of treason by a general field court martial. The victims were Joseph Plunkett, Edmund Daly, Michael Shannahan and William Pearse.

Conscription Bill Acted On.

London, May 5.—The House of Commons has passed the second reading of the Military Service Bill for immediate general military compulsion.

Another Zeppelin Destroyed.

London, May 5.—Another Zeppelin has been destroyed, according to the official announcement made today by the Admiralty. The German airship was brought down by the fire of high-angle guns aboard several light cruisers in the North Sea, off the coast of Schleswig-Holstein yesterday.

Sullivan in Bad Plight.

London, May 5.—United States Ambassador has made inquiries of the charges against James M. Sullivan, former United States Minister to San Domingo, who is being held as one of the Irish rebels, and has started in motion the machinery of the American diplomatic corps to aid him, but it is admitted that Sullivan's plight is a serious one.

No charge of treason has been made against Sullivan. He is simply being held on suspicion, as are many others of the 3,000 who were arrested by British soldiers in Ireland following the surrender of the rebels. If he is found guilty the death penalty wil be exacted.

SPLENDID RESULTS FROM MOSQUITO WEEK PROGRAM

Reports from various parts of the county indicate that mosquito week, which has been observed in public and private schools, has proved of decided value in showing children how to prevent the spread of the insect pests. Under the direction of the Union County Mosquito Commission, jars of mosquito larvae have been placed on exhibition in the school rooms permitting the pupils to see how quickly the "Jersey Birds" breed and develop. Illustrated talks have also been given and it is believed that great good will result from the idea of mosquito week.

The exhibitions in Plainfield and the various lectures have been arranged and conducted by Frank Putnam, a member of the commission. The interest developing has already proven far beyond his expectation. People from all parts of the city have been watching the progress of the larvae placed at convenient points and through acquainting themselves through the process will be able to destroy what might otherwise prove to be a swarm of the dreaded summer pests.

In connection with the instruction work this week, Mr. Putnam has had a force of men at work draining anti-mosquito ditches dug last year. Most of these were located between Geraud and West End avenues and in different parts of the East End.

WILSON APPROVES BORDER AGREEMENT

Says Arrangement With Carranza Is Satisfactory.

Washington, May 5.—General Scott was instructed by Secretary of War Baker to notify General Alvaro Obregon that President Wilson entirely approved the tentative agreement drawn up at the border conference.

The president issued the following statement.

I have examined with the secretary of war the report made by General Hugh L. Scott of the conference between him and General Obregon, secretary of war of the Republic of Mexico.

The report indicates a tentative agreement covering the future operations of both the American and Mexican military forces and evidences cordial co-operation between the two governments in their common purpose.

As this agreement is being submitted to the de facto government of Mexico, it would not be proper for me to permit its publication until that government has had an opportunity to examine and consider its provisions. The full text of the proposed agreement will be given out immediately upon its acceptance by both governments.

In general I may say that it provides a basis of co-operation which promises to prevent misunderstanding and strengthens the cordial relations of the two republics.

It is assumed by officials that as soon as General Scott receives his instructions and learns that Obregon has heard from Carranza he will arrange for a final conference for the exchange of ratifications.

It is understood that following these exchanges Secretary of State Lansing will prepare a formal note to the Carranza government in reply to Foreign Minister Aguilar's suggestion that the two governments treat for a withdrawal of the American expedition.

This note will state that inasmuch as the military conferences on the border have resulted in a mutual understanding looking to co-operation between the forces of the two governments, it would seem unnecessary at this time to undertake any diplomatic arrangements.

TWO MOVIE MEN KILLED.

Malcolm Strong and Clinton Stagg Die in Auto Crash.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 5.—Thrown from their automobile by the bursting of a front tire while driving rapidly along La Brea voulevard, near here, Malcolm W. Strong, playwright, and Clinton H. Stagg, an author, were instantly killed. George Foster Platt, also in the car at the time of the accident, received a concussion of the brain and a broken arm and was taken to Sister hospital in a serious condition.

The car was owned and being driven by Stagg, and the party was proceeding from Hollywood, a suburb, to the beach along the road next to the Santa Monica boulevard. All three men were known in Los Angeles, being attached to the writing and producing staffs of the Jesse L. Lasky Film company and the Universal Film Manufacturing company.

SPOKE AT HIGH SCHOOL.

J. Herbert Case, of Martine avenue, one of the vice presidents of the Farmers' Trust Company of New York as well as the Plainfield Trust Company, gave an interesting talk to the pupils of the City High School this morning at chapel exercises on "Banking Opportunities." Mr. Case told of the opportunities offered young men in the banking business at the present time on account of the great European war. Each dollar of additional money that comes to this country now from Europe he termed as an opportunity for some young man. He offered to give help to those wishing to enter that branch of business and also told of a correspondence course that has now been started to fit young men to be bankers.

Mrs. Eugene Welsh, of Newark, spent yesterday as guest of Plainfield relatives. She was prior to her marriage Miss Minnie Van Middlesworth, of Dunellen.

MRS. CLARA S. RUSHMORE DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Clara S. Rushmore, wife of Dr. Edward Rushmore, died yesterday at her home on Park avenue after an illness of about five years. Mrs. Rushmore had been in a weakened condition for a long time, and two years ago she suffered a paralytic stroke, since which time her condition had been practically hopeless.

Mrs. Rushmore was formerly Miss Clara S. Riley, daughter of Dr. William Riley, of Baltimore. She was born in Baltimore, but came to Plainfield from Rochester, N. Y., thirty years ago. She was a member of the Society of Friends, and in Plainfield was highly respected by all who knew her as a woman possessed of many estimable traits.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Rushmore is survived by two sons, Dr. Steven Rushmore, of Boston, and William R. Rushmore, of this city; and two daughters, Mrs. P. J. McKeon, of New York, and Mrs. Henry C. Wells, of this city; also one brother, Dr. Charles Riley, of Baltimore, and one sister, Mrs. Eccles, of Baltimore. The funeral will be held at her late home, 429 Park avenue, Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment will be made at Westbury, Long Island.

WILSON APPROVES NEW MEXICAN AGREEMENT

Washington, May 5.—An agreement between the United States and Mexico which provides for co-operation between the armies of the two countries in the hunt for Villa has been approved by President Wilson and now awaits the pleasure of Carranza, first chief of the de facto government. No official outline of the plan will be given out until Carranza has signed or rejected it, but it is admitted that it will prevent American troops in Mexico from going further south. Below the point penetrated by United States soldiers, Carranza troops are to take up the hunt, and Funston's men are to gradually work back toward the United States border.

MOOSE TO ENJOY SMOKER.

Plainfield Lodge No. 310, Loyal Order of Moose, will hold a smoker at the regular meeting next Monday night in honor of the first session under the leadership of the newly elected dictator, Martin J. Whalen. The good and welfare committee is arranging a suitable program of entertainment.

ILL WITH PNEUMONIA.

Attorney Robert Newton Crane is confined to his home on Leland avenue with an attack of pneumonia, the result of a chill contracted yesterday while automobile riding.

LOCAL MAN'S UNCLE DIES AT THE AGE OF 101 YEARS

Charles L. Ryder, of Grant avenue, has received word from relatives announcing the death of his uncle, Joseph Welsh, of Freeport, Maine, at the ripe age of 101 years. Mr. Welsh was the oldest resident of the county where he had lived all his life and would undoubtedly have lived for a number of years to come but for an accident which befell him a few weeks ago. In this he received severe burns which developed complications.

Mr. Ryder is a member of a long lived family and the uncle who has just died is one of a number of relatives who have either passed the century mark or closely approached it before death. Mr. Welsh had been a farmer all his life and was known throughout eastern Maine because of the publicity that had been given his longevity. The funeral and interment took place at Freeport Wednesday.

MRS. JENNINGS IS GUILTY, SAYS JURY

Warrenville Letter Case Ends in Conviction of Aged Woman.

Mrs. Ida Jennings, of Warrenville, charged with sending a threatening letter to Mrs. Laura Bowers, also of Warrenville, on March 23 last, was found guilty by a jury in the Somerset county court yesterday, following a trial before Judge Daniel H. Beekman. The jury was out ten minutes. Mrs. Jennings was accused of being the author of a letter demanding $1,000 from Mrs. Bowers. She furnished a bond for her appearance in court one week from today, when sentence will be passed.

Following is the letter signed "Revenge," which Mrs. Bower said she received:

"When you open this read it yourself if you let anyone no what I have writ, I will scare you worse then you was ever scart. You have got to much money and I want some of it. If you dont hand it over I wont tell in this letter what I do to you. You need not think I dont no that you are home when you have your blinds all pulled down, for I have even been in your home and you didn't no it. How do you like that. I want a thousand dollars. Dont holler you got it and can spare. get it by next wensdy, and put it ina envelope in blacksmith Jennings outhouse on a beam over the window. They are all away on that day. If some one is home prtend you have to go there, if you tell john or any one else I will make it hot for you. I am watching you. When I get the money am going away."

Mrs. Jennings was arrested at the home of her daughter in North Plainfield by County Detective George Totten. Witnesses in the case included Lieut. Maurice Higgins and John Reinhart, of the Plainfield police department, who were engaged on the case, and who watched the barn where the money was to have been placed and they testified that they saw Mrs. Jennings enter the barn.

After the receipt of the threatening letter Mrs. Bowers caused to be placed in the barn some "stage" money, using it as a decoy. Strangely, both Mr. and Mrs. Bowers on the witness stand testified that their relations with Mrs. Jennings had always been pleasant. The complainant was represented by Codington & Blatz, while Charles J. McNabb was counsel for Mrs. Jennings.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

One of the ways in which want ads can be useful to you is in selling, for fair prices in cash, any "second hand" articles you own. They must be good, of course—and priced so that the buyers secure bargains. You can sell any article of furniture, any piece of machinery—anything that still has usefulness for the man who has use for it—through want advertising.

LIMIT HOURS FOR SALE OF LIQUOR

Borough Council Fixes 11 P. M. as Closing Hours—Will Get After Illegal Dealers.

POLICE PAY IS RAISED

An Increase of $10 is Granted to Members of the Department—Bids for Furnishing Crushed Stone and Cross-walks are Accepted.

Ordinances limiting the hours for the sale if liquors from 6 a. m. to 11 p. m., and prohibiting the unlawful sale of liquors, were adopted by the North Plainfield Council at its May meeting last night. Recently, the council passed a resolution requesting the Somerset county court to cause the barrooms in the borough to be closed at 11 o'clock at night, conforming with the closing hour in Plainfield. In response to that, Judge Daniel H. Beekman communicated with the proprietors of the two hotels in the borough, making such a request, and they promptly agreed to close at 11 o'clock.

Following the above action, the council thought it best to pass an ordinance regulating the hours for the sale of liquor. A penalty of $100 or sixty days or both is provided in the ordinance. The other ordinance which provides the same penalty, is intended to cover any "speak-easy" that may be found within the borough limits. Mayor Smalley, in explaining the latter ordinance, said that its adoption would give the mayor and council control in this matter, which was thought advisable.

The Standard Paint Company communicated with the council in reference to a bill of $202.67 against the Harrison Burton Company, contractors, and it was referred. Stephen B. Ayers, of New York, who contemplates erecting a number of houses in the vicinity of Clinton avenue, sought information as to when the sewer system would be ready for use, but no definite answer could be given to him at this time. L. E. Taylor and others petitioned for the macadamizing of Allen place. This was referred. The report of Recorder Fred Hand showed that during the month there were 34 arrests and $48 collected in fines. The street expenses for the past month were reported to be $696.62.

Councilman Clifford McGee stated that, after careful consideration of the petition from the police for an increase in pay, the committee decided that they were entitled to a slight increase. He then introduced a resolution, which was adopted, giving the men a $10 increase as follows: Chief, $95 a month; roundsmen, $85 a month; marshals, serving over one year, $80 a month; those serving one year or less, $75 a month.

Mr. McGee also reported that John Cose, who was given the contract to repair the roof on police headquarters, had done nothing but spread some sand there, and he thought the matter should be attended to. Mayor Smalley explained that Mr. Cose had been seen by W. L. Hetfield, Jr., borough counsel, and would attend to the work at once.

In response to a petition, the council voted the usual amount of $35 to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., to help the veterans observe Memorial Day. Councilman Stahl reported expenses for the fire and water department for the past month to be $280.35, and the granting of a permit to J. E. and Henry DeMott for a building at Somerset street and Somerset place.

A resolution, offered by Mr. Milne, and adopted, provided for borrowing $10,000 on a note, and bills aggregating $294.15 were ordered paid. Another resolution by the same member authorized the payment of $5,000 to the custodian of school funds as the special school tax. The sum of $780.30, bill of Tallamy Brothers, for work on the fire house, was paid in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Milne.

The bid of the Plainfield Trap Rock Company for furnishing stone to the borough was accepted, as was also that of Alfred DeNise for furnishing sidewalks and cross-walks, and a bill for $150 for a road-scraper purchased from the Twentieth Century Company was ordered paid. The council adjourned to meet again on Monday night, May 8, when matters pertaining to sewers will be discussed and the report of the Somerset street commissioners will be received.

HERZOG HELD FOR FEDERAL ACTION

Plainfielder Arrested in St. Louis on Suspicion of Being in Bomb Plot.

THOUGHT TO BE A SPY

It is Alleged He Was Trying to Enlist Support of Two Men in the Manufacture of Munitions—Drugs Found in His Possession.

According to news despatches from St. Louis, a man said to be Albert Herzog, of 226 West Second street, was arrested in that city yesterday on suspicion of being a German spy and trying to induce two men to come East with him and engage in the manufacture of aerial bombs. When arrested the man had in his possession a telegram signed "Emma D. Herzog," asking him to advise her upon his arival in Pittsburgh.

The prisoner gave the name of Albert Herzog and his address as 226 West Second street, Plainfield, N. J., and is reported to have said that he was sometimes known as "Dr. Alexander von Humboldt," of Pittsburgh, and "Paul Jones." He is being held to await examination by Federal authorities.

Inquiry by a reporter for the Plainfield Daily Press disclosed the fact that there is an Albert Herzog living at 226 West Second street. His wife was found at that address last night, and she professed the greatest surprise when she learned from the reporter for the first time of the reported arrest of her husband. She declared that it must be a mistake. Mrs. Herzog said that Mr. Herzog left here last Friday to visit his father, Peter Herzog, in St. Louis, and that he was to return today. She added that she received a telegram from him Thursday, in which he said that he would be home on Saturday.

Mrs. Herzog, who was the widow of Daivd VanBuskirk, married Mr. Herzog about three years ago. He came to Plainfield a year prior to that time, and for a while was employed as a drug clerk by R. J. Shaw. He had worked in drug stores in various places before coming to Plainfield, according to his wife. He is about 43 years old, and Mrs. Herzog says that although he is a German, he is a loyal American citizen, and she is sure he is not guilty of the charge reported to have been preferred against him.

It is said that when Herzog was arrested a large quantity of drugs was found on him, but his wife explains this by saying that he, having been a druggist, it is possible that he secured the drugs for his own use.

When questioned as to why her husband had used the names of "Dr. Alexander vonHumboldt" and "Paul Jones," she said that for personal reasons he did not want it generally known that he had gone to St. Louis, and he withheld the use of his right name. The "personal reasons," she said, had to do with family affairs, and were not of any serious nature. Mrs. Herzog will endeavor today to get further details of the reported arrest of her husband.

LOCAL BOYS SENT TO JAMESBURG REFORMATORY

James Moore, James Anderson and John Chapman, all boys of Plainfield, were yesterday sentenced to the Jamesburg Reformatory when tried in juvenile court in Elizabeth. They were all arrested by the local police for larceny and were turned over to the Elizabeth court. All have been adjudged incorrigibles here.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER DIES AT RUTHERFORD

John M. Crane, a former well known resident of this city, who removed from here about twenty years ago, died Thursday night at his home in Rutherford. Details of his death had been received by local friends. Mr. Crane was in his sixty-fourth year and was one of the most widely known insurance men in New York, having been the founder of the Fidelity and Casualty Insurance Company of New York. His home here was on West Eighth street and he was a member of Jerusalem lodge, F. and A. M., Jerusalem chapter, R. A. M., and Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, retaining this membership at the time of his death. He was also one of the organizers and prominent members of the old Crescent Wheelmen, since disbanded.

Beside his wife, Mr. Crane is survived by one son, Clifford Crane, and a daughter, Mrs. Arline Kirckner. The funeral will be held at the late home tonight at 8 oclock and burial will be at the convenience of the family.

JERSEY CHAPTERS IN SESSION HERE

Mrs. D. T. Kenney, State President, Entertains Members of Organization.

REPORTS ARE RECEIVED

Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, Rector of the Catholic University, Washington, Presides at Distinguished Gathering of Representatives.

The first annual meeting of the New Jersey Chapters of the National Organization of Catholic Women will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of the State president, Mrs. David T. Kenney, 12 Rockview avenue, the borough. Rt. Rev. Thos. J. Shahan, rector of the Catholic University in Washington, D. C., presided during the session. Reports will be submitted by the various chapters, and Mrs. Kenney, the State president, will read her first annual report, indicating the progress of the work accomplished the past twelve months, and will submit a check from each of the chapters throughout the State. The object of the organization is to raise sufficient funds for the building of a national shrine at the Catholic University, in Washington, in honor of Mary Immaculate. About fifty delegates are expected to be present from the following chapters: Paterson, Newark, Elizabeth, Montclair, Plainfield, Hackensack, New Brunswick, Passaic and Clifton Camden and Jersey City.

The Plainfield chapter, of which Mrs. A. K. Brennan is president, was the first to be organized in the State of New Jersey. Since then Mrs. Kenney, as State president, has organized and established on a firm footing the ten other chapters named above. All have a large membership co-operating with each other toward the accomplishment of the goal for which the chapter is formed. Among those who will attend the gathering this afternoon will be Mrs. Frances Burrell Hoffman, national chairman of the organization, and Mrs. John Giraud Agar, national treasurer of the society, both of New York city.

The various chapters and their officers are as follows: Paterson—President, Mrs. John P. Agnew; vice-president, Mrs. A. T. McBride, Mrs. Mary E O'Neil; secretary, Mrs T. F. O'Grady; treasurer, Mrs Edward Colby. Newark—President, Mrs. Joseph B. Sandford; vice-presidents, Mrs. John L. Carroll, Mrs. Joseph V. Clark, Mrs. Peter Hauck, Jr, Mrs. John E. Kelley, Mrs. Thomas J. Lintott, Mrs Bernard M. Shanley, Jr., Mrs. Michael R. S. Shanley and Miss Lucia Towle; secretary, Miss Augusta Devine; treasurer, Miss Agnes Garrigan.

Elizabeth—President, Mrs. Richard T. Potts; vice-presidents, Mrs. Alfred A. Stein; secretary, Mrs. John Moynihan; treasurer, Mrs. John P. Reilly, Miss Helen Gorham. SALE OF PHILLIPS' PROPERTY.

For the purpose of closing the estate of the late Captain Phillips, the valuable property at 1120-1134 West Front street, near Albert street, will be sold this afternoon by Robert Muray, the auctioneer. The property consists of a large dwelling of fourteen rooms, all improvements, small barn, large variety of fruit and shade trees with an acre of land. Mr. Murray has fixed the time for selling the property between 4 and 4:30 o'clock so as not to conflict with the "Community Picnic" at the Biederwolf Tabernacle.

LOCAL BOY WINS IN STATE DEBATE

Richard Borden, Aged 15, Gets Highest Honor in the State.

Richard Borden, a senior in the Plainfield High School, won first prize inu the Hamilton College Inter-Academic Prize Speaking Contest held in the Central High School in Newark, last night, taking the first award from seven other contestants. By winning first place in this Mr. Borden will have the privilege of competing in the contest to be held at Hamilton College next Friday in which pupils from the various schools in New York State will be entered. The Plainfielder was awarded fifteen dollars in gold. Mr. Borden, who is only fifteen years old, has shown remarkable aptitude for speaking and debating and recently he captured second prize in the Colgate contest, which was held in the local High School, as well as being the leader of his debating team in the inter-triangular contest when the Plainfield High School defeated the Newark debaters in this city. By winning the contest last night, Mr. Borden is acknowledged the champion High School speaker of the State, an honor of singular importance, when the age of the young man is compared with that of his opponents in many other meets. "Enmity Toward Great Britain" by Rufus Choate was the subject of the Plainfield High School boy's address. Second prize went to Stewart Doolittle, of Glen Ridge, who spoke on "True Manliness."

Other schools represented and the subjects were as follows: William Benedict, Roselle High, "A Soldier's Talk on War;" Thornton Penfield, Englewood High, "Democracy vs. Sovereignty;" Paul Mulcahy, St. Peter's Preparatory School, Jersey City; "Spartacus' Speech to the Gladiators;" Samuel Cooper, Bayonne High, "G. A. R. Reunion in 1915;" Kenneth Freeman, Rahway High, "Decoration Day;" and Alfred, Marasco, Central High, Newark, "Extract from President Wilson's Speech."

The judges comprised Prof. Earl S. Augusberg, of New York city; Prof. Elmer W. Triess, of Newark; Superintendent Albert Davis, of Ridgefield Park; Charles A. Springstead, of Westfield, and Prof. Harry Grover, of Jersey City. The latter was the chairman of the judges.

PLAINFIELD RIFLE CLUB INCREASES ITS MEMBERSHIP

More than 160 members have been added to the Plainfield Rifle Club, and the list bids fair to total over 200. With a view to reaching the total of charter members, the committee has decided to hold the charter list open until Tuesday night, when a grand meeting will be held in the Company K armory. At this meeting, Capt. Charles A. Peterson will deliver a talk and important business matters will be transacted.

It is said that several public-spirited citizens who are firm believers in the policy of preparedness have signified their intention of donating $50 apiece toward a fund to be devoted to the purchase of targets. This generosity was unlooked-for and adds new vim to the undertaking.

HOLY CROSS PREACHER.

Rev. Dr. Charles L. Pardee, of New York city, will preach at 11 and 7:45 o'clock tomorrow at the Church of the Holy Cross, the borough.

Sunday-school will meet at 9:45 tomorrow morning in the Warren chapel and the preaching service will be held at 11 o'clock. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, the pastor, will officiate.

McBride is Executed—Irish National Party Called—Wilson Believes Break With Germany Has Been Averted.

London, May 6.—A meeting of the Irish Nationalist Party, described as most important, has been summoned for Tuesday. John Redmond will preside. Conscription and the situation in Ireland will be considered.

A mystery has developed in the case of James M. Sullivan, former United States Minister to Santo Domingo, whose arrest for complicity in the Irish uprising was announced at the United States embassy Thursday. Despite a denial that Mr. Sullivan is being held by the British military authorities, Mrs. Sullivan declares that her husband has disappeared and she has applied to W. H. Page, the American ambassador, to find him.

McBride is Executed.

Dublin, May 6.—Official announcement was made today of the execution of John McBride, one of the leaders in the Irish uprising. Two others who had been found guilty along with McBride and were sentenced to death, had their sentences commuted to life imprisonment. They were Thomas Hunter and William Cosgrove.

Wexford, Ireland, May 6.—One hundred and thirty-six Irish insurgents have been arrested in Wexford county by the British military authorities, charged with complicity in the recent uprising.

Believes Crisis Has Passed.

Washington, May 6.—While disappointed by the German reply to President Wilson's ultimatum, Administration officials believe that for the time being, a break between the two countries has been averted.

The official text of the note, received at 8 o'clock last night, will be subjected to careful consideration before the President reaches a decision. This decision will not be reached before Monday, and may not be until next Tuesday's Cabinet meeting.

Zeppelin Badly Crippled.

Amsterdam, May 6.—The German Zeppelin L9, one of the biggest and the newest of the German aircraft, has been badly damaged by the fire of British warships. A Dutch fishing boat, which arrived at Ameland today, reported seeing the L9 on Friday. The Zeppelin was flying slowly over the North Sea and was so low that her gondolas were almost awash.

Russians Attack Erzingan.

Petrograd, May 6.—Russian troops have attacked the outer defenses of Erzingan, the Turkish fortress, 90 miles west of Erzerum, and are slowly enveloping the stronghold according to a despatch received from Tiflis today.

SLOANE WILL GIVE N. Y. A NEW FLIER

Local Company to Replace Machine Destroyed in Accident of Thursday.

The Sloane-Day Aeroplane Company will immediately replace the machine that was destroyed at Hempsted Plains Thursday afternoon when DeLloyd Thompson and Instructor Blakely fell from a heighth of 900 feet. The aeroplane, which was a $10,000 Sloane-Day tractor, had been donated to the New York National Guard by the local company for the purpose of aerial training. It was in charge of Mr. Blakely, formerly an employe of the local plant, who was "loaned" to the N. Y. militiamen. Mr. Blakely and Mr. Thompson were both injured in the fall but not fatally. The machine was wrecked, although it is believed that the motor can be used again.

"We will replace the aeroplane at once," said Mr. Sloane this morning. "I do not know yet whether or not it can be repaired, but even if it is necessary to give the New York National Guard a new one this will be done at once."

TO HOLD LAWN PARTY.

The Mothers' Association will hold a lawn party at the residence of Mrs. H. G. Phillips on Kensington avenue, Wednesday afternoon, May 10, at 3 o'clock. Each member is entitled to bring two guests and it is earnestly hoped that a prompt response will be made to the secretary, Mrs. Frank H. Bucklin, 1138 Myrtle avenue.

SIN HIDDEN IN HEARTS IS AS GREAT AS THAT PUT IN ACTION, BIEDERWOLF TELLS BIG CROWD

MANY ARE LED TO CLEAN HEARTS OF EVIL THOUGHTS AND PLEDGE A CHRISTIAN LIFE WITHIN AND WITHOUT.

'COMMUNITY DAY' IS BEING OBSERVED TODAY

All Day Program at Tabernacle—Dinner at Noon Today—Evangelist Preaches Five Times Saturday and Sunday—Big Demonstration is Planned for the Near Future.

"One great trouble with the church today is that a lot of you are not willing to acknowledge your sin," said the Rev. William E. Biederwolf last night in his sermon at the Tabernacle. "Uncle Bobbie in 'That Printer of Udell's' had it right when he said, 'What you want to do is to be decent and quit trying so blamed hard to be respectable.'" . . .

Dr. Biederwolf's sermon was on the text "As a Man Thinketh in His Heart, So is He," and he talked to all people, church members, men and women out of the church but living respectable lives, and those in all forms of sin. He said that the thought of sin was sinful, even though the deed is never committed. "A man is always a thief in his heart before he reaches out his hand and steals," continued the evangelist. "No man ever took another man's life unless the murderer in him didn't do the killing first. No man ever lied with his lips until the liar in him lied first. No man ever committed adultery who didn't first lust after the woman in his heart." He said that there were sinful thoughts in the heart of everyone, and that there was enough of this timber in the heart of the best man or the best woman to kindle a fire that would burn to the lowest Hell unless the grace of God put it out.

Through the appeal of Dr. Biederwolf many of the congregation of 4,000 walked down the sawdust aisle at the close of the meeting and gave him their hands in a promise to try and put evil thoughts out of their hearts and live a life of real Christianity.

There was a big delegation of school teachers at the Tabernacle last night, also one from the mail carriers and postal clerks of Plainfield and vicinity. In his welcome to the school teachers Dr. Biederwolf reminded them of the great responsibility that rested on them as guardians of the minds and morals of future citizens. He said that if he did not have to preach he would rather teach because of the wonderful opportunity for service. Teachers get less money than the members of any other profession in the world, according to the evangelist, and he did not except even ministers. He said a man selling popcorn on the streets of New York or any other big city would make more money than a school teacher entrusted with the grave charge of making good or bad citizens for the next generation of grownups.

Dr. Biederwolf also welcomed the postal employes in a hearty manner and urged that they give their lives to God if they were not Christians or reconsecrate themselves to his work if they were, and there were many out of both delegations that went forward at the close of the sermon.

The National Male Quartet sang a selection and Mr. McEwan a solo. Dr. Brown offered the opening prayer.

Special emphasis was given to Community Day in the announcements of last night. An all day service is being conductetd at the Tabernacle today under the direction of Dr. Biederwolf and Mr. Heaton. At 11 a. m. Dr. Biederwolf preached on "Workers, Shirkers and Jerkers." He will preach again this afternoon, tonight, tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow night. His sermon for tomorrow afternoon, to men only, is "The Price of a Man."

Within a short time, the date has not yet been decided upon, a gigantic open air celebration will be held on the downtown streets. Dr. Biederwolf said last night that it would be a beautiful, dignified, enthusiastic demonstration for God, and that all Protestants in the city would take part. After a short meeting downtown the participants will march into the Tabernacle for a service. "We may dissipate a little that night," said the evangelist, "stay here until 11 o'clock or even until 12."

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT, GOING DOWN!

Martin Might as Well Be With the Giants as Far as Records Go.

The Milwaukee Brewers, with whom Jack Martin is pastiming this year, opened their home season Thursday, but still keep right on losing. The effort made by President Timme to build up a formidable combination by the addition of Thorpe, Devore and Martin, has been unsuccessful so far, as the Brewers hold the degrading cellar berth. Their place in the lowly rut is a secure one and the record of the team up to the first of this week is nothing to be proud of.

The sport writers of the Association cities think they understand the reason why the team is losing. They picked Milwaukee for last place or, perhaps, a little better, and they believe that they were right. The addition of Jack Martin did fortify the team, but Jack's hitting did not add a world of force to the offensive attack. During the week of the 29th the local boy was at the bat 20 times but connected safely only 4 times. His average was .200. He made one sacrifice hit and figured in one double killing. Although two errors are chalked against him, these errors, which by the way both came in the same game, did not result in a loss for the Milwaukee outfit. As a fielder Martin is a sensation and Manager Clarke is raving over his ability. In fact, with Martin, Benson, Kirke and Clarke the Brewer leader thinks he has another one of those $100,0000 infields.

The opening celebration of Thursday was attended by a large crowd, many of the stores being closed. The Mayor of the city requested the fans to support the team and his request was not ignored.

Yesterday's game with Columbus resulted in a 4 to 0 defeat for the Milwaukee team, the Columbians doing the stunt in record time. They had to do it in record time as President Chivington, of the Association, has decided not to tolerated any more stalling.

COMFORTING WORDS.

Many a Plainfield Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed—to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. The following advice of one who has suffered will prove comforting words to hundreds of Plainfield readers.

Mrs. William E. Gardner, 322 East Second street, Plainfield, says: 'I suffered a great deal from rheumatic pains across my back. My kidneys were weak and irregular in action, and I was in a miserable condition for months. Nothing I tried seemed to give me any relief until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph's Drug Store. They seemed to take hold at once, removing the rheumatic pains and regulating the action of my kidneys. They improved my condition so much that I soon felt like a different person.

BERLIN YIELDS CONDITIONALLY

Danger of Break Is Believed Averted.

PRESIDENT STUDIES TEXT

Berlin's Reply Unsatisfactory in Several Respects, but New Orders to U-Boats Thought to Leave Room For Further Negotiations—Wilson Not to Act Hastily.

Washington, May 6.—There are many indications that the German reply to the American note will avert the danger of an immediate diplomatic break, although President Wilson is reserving decision until he has had time to go over the official text.

The German note, though unsatisfactory on several points, apparently meets the president's basic demand that Germany "immediately declare and effect an abandonment of present methods of submarine warfare."

German submarine commanders have been ordered to conduct their warfare against merchantmen "in accordance with the general principles of visit and search recognized by international law," and these orders, according to the note, are in effect now.

The fact that Germany by implication threatens to withdraw the orders unless the United States obtains concessions from Great Britain relative to the blockade is not regarded necessarily as vitiating Germany's concession to the American demand.

Can Deal With Threat.

The United States, it is explained, will know how to deal with this threat should it be put into execution. In the meantime the submarine menace to noncombatants' lives is at least temporarily eliminated, and this is the object for which the president has been striving.

It is too early to predict with certainty that the president will accept this concession on its face value, but indications strongly point that way. The president received the German reply as cabled from Berlin just before the cabinet meeting. He read it to his advisers, and the cabinet discussed it for nearly two hours.

The unfavorable impression made by the sharp words in the preliminary parts of the note was offset by the outline of the orders to submarine commanders which indicates the specific concessions which the imperial government has made. It is understood that the president felt that much of the verbiage of the note was intended for "home consumption" in Berlin. It was the guarantees, not the words, that interested the president.

Break Seems Averted.

Following the cabinet meeting there were further indications that an immediate break was not imminent. Secretary Lansing said:

"I cannot discuss the note in any way at this time."

But he added later that certain inquiries concerning the note probably would be made of the German government. This was regarded as an admission that the note had at least served the purpose of reopening diplomatic negotiations between the two governments, although President Wilson had made it clear that in case the German reply did not meet his demands he would not enter into any further discussion.

Other cabinet officers reflected the view that the tension had relaxed. Postmaster General Burleson would not discuss the matter specifically, but said he was going on a fishing trip as soon as he could get away from the White House.

They left the correspondents to draw their own conclusions. One high official made the positive statement that the administration would accept the German promise and let the developments of the future decide the course of this government.

Note Leaves Loopholes.

There is, however, much doubt on certain points covered in the note. The note, it is pointed out, is so worded as to leave many diplomatic loopholes for the imperial government. It is so framed that it practically demands further elucidation on various phases of the controversy. It is doubtful if any one here understands precisely what Berlin's attitude is on several of the vital questions involved. For this reason alone the president, it is said, will not feel at liberty to pass judgment on it until he has closely studied the official text.

Apparently the German position on the vital point at issue—the suspension or abandonment of illegal submarine warfare—could be summed up in a broad sense in this manner:

"Germany has suspended its illegal submarine warfare in the hope that the United States will now insist upon Great Britain abandoning its illegal blockade."

Heretofore Germany has offered to abandon its illegal submarine operations simultaneously with an abandonment of the blockade by Great Britain. Now Germany apparently has made the first move as a concession to the United States without waiting for Great Britain to act. This, it is explained, appears to represent a definite concession and something more than Germany has ever agreed to do before.

The main reliance of the United States government in its belief that Germany has met the president's demands is contained in the orders issued by the imperial government to its submarine commanders. These orders state:

In accordance with the general principles of visit and search and the destruction of merchant vessels recognized by international law such vessels, both within and without the area declared a naval war zone, shall not be sunk without warning and without saving human lives unless the ship attempts to escape or offer resistance.

The orders appear definite enough, but officials already see a possibility that they may be given a different interpretation according to whether or not an armed merchantman is regarded as a "merchant vessel." The United States has flatly taken the stand that this is the proper and legal designation of a merchantman armed for defense. Germany has declared that the imperial government regards armed merchantmen in the British service as auxiliary warships for the reason that the British admiralty has ordered them to attack submarines.

It now develops that Secretary Lansing made public the American memorandum defining the status of armed merchantmen for the specific purpose of meeting some such issue as this. The United States foresaw the possibility that Germany would be disposed to exclude British armed merchant ships from the category of ordinary peaceable vessels.

For Further Discussion.

The question which officials are asking is: "Does Germany agree to this definition or does Germany still maintain that she has the right to attack armed merchant vessels in the same manner that she would attack warships?" The only answer, it is explained, must necessarily come from the imperial government. And this necessitates further discussion and further opportunity for Berlin to endeavor to impress its viewpoint on the United States.

Judging solely by the text of the note and the manner in which the orders to submarine commanders are explained in it, the impression is conveyed that Germany does not attach any strings to the orders. German states that it is ready to do its utmost "to confine operations of the war for the rest of its duration to the fighting forces of the belligerents, thereby also insuring freedom of the seas."

This is interpreted to mean that Germany is prepared to cease devoting attention to submarine operations against merchantmen if Great Britain relinquishes the blockade. Then the German note states that "the German government, guided by this idea, notifies the government of the United States that German naval forces have received the following order."

The construction which members of Wilson's cabinet because of this place on the orders is that Germany is making her full concession in advance in the hope of bringing the desired concession from Great Britain. Viewed in this light officials are not inclined to believe that the German government will make an issue of the armed merchantmen question in carrying out these orders. Yet there is nothing definite to show this, according to officials.

SOCIALIST ANGERS HOUSE.

Talks of Assassination if Porto Ricans Are Denied Rights.

Washington, May 6.—Representative Meyer London, the New York Socialist, stirred the wrath of the house, narrowly escaping formal censure, by a declaration interpreted by his colleagues as an attempt to justify the use of violence, even assassination, by Porto Ricans to obtain rights denied them by the pending citizenship bill.

Only after making an explanation that he was misunderstood and an apology to the house was Mr. London permitted to proceed with his speech.

Antiquity of Cricket.

By the middle of the seventeenth century cricket, whose age seems cast in the shade of the unknown, had achieved for itself a recognized place. It was one of the sports which a writer of the times indignantly declared he had witnessed "openly and publicly on the Lord's day." However, the real rise of cricket did not begin until the eighteenth century. Then men of quality began to favor the game. They organized teams and matches, and even royalty took note of it and became its patrons. The Marylebone club, which was formed in 1787, remains to this day the final court of appeal on all matters relating to cricket.—London Spectator.

SOME OF AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS MEN ASK AID FOR DEFENDERS OF VERDUN

Prominent Bankers, Diplomatist and Educator Appeal for Funds in the Name of the Suffering Soldiers of France--

The National Allied Relief Committee, co-operating with the War Relief Clearing House for France and her Allies, is sending out what perhaps will be the most broadcast appeal yet issued on behalf of the war sufferers of Europe.

This appeal is for funds for the relief of the soldiers of France wounded in the fighting around Verdun.

What lends additional interest to this appeal is the fact that it is signed by six of the most prominent men in America. Those who signed it are: August Belmont of the banking firm bearing his name; Hon. Jos. H. Choate, Ex-Ambassador to England; Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University; A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank; Edwin G. Merrill, President of the Union Trust Company, and Henry L. Higginson of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Company, Boston.

It is anticipated that the contributions received from this wide-spread appeal will be devoted also to relief work among a large number of wounded resulting from the greatly increased activities of the contending armies.

The appeal is reproduced herewith.

NOTICE OF SALE OF $30,000 SCHOOL BONDS OF THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Monday, the 22nd day of May, 1916, at 8 o'clock P. M., at the Council Chamber, No. 149 North avenue, Plainfield, N. J., the Common Council of said City will receive sealed bids for the purchase of $30,000 School Bonds of said City, dated May 1st, 1916, bearing interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, and maturing serially, $2,000 on May 1st in each of the years 1955 to 1961 both inclusive; and $4,000 on May 1st in each of the years 1962 to 1965, both inclusive. The bonds will be coupon in form but may be registered as to principal only or as to both principal and interest. A certified check for two per cent. (2%) of the par value of the bonds bid for, payable to the Treasurer of the City of Plainfield, must accompany each bid.

No bid for less than par and accrued interest will be accepted.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

All proposals or bids must be submitted on forms of proposal especially prepared for that purpose, copies of which may be obtained from the City Clerk or from the United States Mortgage & Trust Co., New York City.

The legality of the issue has been examined by Messrs. Hawkins, Delafield & Longfellow, whose favorable opinion will be furnished to the purchasers.

The bonds will be prepared and certified as to genuineness by the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, of New York City, and the bonds will be delivered to the respective purchasers on Monday, the 29th day of May, 1916, at the office of the City Treasurer of Plainfield, N. J., unless another time be mutually agreed upon.

Bids will be received for all or any part of such issue.

Dated, May 1st, 1916.

By order of the Common Council,
J. T. MacMURRAY,
City Clerk.

WAR WEAPONS OF THE PAST.

Crude Originals of the Modern Long Range Death Dealers.

The commonest injuries produced in war are gunshot wounds. Until fifty years ago a soldier's musket carried only about 835 feet, and this degree of efficiency had not been exceeded for more than 200 years—namely, from 1640 to 1850. In other words, the wars of Louis XIV., the struggles of the French revolution, the Napoleonic wars, the Crimean war and our war of 1812 were all fought with firearms which had no effect at a distance greater than 835 feet. In 1857, however, the smoothbore gun barrel was replaced by the rifled barrel, and this change caused an immediate increase in the carrying distance to 2,000 feet. At the time this result seemed to the whole world nothing short of a miracle, but as early as 1866 a French officer, Chassepot by name, invented a rifle having a caliber of 15 millimeters, which carried 4,000 feet. Ten years before this accomplishment would have seemed quite impossible. On Nov. 4, 1867, the new Chassepot rifle was submitted to a practical test. The French sent a detachment of men to occupy Rome and to hold it against the advancement of Garibaldi. The effect of the new rifle in the engagements was so remarkable that the entire French army was immediately equipped with Chassepots.

The Chassepot rifle weighed nine pounds, and the Gras rifle, which was introduced in 1874, weighed nearly as much, but it had a carrying distance of 6,000 feet. After remaining the same for 217 years, the carrying distance of firearms was thus increased in fifteen years by 5,165 feet. At the same time the firearms of the Austrians, Prussians and Italians were also greatly improved, and a repeating rifle firing sixteen shots a minute and having a carrying distance of 9,000 feet came into practical use.

The rifles in use today are much lighter, are more easily handled and carry a distance of more than 12,000 feet at the rate of 2,700 feet per second. The revolver was first introduced in 1850; since then it has also undergone great improvement. Its carrying distance, which at first was only about 100 feet, was increased to 330 feet, then 680, and finally 4,000 feet.

In comparison with such means of defense and offense it is interesting to call to mind the weapons of the ancients. A javelin could be thrown about eighty-four feet; the sling ordinarily hurled its missile 266 feet, the Balearic slingmen being famous, however, because they could hurl a stone 333 feet. The wooden bow was in use until the middle of the fifteenth century; by means of it an arrow could be propelled a distance of 265-330 feet, while the steel crossbow, which came into use later, carried from 330 to 340 feet. The old blunderbuss of the pilgrims, which was supported on a fork, was effective for about 500 feet. The early musket carried about 600 feet. This firearm was much improved, so that it could shoot a distance of 835 feet, and this was the best the world knew until 1857.—Philadelphia Press.

Forecasts in the Almanac.

While in modern times almanacs commonly concern themselves only with the known facts of the year with which they deal, for many years after they came into general use, about the middle of the sixteenth century, predictions not only with regard to the weather, but also concerning the supposed planetary influences, were a vital part of their contents. The "prognostication" generally dealt with "the varieties of the ayre and also of the windes throughout the whole yere, with infortunate times to bie and sell, take medicine, sowe, plant and journey, etc." In France a decree of 1579 forbade all makers of almanacs to prophesy concerning affairs either of state or of individuals.—London Chronicle.

High Praise.

That was a fine commencement oration of yours," said the young graduate's father.

"I'm glad you like it, father," replied the youth proudly.

"I liked it so much that I'm going to cut off your allowance from this time on. Any man who can settle the fate of nations right off the reel like you did oughtn't to have any trouble in rustling a first class job and holding it."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

First Life Insurance Policy.

The first life insurance policy of which the details are on record resulted in a lawsuit. William Gybbons insured himself on June 15, 1583, for £383 against dying in twelve months. He did die on May 18 of the next year, and the disgusted underwriters (the company of those days) contested payment on the plea that he had lived twelve months of twenty-eight days each.

"You say you have quit smoking?"

"Yep; never going to smoke again."

"Then why don't you throw away those cigars?"

POLICE TO PARADE IN NEW SUMMER UNIFORMS

Examinations for extra policemen for the Plainfield force will be held within a short time. Application blanks may be had from Chief Kiely at headquarters. Announcement of the examination will be made by the police board within a few days. The board last night decided to hold the annual spring inspection on May 30. The police department will take part in the Letter Carriers' parade on that day and will appear for the first time in their summer uniforms.

AMBULANCE HITS MAN RIDING A MOTORCYCLE

James Bishop, of 229 Prescott place, was struck by the ambulance of Muhlenberg Hospital at the corner of Park avenue and Front streets about 7:30 last night. Bishop was on a motorcycle, and was coming into Front off Park. The ambulance was going toward Watchung on Front and failed to sound a warning. Bishop was knocked from his wheel, but was not injured. He says the ambulance did not sound a warning. The motorcycle was damaged.

SNEEZING OMENS.

At One Time to Sneeze Was Regarded as a Death Warrant.

Sneezing from very remote times has been regarded with superstition.

Our forefathers went to bed again if they sneezed while putting on their shoes. A sneeze to the right was deemed lucky; to the left, of evil portent. To sneeze near a burial place was very unlucky.

Tradition has it that sneezing was at first a fatal sign—every human being sneezed but once and then died—but Jacob petitioned the Creator to remove the sneezing ban and succeeded. Thence arose the once universal custom of saluting a sneezer with "God bless you!" or "May you live long!" The custom still obtains in some parts of Europe.

In England not only was a sneezer blessed, but friends raised their hats to him as well. In an old book, "The Code of Conduct," it is directed that "if his lordship sneezes ye are not to bawl out, 'God bless you!' but bow to him handsomely." All over the world the sneeze was recognized. Whole nations were under orders to make exclamations when their king sneezed.

Sneezing was believed to be a sure cure for hiccough and was also looked upon as a sign of sanity. If ancient and universal belief goes for anything it is good to sneeze.—London Telegraph.

WHEN WORK BECOMES PLAY.

The Secret of Contentment Is Found in Proper Employment.

A philosopher once said that "no man properly employed was ever miserable." And a more truthful statement was never made.

To be properly employed one must be engaged in a business in which he has faith and confidence and for which he has respect. If he doubts the legitimacy of the business, if he must resort to practices which he feels are questionable, if he isn't proud of his occupation, he is not properly employed. If the work he is given to perform palls upon him, if he feels that he ought to be doing something else, if he envies the other employee his place in the shop or factory, then the work deadens and destroys, and misery follows.

The writers got things balled up when they talked about work and play. Too great a distinction was drawn. Play was pictured as something that gave happiness and work as something which one performed only because he was hungry.

The truth is, it is all play or ought to be, for the man who is properly employed is only engaged in playing. He gets as much delight from it as he formerly got from the childish games or should. Certainly there can be no misery where a man has found his work.—Dayton News.

Knew Just How.

Many years ago in Paris, at the first presentation of a tragedy that had for its closing scene the murder of a Swedish king which had taken place nearly half a century earlier, all went well till the murder scene came on, when a very dignified old gentleman in the stage box called out angrily:

"Absurd! They've got it all wrong!"

The manager himself heard this plain spoken comment, and, being naturally disturbed by so sweeping a condemnation, he sought out the critic and politely begged to know what fault he had to find with it.

"Why, my good sir," cried the old man, with an air of authority, "the whole grouping of the scene is incorrect! You have made them kill the king to the right of the door, whereas we murdered him on the left!"

Barbarous Tattooing.

Formerly the Marquesans had such a barbarous manner of doing their tattoo work that it often took nearly six months to heal that which had been done in a single day. They covered the whole body of the males with crudely imitated rough designs, circles, curves and many designs of small work, including round and angular spots, even to the finger nails and the top of the head. Thus, beginning at virility, some were upward of thirty years old before their tattooing was completed. Marquesan tattooing was perhaps more remarkable in appearance than that of any other primitive race.

N. P. HIGH PUPILS IN PLEASING PLAY

Present "The Deacon Entangled" to Good Crowd at Columbus Club.

With thrills and laughter attached to it, "The Deacon Entangled" was presented last evening by the junior class of North Plainfield High School in a clever manner before an exceedingly large audience in the Columbus Club auditorium. After rehearsing for two months, the entire cast gave evidence of careful coaching.

William Seidel, impersonating Calvin Spangler, a diamond hero, was a favorite with his witticisms and by the clever manner in which he led the deacon into a precarious predicament, from which he extricated him when he won the thrilling game for the championship of the world by a remarkable hit.

Deacon Penrose, whose high ideals and sedateness of character slowly disappeared as the play progressed, was excellently characterized by Andrew McDonough.

Enthusiastic over the topic of foreign missions, Robert Daly, acting as Rev. Dr. Sopher, caused much merriment by his unexpected exclamations on this topic.

Marguerite Barkalew and Katharine Brittings, the daughters of the deacon and Rev. Sopher respectively, were ideally adapted to their parts.

The rest of the cast included: Harferty; a policeman Alfred Willett; a plain clothesman, William Capeon; ry Baxter, a sport writer, Mr. Rai- a baseball played, William Fass; Mrs. Penrose, Mildred Smith; Katy, the servant girl, Lillian Spencer.

The success of the play could not be reflected to any person other than Miss Irene Duchesne, who, as coach, was responsible for the smooth manner in which the proceedings were run off. During the evening, Miss Duchesne was presented with a handsome desk set by the junior class.

NATIONAL AID CHAPTER TO BE FORMED TUESDAY

The executive committee appointed at a preliminary session a short time ago has issued a call for a general meeting of all those interested in the formation of a Plainfield and North Plainfield chapter of the National Special Aid Society for American Preparedness. It will be held next Tuesday morning, May 9, at Cedarcroft, 1693 Park avenue, beginning at 10 o'clock. All interested are cordially invited to be present as the permanent organization will be effected, officials elected and other important business transacted.

Following the formation, plans for constructive work in gardening, household economy, Red Cross work, sewing and other classes for preparation and aid to the country in times of peace or war will be discussed. At the preliminary meeting held last week, fully one hundred of Plainfields prominent women were present and great enthusiasm was expressed. It is hoped that a still larger number will be present next Tuesday.

LINEMAN HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH

William C. Ryder, a lineman in the Public Service electric department, is confined to his home on Grant avenue with painful injuries, received yesterday afternoon when a pole on which he was working at Fourth street and Monroe avenue snapped off at the base, throwing him to the ground, a distance of twenty-five feet. He was hurried to his home, where Drs. P. B. Cregar and Albert H. Pittis attended him. The physician found that he had sustained a sprained arm, numerous bad bruises and general contusions and there is a possibility that he may be injured internally.

Ryder was located near the top of the pole when he felt it giving way and with rare presence of mind swung around to make a jump at the proper time. The supply wagon was in the path of the falling pole and it afforded the endangered man an opportunity to swing clear. The wagon protected him afterward and also saved an automobile belonging to C. W. Krausse from being smashed. Mr. Krausse used his car to carry Ryder to his home.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS.

Reports received at noon today from the bedsides of two of Plainfield's prominent lawyers indicate that both are improving from their respective illness. Judge W. R. Codington, who has been confined to his home on Sandford avenue since Monday had a comfortable night and seems to be much better. There was a noticeable improvement this morning in the condition of Robert Newton Crane, who has been ill at his home on Leland avenue since Wednesday with pneumonia.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Dear Sir—I enclose the conclusion of a great speech made by the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. It is quite applicable to the present times and I take the liberty of suggesting to you that its publication now would be timely in view of the war, the religious revival in Plainfield and the attempt to revivify the protection doctrine.

This quotation from Mr. Beecher's speech is taken from the little book of that eminent statesman and ex-ambassador, John Bigelow, who went to his long home last year. The title of this beautiful book is "Folly of Building Temples of Peace with Untempered Mortar." Mr. Bigelow comments as follows on this speech:

"A more condign indictment of our revenue system, a more just impeachment of it as the policy of any body politic claiming the right to be regarded as a Christian nation, was probably never before uttered in so few words. Yet, strangely enough, I have heard of but one other American clergyman from whose lips this sin has been denounced as 'a reproach to any people.' I would not mean to intimate that all the clergy are protectionists or that no one of them has denounced the protective system as vigorously as Mr. Beecher did; but I have never heard of any other American clergyman but Mr. Birckhead, of St. George's church in New York doing it, nor did I ever hear of any of the apostles being disciplined by any ecclesiastical organization whatever.

It is a melancholy fact that our "hireling clergy" as the Society of Friends were wont to call the salaried Protestant ministers of the Gospel, are so dependent for their daily bread upon the rich beneficiaries of the tariff that their mouths are as effectually closed to the iniquity in which it originates and to the depravity which it generates as the ears of the Syrian Pharisees were closed to the spiritual ethics of the Sermon on the Mount.

"With what emotion can any pastor who has deliberately winked at this national iniquity read these words of the prophet Isaiah, which are addressed as directly to professing Christians today as ever to the children of Israel:

"Hear the word of the Lord, ye rulers of Sodom. To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? said the Lord * * Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me * * I cannot away with iniquity and the solemn meeting. Your new moons and your appointed feasts my soul hateth; they are a trouble unto me; I am wear to bear them. And when we spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea, when we make many prayers, I will not hear; your hands are full of blood * * How is the faithful city become an harlot! She that was full of judgment! righteousness lodged in her, but now murderers. Thy silver is become dross, thy wine mixed with water. Thy princes are rebellious, and the companions of thieves; every one loveth gifts, and followeth after rewards; they judge not the fatherless, neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them."

"I have thus given what I conceive to be pretty conclusive reasons against building temples of peace with untempered mortar; against the concotion of peace organizations with the left hand while deliberately and persistently waging a flagrant tariff war against every commercial nation, not excepting our own, by striving simultaneously to support our government by duties levied upon foreign merchandise which we are persistently striving to exclude from our markets."

Yours very truly,
L. J. ELLIS.

724 Watchung avenue, Plainfield, N. J., May 4, 1916.

The conclusion of the speech of Henry Ward Beecher delivered about 1885, is as follows:

"But while others will tonight talk with you about figures, and tell you what are the results of protection upon the business of the country, I plead for the principle of liberty. There have always been plenty of people in this free country to doubt the expediency of freedom. Liberty of conscience was thought dangerous, but our forefathers fought battles for that, and gained it for us. Liberty for the slave was thought to be full of peril, and predictions abounded on every side that emancipation would bring ruin and bloodshed upon the country. But we liberated the slaves, and it has been found by the South itself that liberty was better than slavery, and that the South has prospered under liberty as it never did prosper or could have prospered before. The Republican party has hitherto stood for liberty, and therefore I have stood with it. But now I take my stand on liberty of commerce, as just as essential and just as sound as liberty of conscience, liberty of speech, liberty of the press, and liberty of the person. I believe that liberty is just as safe and just as necessary in commerce as in anything else, and I look upon this battle for freedom of commerce as only one part of the great battle for freedom which we have been fighting for years.

"I reject the doctrine of 'protection' as opposed not only to the principles of liberty but to the essential principles of Christianity. I regard it as in its very essence anti-Christian and immoral. And the fact that such theories as have been advanced by the high protectionists have found so much favor in this country is not creditable to its Christian character. The fundamental doctrine of Christianity is that all men are brethren. The fundamental doctrine of protectionism is that all men are not brethren. Christianity teaches that all men, in all parts of the world, should love each other. Protectionism teaches that all men on one side of an imaginary line should hate, or at least disregard, all who live on the other side of that line. Not only so, but protectionism teaches Christians to hate their fellow Christians more than they do pagans. We do not build up our tariff against heathen countries. Our Congressmen are not specially concerned to keep out the products of Africa. It is against Christian countries that all the energy of protectionism is directed. And England, the country which is most like our own in matters of religion, being all Christian and mainly Protestant Christians, is the very country which our protectionist Protestant Christians in America hate the most and strive to injure the most. We send missionaries abroad to convert pagans into Christians and teach them the arts of civilized life. And then, the moment the missionaries have, with infinite pains, taught the converted pagan to make anything fit to send to this market, we hasten to build up a higher tariff wall to keep it out. Our country was a larger exporter of religion, sent millions of dollars to heathen countries to instil the principles of Christianity into the minds of unbelievers while the article went a-begging at home."

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

"This Is the Life," a two-act burlesque by George Totten Smith, will be presented by the Merry Rounders Company at the Columbia Theatre the week beginning Monday afternoon, May 8. The principal scenes of the piece include the interior of a well-known fashionable millinery shop on Fifth avenue, an apartment in a famous New York hotel, an interesting part of Chinatown, a popular roof garden, the exterior of the George M. Cohan theatre and the deck of a modern ocean liner. In respect of scenic accessories, the production is said to excel those that are customarily shown on the stage of the Columbia while the costuming is described as exceedingly beautiful. Incidental to the burlesque several attractive vaudeville specialties will be introduced and a large chorus made up of both male and female voices will render a score or more popular musical numbers. Exhibitions of all sorts of dancing, performed by experts, are announced and this feature of the performance is said to be one of its most attractive elements. The cast embraces a number of burlesque's most popular players, including Abe Reynolds, George F. Hayes, Jack McGowan, Mae Latham, Ursa McGowan and Zella Clayton. This is announced as the last of the regular weekly changes of bill at the Columbia. On the following Monday, May 15, a special production will be made according to the established policy at the Columbia and which is calculated to continue throughout the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Frederickson and daughter, formerly of Plainfield, who have been visiting Mrs. Frederickson's parents here, will return to their home in Pittsburgh tomorrow.

MANY PERMITS ISSUED IN APRIL

Building Inspector T. O. Doane Granted Twenty-eight Applications for Structures.

VALUE TOTALS $61,545

Number of Permits Since First of the Present Year is Seventy-nine, Representing Expenditures of $313,746—Table of Work Done in City.

Although there was a decrease in the valuations, a resume of building activities during April shows that the month ended last Saturday with the largest number of permits granted for any month during the year. Most of the applications were for buildings running into the many thousands that were recorded when the application for the Federal postoffice was passed upon. On the whole, the month closed satisfactorily and there still exists the belief that general conditions have a healthy trend toward a much higher percentage than what was noticed last year.

During April, twenty-eight permits were issued by Inspector Doane, calling for the erection of eight dwellings, nine garages, and eleven alteration jobs. These permits call for the expenditure of $48,485 for new buildings in various parts of the city, $13,060 for alterations and improvements, a total of $61,545 for the month. These figures do not include the great amount of jobbing work, repairing, and other smaller work which do not require a building permit.

As told in last Saturday's issue of the Daily Press, the new work started in this city since January 1 has created a scarcity of building craftsmen here, and indications are that a premium on labor will continue throughout the entire summer.

Up to May 1, seventy-nine permits have been issued by Inspector Doane, of which twenty-eight were for alterations. The total expenditures for the first four months aggregates $313,746, of which $50,010 is for alterations.

The following two tables show the record of April of this year and a comparison with the same month of last year.

April 1916.

Ward	New Buildings	Alterations	Totals
1st	$ 3,600	$2,960	$ 6,560
2nd	12,200	3,600	15,800
3rd	31,510	3,200	34,710
4th	1,179	3,300	4,475
Totals	$48,485	$13,060	$61,545

April 1915.

Ward	New Buildings	Alterations	Totals
1st	$ 3,450	....	$ 3,450
2nd	45,850	$7,500	53,350
3rd	....	2,790	2,790
4th	2,500	....	2,500
Totals	$51,890	$10,290	$62,090

The following table shows the type of buildings, the number of each type, and the aggregate cost of each type, for which permits have been issued between January 1 and April 30.

Type	No. of each	Cost

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE POND ADDITION

Officials Considering Plans But Nothing Definite Has Developed Yet.

The rush of work at the Pond Tool Works plant on South Second street, has taxed the capacity of the present main structure to such an extent that the officials are now considering the erection of an addition. While nothing definite has been arrived at as yet, it is quite probable that in the near future the new part will be built at the east end of the factory, nearest Grant avenue, paralleling the portion built some years ago. The new part is to be to the north of this and running close to the New Jersey Central tracks.

Rumors have existed during the past weeks that an addition measuring fully 500 feet would be built at the west end of the present main shop, taking up a large portion of the vacant ground the company owns near Clinton avenue. In conversation with an official yesterday, a Daily Press reporter learned that no such idea has been entertained. The department needing more room is what is known as the "erecting gang" and it is for this that the addition to the east mentioned above has been given consideration.

The tentative sketches for such an addition to the plant call for a building 250 feet long, with a width to correspond to that of the present machine shop. If it is decided to build, the job will undoubtedly go to the Flint Construction Company of Worcester, Mass., which has erected all the Pond buildings in this city. The matter is now in the hands of the New York office of the Niles-Bement-Pond Company in New York, which controls the local plant.

The Pond shop is the largest factory in Plainfield, and at the present time is working day and night on rush orders brought about by the European war. The extra large number of men taken on has made the need of more room more apparent than ever before, and if the contemplated addition is decided upon, it will materially relieve the congestion.

IN THE SUBURBS

Work started yesterday on the repairs to the roof of the borough building in Dunellen. The contract is held by the Apgar Construction Company.

Improvements at the Dan-von Minden house on Edwards avenue, Dunellen, are about completed and former Postmaster Charles S. Day and family are now moving there from their former home in Valmere cottage.

Frank Marsh, who moved away from New Market some little time ago, going to Cranford, has come back to the village, himself and family moving into the house of his mother on Center street.

Superintendent Harry R. Cooke of the Watchung Water Company, has purchased from the Watchung Investment Company a house belonging to the latter and situated on Second street, Dunellen, on the block between Washington and Lincoln avenues. Mr. Cooke and family moved into their new home the first of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Tinsman are now settled in their new home, the George F. Giles house, corner of Dunellen and Lincoln avenues, Dunellen, recently vacated by Joseph Fromeyer and family.

Messrs. Eric Benson and Corvin Agar and their families have now moved from the Alvah Gray building, corner of North and Washington avenues, Dunellen, to the M. T. Moynihan house on Front street.

The apartments in the Fred K. Wilcox house on Park avenue, Dunellen, vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Cooke, have been rented by Edward Rockford, of Long Island, who, with his family, took possession last week.

Repairs in the plumbing and tinning line are being made this week at the apartments over the former Herbert L. Pierce grocery, where a family new to the village, has just moved in. The plumbing and tinning is being done by Contractor Otis M. Webber, of Dunellen.

The Apgar Construction Company has finished the building of a piazza on the front of the Fred Haynes house on Washington avenue, Dunellen. The improvement, which makes a very sightly addition, is now being painted by Contractors Kirchner and Wormser.

The repairs to the house on South avenue, owned by George F. Giles, and which was badly damaged by fire two or three weeks ago, are being pushed to completion. Contractor Edward Daniel is in charge of the job.

Contractor Phillips is making extensive alterations to the residence of M. A. Hall on South avenue, Fanwood. The entire porch has been torn off and a new one being built that will be much larger. A portchore will be built over the driveway.

Tony Albert is building a two and a half story house on Paterson road that will be completed in a few months. It will cost approximately $5,000 and have modern conveniences. A New York contractor is also building a house on Midway avenue that will cost $6,000.

LOCAL BUILDING CONTRACT.

The following local building contract has been filed in the office of the county clerk during the past week:

Eugene D. Johnson, with Charles Bicknell, entire work new building, Webster place, Plainfield....$2,659

A BRICK COLONIAL HOUSE

DESIGNED BY CHAS S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

THE size of this brick colonial house is 36 ft. in width and 40 ft. in depth, exclusive of front piazza and rear porch. The outside walls are faced with oriental brick. There is a full basement under the house with concrete foundation, the first story is finished in oak floor and the second story finished in birch, with birch floor.

There is large attic space, but it is not intended to be finished in this estimate. The front entrance is through a central vestibule, opening into the main living room, that is 22 ft. 6 in. in length by 18 ft. 6 in. in width. Wide French doors in front, connecting with a glazed sun parlor, 15 ft. by 11 ft. in size. At the rear of the den is the main staircase built on the combination plan, with basement stairs underneath, grade entrance and stairs from platform to kitchen at the rear.

The dining room is on the right and the kitchen on the left, with pantry and closets between. The second story has four good chambers, large, ample closets and a liberal sized bath room, also a separate toilet room for guest chamber.

The birch finish in this story is to be enameled white and the doors stained mahogany red. The attic story is lighted with gable windows at each end and in the rear and dormer windows in the front. The estimated cost of this house is $5,500 to $6,500, exclusive of heating and plumbing. This is a very plain but substantial house. The shape makes it suitable to a city lot. The stories are each 9 ft. and the walls are kept low. Good rooms can be fitted up in the attic if desired at small additional expense.

MORE IRISH REBELS ARE PUT TO DEATH

Seven In All Have Now Been Executed.

London, May 6.—The execution of four more Irish rebel leaders is officially announced.

Joseph Plunkett, one of the signatories to the "proclamation of the republic of Ireland;" Edward Daly, Michael O'Hanrahan and William Pearse were shot in Dublin after being court martialed and convicted of high treason. This makes the number of those who have paid the penalty of death for the revolt seven. Peter H. Pearce, Thomas J. Clarke and Thomas MacDonagh having been executed three days ago. James Connolly, who was "commander in chief" of the Sinn Fein rebels, still lies in prison badly wounded.

Fifteen other rebels, the official announcement of the executions added, were sentenced to death, but the sentences were commuted to ten years penal servitude. They are:

Thomas Bevan, Thomas Walsh, Finian Lynch, Michael Mervyn, Dennis O'Callaghan, P. E. Sweeney, Patrick McNestry, Peter Clancy, William Tobin, George Irvine, John Doherty, J. J. Walsh, James McLinn, J. J. Reid and John Williams.

"Another prisoner, John McGarry, was commuted from death to eight years," adds the official statement. "Two others, Francis Fahey and Richard Davys, were sentenced to ten years."

James M. Sullivan, former American minister to Santo Domingo, is still held in an English prison in connection with the revolt in Dublin, where he was arrested. A report has it that a relative of Sullivan in Dublin was closely affiliated with the Sinn Fein movement.

The foreign office telegraphed to Dublin in quest of information regarding his arrest. The message was sent upon intercession by Ambassador Page.

Missing Son in Army.

Marion, O., May 6.—After having searched for his lost son, Charles, five years and after giving him up for dead, H. N. Nece has received a letter from him saying he was well and happy and that he had just returned from Rio Grande, Tex. He said he was expecting to be sent into Mexico with his company any time.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, MAY 6, 1916.

On Saturdays the editorial column of the Daily Press is conducted, at our request, by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is Miss Lillian Lamson, supervisor of Public Recreation Work in Plainfield.

THE FUTURE OF THE COMMUNITY CENTER.

The Community Center movement in this country dates back only seven years to the Social Center of Rochester, N. Y., where the city schools were opened for the first time for neighborhood gatherings, civic meetings, educational lectures, community chorals and various forms of recreational activities. The movement today extends from coast to coast and its development is proceeding rapidly on a national scale. The Community Center idea is securing a foothold in old American neighborhoods, in new immigrant colonies, in city as well as in country districts. It is implanting a spirit of true democracy, teaching the value of neighborly kindliness. The Community Center provides a place where all members of the community irrespective of rank or creed many meet on a common ground and make their common interests more effective through organization and co-operation. The development of this spirit of co-operation is inducing neighborhood self activity. Sometimes it is just a few public spirited citizens with a vision of the possibilities of the work who become the inspiration of the entire neighborhood. Perhaps, through their enthusiasm a community chorus is formed, or it may be a public forum is organized where civic affairs may be discussed, or some simple form of recreation may be conducted because it can be carried on cheaper and better in the wholesome environment of the schoolhouse. From a single simple activity comes the inspiration for larger and better things. A community consciousness is aroused. The pioneers in the work find that in forgetting self for the good of the cause the blessings have rebounded, enriching their own lives and broadening their sympathies. The new comers fast learn the joy of service, and that the time has come to do things with people instead of for them.

"A Community Center is not primarily a building or a set of activities, but an organizing center for the life of the neighborhood." The principal of self-help (self-government and self-support) is the foundation upon which it is built. A new era in social service and the organization of leisure life is really begining. In time the movement will include not only every phase of recreational activity but all forms of social service, civic training, vocational bureaus, and health and medical service, meeting in hundreds of ways the needs of the neighborhood.

The near future will find in Plainfield several Community Center Associations organized in our school buildings which will take care of a large part of the recreation and adult education of the city. The conduct of public forums, chorals, civic clubs, debating societies, classes in physical culture and the like will be the first step toward a community consciousness. The get-to-gether spirit will grow and spread until the true community spirit will find expression.

The West End Community Center, which was organized some months ago in the Washington School, is a splendid example of the self-supporting, self-governing type of neighborhood organization. Aside from supporting a dozen different kinds of activities this past winter it has added considerably to the equipment of the building. There is promise of greater things in the months to come. May we hope that the new Community Center Associations, which are to be organized in different sections of the city, will soon catch them up and even pass them by.

BRITAIN YIELDS IN S. S. CHINA DISPUTE

Decides to Release Captured Teutons.

London, May 6.—The British government has decided to release the thirty-eight Germans and Austrians who were taken from the American steamship China and will issue such orders.

This action was not unexpected, as it was known that the last American demand declined to admit any form of legality in the reasons given by the foreign office for the detention of the passengers.

The formal document in reply to the final American note on the subject is not yet ready; but, according to Lord Robert Cecil, minister of war trade, it will be carefully framed so as not to admit the general right of belligerents to enjoy the protection of a neutral flag. In the present case Great Britain admits itself in the wrong in regard to the facts outlined in the American remonstrance, but the reply will be couched in such terms that no general precedent is established and British doctrines in regard to the seizures of individuals of hostile nationality on neutral ships will be safeguarded.

The state department at Washington has contended that the facts in the case are similar to those of the famous Trent affair; but, while it is not known what attitude the British reply will adopt toward the argument, Lord Robert Cecil gives it as his personal opinion that the two cases present wide differences.

BIBLE SUNDAY TO BE OBSERVED AT TRINITY CHURCH

At the morning service at 11 o'clock, at Trinity Reformed church, Bible Sunday will be observed. The pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, will preach on the subject, "Why I Believe the Bible."

The Scripture lesson will be read from a Bible 300 years old. It is a translation from the original by Theodore Beza, and was printed in London in 1616. It has been kindly loaned for this occasion by Mrs. Charles Place Leggett, and has been in possession of the Leggett family for many generations.

The American Bible Society, which is celebrating its centennial, was organized in the consistory rooms of the Garden Street Dutch Reformed church, New York city, on May 8, 1816.

Installation of elders and deacons will take place at the morning service. The Biederwolf hymn book will be used at the service, and the members of the Biederwolf choir and orchestra from this church will lead the singing. The Bible school will meet at 9:30 a. m.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Mother.

When mother goes on a trip,
E'en for a single day,
Father chortles, "I-Yip,
I-Yip-I-Yaddy-I-Aye."
He bubbles over with joy,
As cheerful as any boy,
And he says: "Now I'm free
For a jambouree,
And I'll hit the spots
That are high, by gee."
When he ambles homeward at eventide
To change his suit and his shirt, beside,
He can't find collar,
He can't find tie,
For his duds he searches
Low and high,
And the house is lonely beyond compare.
It's plain that there's something missing there.
And he fumes and frets
And worries and sweats
And the home seems filled
With vain regrets.
And soon it is very plain to see
That he'll find no joy in his evening spree.
Then he sits him down
With a darksome frown,
And he grabs some paper and grabs a pen
With a whoop of joy
He has wired: "Come home on the 11:10."

Uncle Abner

A star ball player must spend about all his salary trying to live up to the automobiles that are presented to him by an admiring public.

A feller who is paying alimony to two or three ex-wives can be pardoned for indulging in a bit of pessimism occasionally.

There are just about as many homely women as there are homely men in this country, but the former are better hands at concealin' the fact.

There are times when even a lodge button doesn't guarantee you that a feller is going to give you a square deal.

Many a feller is judged by the cigars that are named after him.

Hank Tumms and Hod Peters are such bitter enemies that they vote different tickets every four years just to knock each other out.

There are a lot of book critics in this country who couldn't get one of their own published on a bet.

It takes a man a long time to get rich by saving cigar coupons.

There is only one thing more unreliable than boardin' house hash and that is boardin' house gossip.

The trouble with a good many ball players is that they do too much batting at night and not enough in the daytime.

The Highbrow.

Mary is a highbrow, for she's been away to college.
And she has picked up quite a lot of ornamental knowledge.
Mother's manners are passe and father's are just horrid.
Mary comments on them in a manner which is torrid.
Old folks don't know how to eat,
And their meals are obsolete.

Old folks don't know how to dress, and Mary is explaining
What to wear and how to act when they are entertaining.
Dad must throw his pipe away and wear his coat at dinner,
Ma must buy a poodle dog if she would be a winner.
They must learn the icy stare,
And shake hands up in the air.

But this course of training is at most but temporary;
Fate is going to play a neat and nifty joke on Mary.
When she marries, and she will, for sure some day or other,
She will be old-fashioned like her father and her mother.
Can't be so all-fired polite
When you're married. Ain't it right?

- Proctor's Theatre -

Today's features at Proctor's include Hamilton Revelle, the eminent Metro star, in "The Price of Malice," Minerva Courtenay imitating Charlie Chaplin in "The Champion," the last presentation of the big local photoplay, "It Happened In Plainfield," Harry Watson as "Musty Suffer" in a funny cartoon comedy, and a novel attraction will be furnished in "World War in Kidland." This is a series of juvenile comedies to be presented at Proctor's every Saturday, the cast of which is made up entirely of child screen stars. Such a booking will appeal principally to the children and parents are urged to bring the little ones to enjoy this novel treat. Always on the alert to provide the utmost in photoplay entertainment for their patrons, it seems that the management has now exceeded themselves for on Monday they will present the two greatest screen stars now before the public on one program. Charlie Chaplin, the highest salaried professional in the world, whose salay amounts to something like $670,000 a year, will appear in his latest, greatest and most expensive comedy feature ever released, his burlesque on "Carmen." This production cost exactly four times as much as Charlie Chaplin comedies cost a year ago, and is by far the most expensive comedy feature ever released. Not content with providing such a wonderful headline attraction the management has gone further and will present on the same program, Mary Pickford, the highest salaried screen actress in the world, in one of her most delightful creations, "Madame Butterfly," many of the scenes of which were taken right in this vicinity on Leland avenue, and others in the vicinity of outlying towns. To offer such a meritorious list of attractions on one program is startling to say the least, but when announcement is made that these extraordinary and unprecedented production will be offered to the patrons at absolutely no increase in prices, is too astounding to bear the mere description of words. Although the cost of booking these productions was almost prohibitive the management has made arrangements to present them at the regular rates of admission.

GOING LIKE THOSE THAT WENT BEFORE

--Astor Theatre--

If a mother has deserted her baby daughter and husband to share the fortunes of a profligate count, does she make atonement for the deed by paying the death penalty for a crime committed by that daughter? This is the proposition set forth in "The Spider," a Paramount picture, in which Pauline Frederick is starred at the Astor Theatre today. Beside the dramatic situations, the play has the additional interest of presenting Miss Frederick in absolutely different roles—the one a notorious Parisian beauty, and the other her charming and ingenious daughter whom the woman deserted when she was a little baby. Frank Losee and Thomas Holding are among the well-known players who appear in support of Miss Frederick in this great Famous Players production. On Monday, Jesse L. Lasky presents the leading character star of the screen, Theodore Roberts, in a superb picturization of the American classic, Mark Twain's "Pudd'nhead Wilson," with the consent of the Mark Twain Co., a photoplay of combined humor and stirring drama, tempered by a deep note of human sympathy and heart-interest. Lawyer Wilson, a young man, comes to a small Missouri town to practice. On his first day in town, angered at a dog snapping at his heels, he remarks, "I wish I owned that dog. If I did, I would kill my half." The subtlety of this remark passed over the heads of the townspeople as they couldn't figure out what would become of the other half of the dog if Wilson killed his half. This remark, his eccentric speech and his habit of securing thumb prints from every one with whom he came in contact induced the town wits to call him "Pudd'n head Wilson," a nickname that remained with him throughout his life. This nickname blighted his career as a lawyer, but he manager to eke out a fairly good existence. In addition to this big production, we will show the Burton-Holmes Travelogue, a Vitagraph comedy and other interesting photoplays. Always a clean bill at the Astor Theatre; bring the kiddies and spend a pleasant afternoon out of the hot sun and into the cool and refreshing air of the Astor. We show nothing but first-run Paramount, Bluebird and other Broadway features, for which the Astor Theatre is noted for. We give Travelstamps.

RIDING LION WITH COOK AND WILSON CIRCUS COMING HERE

In its wild state, the lion, lurking on the edge of the native villages or clearings, will almost invariably attack horses and cattle, and, on the other hand, hoof animals are mortally afraid of the lion. These, it is announced, by the press agent, are among the many reasons why the performance of the riding lion in the Cook & Wilson wild animal circus is so remarkable. In training the lion it was necessary to overcome not only the instinctive desire of the animal to attack the horse, but also to convince the horse that there was nothing to fear from the lion. In the earlier stages of training, so long as the horse could see the big "cat," there was no difficulty. But the moment the lion sprang on the horse's back there was an equine panic. When this fear was finally overcome, and a mutual respect and confidence grew up between the two animals, the work of training was comparatively simple.

The riding lion act given by the Cook & Wilson circus is the only successful performance of its kind now before the public. Horse and lion, it is said, so thoroughly synchronize their work, that there is not the slightest hesitation. The lion jumps from the ground or from pedestals to the back of the horse, or from the horse to the pedestals, with the confidence and dexterity of an accomplished human equestrian, and performs various other clever tricks in a way that suggests an intelligent effort to follow the instructions of the trainer; while the horse co-operates in a most interesting way to make the exhibition the most remarkable display of its kind ever seen in a circus arena. It is not surprising that it has been one of the trained animal sensations of the season.

In addition to the riding lion, Cook & Wilson offer the largest group of forest-bred trained lions in the United States; thrilling performances by a troupe of tigers and pumas; an exhibition of startling novelty by a big company of bears, and sundry other offerings in which leopards, panthers, hyenas, elephants, monkeys, dogs, horses, ponies, donkeys and other animals are cleverly utilized. In addition to this, there is a tripling circus performance in which many of the world's greatest riders, acrobats, aerialists, gymnasts and other celebrities appear. The big show will exhibit in Plainfield, Friday, May 19, and the event will be signalized by a picturesque morning parade, in which all the processional resources of the show will be seen free upon the streets.

.· Plainfield Theatre. ·.

Coming to the Plainfield Theatre next Monday at the top of a fine bill, is "The Midnight Frolics," the biggest act in vaudeville. Sixteen people are in the cast, in addition to an orchestra on the stage. The thirty minutes of solid entertainment it provides comprises singing, dancing, special scenery, fetching costumes, a musical program and a chorus of kiddies. This act has been playing the highest class houses in New York and other large cities, and comes to Plainfield in its entirety, remaining for the full three days—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The program, Monday, will include the latest Charlie Chaplin comedy picture turned out by the greatest comedy producers in filmdom. It takes three reels to show Charlie in his latest escapade, and there is a laugh every second. Don't fail to see this picture if you want to drive the blues so far away they will never bother you again. There will be other picture features on the program both Tuesday and Wednesday.

The engagement of Theo, the balloon girl, who has been appearing at the Plainfield Theatre since Thursday, will come to a conclusion tonight. This act has been one of the greatest surprises seen at the Second street playhouse this year, and has been drawing large crowds. It includes singing and dancing by an assisting company and a climax that is the last word in sensationalism when Theo rises above the heads of the people in the audience in a miniature balloon swinging about on a level with the balcony and descending to one of the orchestra aisles.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Little Girl, Dorothy, Lives on Her Father's Ship.

Learns a Great Deal From Her Daddy.

"TELL us a sea story, please, daddy?" asked two children.

"I can tell you a true one!" cried daddy, taking them on his lap. "The last time the good sailing ship Daylight, which belongs to England, went on her trip to China she took along the captain's child, Dorothy, who is about fourteen years old—just the age of the Daylight. Before the ship came into an American port this child had traveled 30,000 miles, which is a nice trip for a little girl to make. Don't you think so, Evelyn?"

"I think it's a long trip for a great big man to make," said Evelyn.

"Well, one of the adventures of this child happened on the way to America, when a terrible storm came up and flooded her cabin. You see, she forgot to do as her father told her. He knew a big storm was coming up, and he told Dorothy to close her port, which means a window on shipboard. But Dorothy was very sleepy and tumbled into her bunk without so much as a thought about a storm. The ship was sailing through a tropical sea, where storms come up very suddenly, and the first thing Dorothy knew water was crashing into her cabin, almost flooding it. Things she liked and wanted began to float off on the stream, but her lot wasn't half as bad as Lee Jow's, the Chinese steward. He left the port open in his pantry and almost wrecked it. When he started to go in to close the port some pepper floated into his eyes, and his dishes flew at him. Poor Lee was so scared that he fell down and prayed to his Chinese gods, who seemed to have no respect for his dishes, after all."

"Does Dorothy like to live on a boat and never go on land?" asked Jack.

"She thinks sailing the seas lots more fun than living in poor warring Europe—lots more fun than going to school in a stuffy classroom. And she learns a great deal from her captain daddy and from all the strange countries she visits when the Daylight puts into port. In fact, she would be quite happy traveling around the world with her father and mother if it was not for the fact that all her brothers are now fighting with the English army. Because the Daylight has to shift its course and go suddenly to ports far away, all during the past year Dorothy has heard very little from her brothers, whom she loves very dearly. So, although she escapes stuffy schoolrooms and sees a lot of this wonderful world, there is always a little sad voice in her heart that says her brothers may be wounded in some hospital. Now give me a kiss for this story and skip off to bed like good children," daddy finished.

"How many brothers has she got?" Jack wanted to know.

"Three!" daddy called after him.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS EVA LEONARD

Young Gordon Thinks Himself the Most Fortunate of Men.

Ethel was combing her hair when Ralph entered the bedroom. Her head was bent and her hair fell in a golden cloud over her face and shoulders. He gloried in her hair. The room was in a divine confusion. It seemed to be full of her and her multitudinous things. It was not their bedroom, it was hers. And he realized that it would take all his talent for orderliness to make himself comfortable in the limitied space she had allowed him to have for his own. Though he felt like an invader, it was a delicious experience. He thought: "This is a fitting house for her grace and beauty. I must buy it." He desired to be senselessly extravagant, to surround her with all luxury, to be splendidly generous with her. "I've got to succeed financially. She must have everything. One has but to look at her to see that luxury belong to her," he thought. Aloud he said:

"Where am I to sit to change my shoes? Every last chair is full of your paraphernalia."

"What an old fusser you are, Ralph," exclaimed the girl, tossing back her hair and clearing a chair by dumping the garments it held onto the foot of the bed. As she passed him he caught her white arms in both hands and drew her toward him. She lifted her face to him and gave him a hurried kiss.

"Don't hinder me now. I must get my hair done. I may have to comb it two or three times to get it right, and I certainly want it right the first place I go in this little burg."

"What are you going to wear?" he asked, releasing the face which he had taken between his hands to kiss. "Do not overdress, for this is not a dressy town, you know."

"I suppose I must let my loveliest clothes lie here and go out of style for want of a place to wear them," she pouted.

"You surely do not want the ladies to think you are trying to show off your finery by being conspicuously dressed," answered her husband.

"No, suppose I must content myself with a pretty afternoon dress. This simple little white silk." She held it up for inspection.

"That will be all right," he assented to the question asked by her eyes, for she had laid down the dress and returned to the hair dressing.

Long before the hair was arranged to suit the little lady Ralph was all dressed, but he sat watching the calm deliberation of her preparations. Finally she put on the dress and he sprang to hook it for her, while she rewarded him for the service by laughing at his clumsiness. Then she stood smiling and posing for his verdict, knowing well what it would be. It was marvelous how everything she did was so intensely feminine. She enchanted him and he caught her in his arms to the utter disregard of her draperies and her hair and kissed her rapturously.

"Now if you have spoiled my hair, after all the time I spent on it——" began the bride, all rosy from her kiss.

"No hair or dress can ever keep me from kissing you when you look so lovely," answered her husband, looking down into the clear blue eyes. And she smiled back well pleased.

"Oh, yet, I love him," she thought. "He is very good looking."

DIES IN STEEL PLANT BLOWUP

One Worker Killed, Three Seriously Hurt.

WHOLE TOWN IS TERRIFIED

Man Poured Water on Molten Metal. Attacks by German Sympathizers Had Been Feared and Bomb Plot Was First Suspected—Guards Hold Crowds at Bay.

Harrison, May 6. — One man was killed and three others were seriously injured as the result of an explosion in the ordnance department of the Crucible Steel works here.

The explosion occurred in a part of the plant in which the manufacture of munitions is in progress. The steel comes pouring out of the furnaces into the room, and the four men injured were employed to gather the slag or waste. Water is used in the room at a certain period of the process.

At the plant it was said that the accident was due to the man in charge of turning on the water in an effort to hasten matters. Two hours should elapse between the time the metal is run to the time the water is turned on. This time the water was turned on when the exposed surface of the steel had begun to harden and cool, but while the under part was still at white-heat and long before the two hour period had ended.

No one at the plant would say who the man was that was responsible. It was said that he had been at work on that same job for eleven years.

This is the third and most serious accident the plant has had.

Hundreds of persons in the town who were aware of the fact that the company had placed guards in fear of plotters rushed to the scene when the roar of the explosion was heard a mile away. The police and the fire departments sent their entire forces to the scene, where for an hour and a half the fire was beyond control.

The four men, who were carried from the building by fellow workmen from other departments, were rushed to the hospital. John Nichols of 12 Wall street, Newark, was fatally burned, and Frank Balinsky of 215 Jersey street, Harrison, was so seriously injured that he died on reaching the hospital. The others injured were John Prescia, 224 Oliver street, Newark, and Frank Bolen of 12 Wall street, Newark. They were unconscious at the hospital, suffering from burns on the chest, back, head and arms. They were expected to live, however.

INDICT JUDGE HAHN.

Detectives Also Named For Alleged Divorce Suit Conspiracy.

Newark, May 6.—The indictments charging conspiracy to defraud against former Police Judge Simon Hahn of this city, now debarred, and John Gregory and his son, Francis Gregory of the Gregory Detective agency, were read before Judge Martin.

Assistant Prosecutor Mott told Judge Martin that Hahn is now in Boston, but promised to have the former police judge in court in a few days.

The indictments are the outgrowth of $25,000 alleged to have been paid by Charles M. Kase to the former police judge following a threatened suit for divorce by Charles Peaker, a negro, whose wife was to be made defendant. It was claimed that Hahn and the Gregorys divided $20,000 of this money and the other $5,000 went to Peaker.

DETECTIVES REMANDED.

Must Await Autopsy on Boy Killed by Bullet of One.

Hoboken, May 6.—Henry Tindell and Arthur Dischler, the two West Shore railroad detectives who fired into a crowd when thieves attempted to get one of their number free after his arrest on Wednesday night, were arraigned before Recorder Carstens and remanded.

Meanwhile an autopsy will be performed upon the body of Joseph Deposito. The character of the bullet will determine who shot the boy, as the revolvers were of different patterns. James Deposito, the other boy shot, is in a precarious condition.

RIOT AT BAYONNE WORKS.

Five Hundred Strikers Try to Drive 1,000 Men From Plant.

Bayonne, May 6. — Five hundred strikers rushed the guards at the Babcock & Wilcox plant in this city, jumped over a four foot fence and began stoning the factory in an effort to force about 1,000 men working nights to leave their posts. Stones were hurled and clubs swung right and left. After a fifteen minutes' battle police reserves were called. Several women were in the attacking party.

Son's Death Kills Her.

Orange, May 6.—Overcome by grief over the death of her son, Clinton Scagg, who was killed Wednesday in an automobile accident at Los Angeles, Mrs. William E. Scagg, wife of former Assemblyman Scagg of 37 Meadow street, was found dead in bed by her mother. The son's body is on the way here. A double funeral probably will be held Tuesday.

COMMUNION SERVICE.

The communion service will be observed at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning in the Crescent avenue church, while Sunday-school will meet at 12 noon. There will be no afternoon or evening service.

Sunday-school at the Park avenue Baptist church will be held tomorrow morning at 9:45, and preaching at 11, followed by a communion service.

Arranging Flowers at Home

The first thing to do if you would be a pastmistress in the art of arranging flowers, is to study their natural habits. You must see them growing to know how to place them in vases, or at least you must see pictures of them growing, if you are not able to see them actually.

The spring bulb flowers grow on straight, stiff stems, and their foliage is stiff and straight, too. So when you are placing them, don't try for an effect of drooping foliage. Use nothing but their own spiky leaves.

The best way, perhaps, to arrange them is the way most usual at present—in a flat dish in which there is a metal turtle or frog or some other metal weight, filled with holes in which the stems can be thrust. Then the flowers stand upright in all of their natural beauty.

Flowers with short stems should be arranged in shallow dishes. Pansies, for instance, look best in a shallow bowl or little glass basket, their heads held above the water by the aid of a little wire netting or by their own green foliage.

Iris is most effective in a tall glass vase. Almost all flowers have great beauty in their stems, hence glass vases give them the greatest beauty when they are cut, by showing the stems. Iris should be arranged only with its own foliage.

If you pick honeysuckle, arrange it in a hanging basket in which there is a dish of water for the stems. Almost any vine flower looks better hanging than standing on a table.

Baby's Second Year

From the twelfth to the twenty-fourth month is a most important time for the young growing child, it being the period when the greater number of milk teeth are cut, when the little feet begin to feel their way, when the tiny tongue "wags loudly and oft" in learning the rudiments of talking, and when the miniature mind and baby brain begin to work and think. A wise doctor tells us that our chief duty towards the little ones for the first few years of their lives is to see that every opportunity and assistance is given them to become perfect specimens of young animals.

Food is one of the most important factors towards this end. The health, comfort and progress of every living creature are more or less controlled by the way it is fed, and this is particularly true during the early infancy of our children, and more especially so in the teething time.

Teething.

A few infants have no teeth at a year old, the average have cut from six to eight.

In an ordinary way the milk teeth, twenty in number, are all cut by the twenty-fourth month. It is during the second year that the eye teeth and molars make their appearance.

Our chief care must be to keep the child lightly fed, the blood cool and the bowels regular.

Never forget that a teething baby is a thirsty one. Give frequent teaspoonfuls of cold water, and rub the gums with a little cold water to which a few drops of lemon juice have been added.

Walking.

Much as you may long to see your wee mite toddling about, do not teach it to walk—nature will do that quite soon enough. Most little ones begin to pull themselves up by the table or a chair when from nine to twelve months old. Next they gradually learn to stand alone, then to take a few faltering steps. Thus they go on progressing till at 15 or 16 months most children can run alone. Our constant thought must be to gard against falls, and to keep them off their feet as much as possible, particularly fat, heavy babies.

After a child is two years it may have fifteen minutes' walk outdoors. This may be gradually increased, but it is unwise to discontinue the perambulator entirely till the fourth year is reached.

Sitting Up.

After the first year young children may be allowed to sit up in high chairs.

Always fasten them in and never keep them sitting too long at a time, fifteen minutes in this position being quite long enough to begin. All little ones should be trained to sit still for ten minutes after every meal.

Talking.

Most twelve-month-olds can say a few words, and by the time they are two years can talk in sentences. No strict rules can be laid down, and the fact of being a bit backward with the tongue by no means denotes lack of intelligence. All young children understand many more words than they can say.

Sleep.

A baby from one to two years old should sleep the clock around—from 6.30 p. m. to 6.30 a. m., just waking up at 10 p. m. for a drink of milk, and it should have at least two hours' midday nap.

Guide To Height and Weight.

The average height of a twelve-month-old is 28 in. and its weight 21½ lb.

The height of an average two-year-old is 32 in., and the weight 29 lbs.

Air Bedding Often

When the weather permits the bedroom windows should be kept wide open. When it is too cold for this the room should be thoroughly aired for an hour or so during the day time while the sun is up. Some persons close their windows when they arise in the morning so that the room may get warm (in the winter time) or cool (in the summer). At least an hour's airing should be given to the whole room during the sunny part of the day.

Where it is possible all the bedding should be given a weekly sunbath. Mattresses and coverings should be put in the full sunlight, if it is possible. Of course, this is an added trouble, but it is well worth while when you consider the increase in vigor and health felt by the sleepers.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

WHY ALLOW LEAGUERS TO PLAY OUTSIDE THE SCHEDULE?

Clinton Avenue and T. A. B. S. baseball tossers are evidently trying to sneak one across on the City League. Not contented to confine their meetings to the schedule mapped out by the league moguls these two sets of ballists have arranged a Sunday exhibition and considerable interest has been awakened in the event which will be staged tomorrow. Steps should be taken by those promoting the organization's campaign to prohibit these Sunday "practice" contests between league rivals. There are plenty of independent nines to stack up against if the leaguers insist on playing Sunday baseball without dipping in and running a chance of bringing something to the surface that may serve to detract from the interest in the official schedule.

FISHERMEN ARE A LITTLE TARDY IN GETTING STARTED.

Little has been heard as yet from fishermen living in this vicinity. It is a well known fact that the finny tribe is plentiful in nearby lakes and streams this spring but the anglers appear to be a little tardy in getting out their rods and reels. While it is still a little early to expect a general response from the fishing element, in other years at this particular time there has always been more activity. Now is the time to get the early run and reports from those who have been and return indicate that there is plenty of sport in store for the angler.

THERE ARE SOME BETTER AND THERE ARE SOME WORSE.

Although we've been supplied with compative figures we're still just as much at sea concerning the relative merits of the borough and city high school baseball nines as we ever were. No idea of the strength of either combine has been brought to light by the games played thus far and all we can conclude is that if both are very poor or if both are very good we'll have a close race. The dopester has kept pretty well under cover to date and it is reasonable to believe that he'll let the players themselves decide the issue in real combat this year.

RED BLOODED BASEBALL.

Kicking, howling, vociferous objections to the umpire's verdicts and the frequent ejection of offending athletes from the scene of battle are already featuring the games all around the circuits—and 'tis well that this should be. Not that rowdy ball or senseless kicking should be encouraged—no, indeed. But a healthy holler, a loud, protesting squawk and a redhot argument, ending, presumably, in the sudden internment of the kicker among the outer throngs, means something—something more than the mere noise, uproar and out-pointed hand of the indignant arbiter. It means that the player is back in baseball. That's what it means. "Back in baseball?" Yes. Yea, bo. Separated from the visions, dreams and all-round follies of 1915. Freed from the pestilent discontent, the yeasty ferment of unsatisfied unrest. Thinking only of the game; how to win the game; believing that "everything our side does is right;" fighting, scrapping, getting the bum's rush—but showing once more the true love and devotion to the pastime—that's what it means when there's kicking, howling and ejections by the wholesale. There wasn't enough kicking in 1915 to show that they even knew there was anything to the game beyond a salary check—here's to the maddest, merriest sort of wolfing for the good season of 1916!

BUTLER SIGNS UP.

The Plainfield Juniors, a junior team, have organized for the season. The Juniors are not new to local fans as they were stars of the diamond last year. Sidney Butler has been engaged as pitcher and expects to have a banner year. Sam Davidson, the P. H. S. hurler, will occupy an infield berth, but it is not likely that he will pitch as he is anxious to give all he has to the Red-and-Blue. Sam Semer and Morris Klein, both extra men on the P. H. S. team, have also signed up with the Juniors.

CITY LEAGUE GAMES.

The following City League games will be played today:

Netherwood vs. T. A. B. S. (Baptist Field).

Farmers vs. Hopes (Emerson Field).

Clinton Avenue vs. Baptists (Soccer Field).

All games will begin promptly at 3:30.

PFAU'S AMBOYITES CONSISTS OF LOCALS

Pacer Team Which Will Meet Easton Tomorrow Has Plainfield Battery.

Billy Pfau's Pacers, with whom Tommy Mullen, Jim Emery, Cliff Randolph and Frank Hand, local diamond stars, pastime, will meet the Easton Crusaders at Amboy tomorrow. The Pacers got off to a fine start last Sunday, when they handed the Passaic baseball team a clever 5 to 3 beating. "Red" Grimes, the Somerville "knight," garnered three of the five runs made by the victors.

Acording to advance information, James Stevens, the "Masked Marvel" of Parlin, will pitch for the Pacers tomorrow. Stevens has been working out with Rutgers this week and expects to pitch four innings of the game against the Crusaders. It is very likely that Cliff Randolph will be used in the Schwab League games on Saturdays, and may come to the relief tomorrow.

'KATZ' MILLER IN A CHAPEL UNIFORM

Veteran Twirler Signed to Play Outfield by Manager Britt Martin.

Britt Martin, manager of the Hope Chapel City League team, announced this morning that he had secured the services of George "Kats" Miller for the coming season. Miller, who performed with the Saurer team last year, is a valuable man and will add strength to the Chapel outfield, where he intends to pastime, inasmuch as it will be impossible for him to get into pitching condition.

The addition of Miller to any team comes as a surprise. It was generally believed that his position with the Public Service would make it impossible for him to play baseball this season. "Dipper" Jones signed him up but was not sure that he would play. However, it seems that it will not be necessary for "Kats" to go to work until after 6 o'clock and that he will be able to fill out his contract with the Hopes, inasmuch as the Jones team "is no more."

"Chet" Harriman, who injured his leg playing in a recent game, will not be seen in a Hope uniform this afternoon. Arthur Walls will be shifted to third and "Soddy" Porter will cover the shortfield. Porter is a youngster but is very fast and can hit. He has not pastimed in fast circles but has been most prominent in the Parker Field League games.

WOMEN WILL PLAY 84 HOLES FOR TITLE

Conditions for Championship Match Announced by Secretary.

Mrs. Lawrence Swift, secretary of the Women's Eastern Golf Association, yesterday sent out the formal notices for the holding of the annual championship. As usual, the title will be decided by medal play competition, and the course selected, as formerly announced, is the Essex County Country Club links at Manchester, Mass. The date is June 5, 6 and 7.

This year the women have gone back to the former plan of holding the championship at fifty-four holes instead of at thirty-six holes, as they did last year and the year before. Eighteen holes in the championship contest are to be played every day. There will also be a handicap contest run off each day in connection with the title contest.

There are prizes for first, second, and third in the championship, for lowest net score in the fifty-four holes of the handicap contests, and for the lowest net score on the eighteen holes each day. The winner of the championship will have her name engraved on the association cup and will be the custodian of that trophy for the 1916 season.

P. H. S. RACQUET WIELDERS HAD EASY TIME IN FIRST

Plainfield High School's tennis team had an easy time yesterday afternoon on the Parker Field courts in winning the first meet of their schedule by beating Flemington in four straight matches. In the singles Carter, P. H. S., beat Fisher, F. H. S., 6-4, 7-5; O'Donnell, P. H. S., beat Bloomer, F. H. S., 6-0, and Eggie, P. H. S., beat Deats, F. H. S., 6-0, 6-1. In the doubles the visitors forced the locals to play three sets before it was deecided, but Eggie and Case beat Fisher and Deats, 6-3, 1-6, 6-0.

CAPTAIN APGAR LEADS P. H. S. IN FIELDING

With the first figuring up of Plainfield High School's fielding averages for the first five games the figures show that Captain "Box" Apgar has an easy lead over the rest of the Red and Blue outfit, having a perfect average. Following is the standing:

	G.	A.	E.	Av.
Apgar	5	10	0	1.000

SUNDAY GAME ON TAP.

The Queen City B. B. C. will cross bats with the Highlanders on Emerson Field tomorrow afternoon. The two teams will present the usual lineups.

TABS AND CLINTONS READY FOR OPENER

Initial Sunday Baseball Tilt Will Be Staged Tomorrow Afternoon.

The press agent of the Plainfield T. A. B. S. baseball team announces that the team has secured the use of Avon Oval for Sundays this year and that hostilities will commence tomorrow, when the visitors will be the Clinton Avenue team, another City League organization. The Abstainers were doubtful about securing the grounds and it was not until the last minute that Manager Jim Scott received definite assurance that his boys could pastime on the Oval as was the custom last year and the year before.

The opening of the Abstainer season pries off the lid on Sunday baseball attractions as the Oval games are the only games staged in this vicinity on Sunday. It is true that the Highlanders and various other teams stage attractions on Emerson Field on Sundays but at these games no admission is charged and the game is played within the city limits, although far reserved from dwellings.

The lineup of both teams for tomorrow's attractions are as follows:

T. A. B. S.—T. Denny, cf; J. Denny, p; Kid Brennan, lf; Willie O'Loughlin, c; Rosenson, ss; McCarty, 2b; DeNitzio, 3b; Winters, 1b; Lawton, rf.

Clinton Avenue—Gunzelman, lf; Brown, 3b; Pennoyer, 2b; Bergen, c; Jaeger, ss; J. Dixon, p; Miller, cf; Hendry, 1b; Apgar, rf.

ROSTER FOR CRESCENT COLORED BALL CLUB

The official playing season of the Crescents, a local colored team, will not begin until the Parker Field League opens, although the outfit will indulge in a few independent games, the first of which will be staged on Decoration Day at Parker Field. The game will take place in the morning and the opposing faction will be that of the Quaker baseball clan.

According to information sent to this office by Bill Reasoner, manager of the Crescents, the lineup he will present in the coming exhibition games is the same as that to be used in the playground circuit. Andrew Hunt, Sherman Coles, Japtheth Banks, William Reasoner, Daniel Hassel, Alfred Maiden, Edward Cannon, Royal Banks, Charles Saunders, Erastus Sims, Courtney Smith, John Thomas and William Snyder are all registered on the Crescent roster. Sherman Coles is manager of the team.

FORMER LOCAL STARS PLAY.

The Singer Baseball League will open in Elizabeth this afternoon, with four teams fighting it out for first honors. Many of the players on the shop teams are well known in this city. Bill Seery, who is coaching one of the teams, used to catch for the Pets and was well liked by the local fans. Jack Morganroth, who is playing with the shuttle department, was a member of the last Pet team that existed in this city.

CARLSTROM CAPERS.

Albin Carlstrom, former Pet, former Brave and now a Buffalo, International League star, is clouting the pill all over the lot and is fielding perfectly. Carlstrom and Jack Martin were at one time considered the two best shorstops in the east.

JOE HARTER TO PLAY.

When the Bushwicks, of Brooklyn, meet the Ironsides, of Newark, in the city of churches tomorrok, Joe Harter, a former Pet, will be in the outer works for the Brooklyn boys.

BRUGGY STILL AT IT.

Frank Bruggy, at one time the sensation of the Central New Jersey League, is doing well with the Binghamton, New York State League team.

GOLF TITLES ARE TO CHANGE HANDS

Old Champions Not to Defend Their Honors This Season.

TRAVIS OUT OF TOURNEYS.

Veteran Metropolitan Champion States He Will Remain Out This Season. Travers Not to Play in National Open—Chick Evans Not In.

A new crop of golf champions is in the making. This follows for the reason that several well known players have decided not to defend their titles. Three fixtures in mind are the national open, metropolitan amateur and metropolitan junior, and there also appears to be some doubt as to the intentions of Charles ("Chick") Evans, who has won the championship of the Western Golf association on four occasions.

Some time ago Jerome D. Travers, the Upper Montclair (N. J.) amateur, who sprang a sensation by showing the way to a high class field in the national open at Baltusrol last year, declared that he did not expect to make the long trip to Minikahda, and since then Jerry has given no indication of changing his mind. The absence of Travers may be a relief to the pros, who, with the exception of 1913, when Francis Ouimet won at Brookline, have had matters pretty much their own way in the open.

Walter J. Travis, the veteran winner of the metropolitan title at Apawamis last year, has said he will remain out of tournaments this season. In making such a decision Travis probably robs himself of an excellent chance to win just one more championship, for he always performs well at Nassau. It was there in 1903 that he won the national amateur honors for the third and last time, and he also won the metropolitan on the same links.

Then there is Philip Carter, the New York player, who for three years has won the "met" junior. Carter is no longer eligible.

Aside from the actual title holders not defending, other favorites will be missing. Ouimet's inability to play as an amateur will, of course, remove one of the favorites from the big fixture at Merion.

INSIDE BASEBALL EXPLAINED.

Bresnahan Says It Is Fast Thinking, Prearrangement Bunk, Adds Roger.

It may sound extravagant, a declaration that inside baseball is a joke, but that's what Roger Bresnahan, now minor league magnate and manager of the Toledo American association club, contends. And Roger's word bears logic.

The Duke's argument is that quick thinking by three or four smart ball players in the pinches is the basis of inside baseball. Roger, as has often been said, agrees that the inside stuff originated with the old Baltimore Oriole club.

That crew, of which Bresnahan was a member, used to score the mental beats, but, according to Roger, everything was accomplished without the aid of signs. It was all purely think stuff. The athletes knew each other's style, and they worked together. They were quick witted and rarely missed an opportunity to provide a little help when needed.

Bresnahan doesn't believe that a manager should do all the thinking for his players. He gives them credit for knowing something. And he wants them to use their think tanks on every play.

Intelligence is inside play, argues the Duke. He isn't a bit cranky on errors, but he's certainly a grouch on mental boots. And we don't blame him, for between ourselves the club that pulls the fewest boners is the one that wins the most games.

A Witty Suggestion.

At the time when Thaddeus Stevens was a representative in congress a member of the house who was noted for his uncertain course on all questions and who confessed that he never investigated a point under discussion without finding himself neutral asked one day for leave of absence.

"Mr. Speaker," said Stevens, "I do not rise to object, but to suggest that the honorable member need not ask this favor, for he can easily pair off with himself."

HOW THEY LOST.

Sherwood Magee hates an alibi and the Boston Braves' left fielder tells the following story to prove it:

"When a batter comes back from the plate after he has fanned," says Magee, "the first thing he will say is, 'That pitcher has nothing.'

"I cannot help from barking. I shout, 'No, he has nothing—that is, nothing that you can hit!'

"When I was a kid our school had a debating team. They spouted a lot of tall stuff and defeated several of the nearby schools in match debates. They were sent to meet a good team. They came home licked. I asked one of the speakers how it was the team was beaten, and he said, 'Oh, they had a big team; they outweighed us ten pounds to the man.'"

WOULD PLACE UMPIRES IN INFIELD DURING BIG SERIES

Coach Billy Sullivan of the Detroit Americans has come forward with a new suggestion for the placing of umpires in world's series baseball games. Sullivan says there is no real need for umpires in the outfield.

His plan would have these men stationed in the infield, so that each base could be watched by an umpire. The arbitrators stationed at first and third base could accurately give decisions on drives striking close to the foul line, he said.

LOUDERMILK SHOULD BE STAR

Billy Sullivan Says if Lanky Pitcher Had Spitter He Would Be Marvel.

Branch Rickey, former manager of the Browns, says Loudermilk should be one of the stars of the American league. "There isn't anything a pitcher needs that Loudermilk hasn't got," says Rickey.

Billy Sullivan, the veteran coach of the Detroit Tigers, suggests that the lanky twirler take up the spitball. If Loudermilk was in possession of a spitter it would be almost impossible to beat the six footer. The ball coming down from the height at which he raises his arm would break with a suddenness that would baffle the best hitters.

"The Fancy Show Box"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."—Proverbs 23:7.

I don't know any better way to begin this sermon tonight than by telling you the story of Hawthorne's "Fancy Show Box."

I do not know how generally it is known that this story, "Fancy's Show Box," was suggested by a bitter experience. Hawthorne challenged a man to duel which for reasons was never fought. Shortly after this a friend of his received a challenge to a duel and while he was hesitating from the standpoint of honor he thought of Hawthorne's challenge and his willingness to fight and influenced by it he accepted this challenge and was killed.

Hawthorne was smitten with remorse and he wrote this story to show the stain upon the soul of sinful thoughts and desires and resolves; to show that "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

There was a venerable gentleman by the name of Smith. Everybody thought him to be a pattern of moral excellence. He sat alone one night in his richly furnished home and began to think of his past and as he did so three figures entered the room, Fancy, Memory and Conscience. Fancy was an entertainer with a box of pictures on her back, Memory was a clerk with pen and ink horn, and Conscience a queer individual shrouded in a dusky mantle. Fancy set her box down upon the table with a magnifying glass convenient to Mr. Smith's eye, Memory with her finger between the leaves of a huge volume stood at his right and Conscience stood on his left next to his heart.

Fancy pulled a string and the semblance of a living scene filled the box. It was a moonlight scene and in the shadow of a tree was a young man looking down scornfully at the kneeling figure of a girl sinking down under a weight of shame. In the young man Mr. Smith recognized himself and in the girl his old time cottage love Martha Burroughs and Mr. Smith became indignant and said it was a vile and slanderous picture. "When," he said, "have I triumphed over ruined innocence? Wasn't Martha wedded in her 'teens to David Tompkins and lived a happy wife?" Then Memory turned the leaves of her book and found the one referring to this picture and read it in his ear. It was the record of a sinful thought. He had never carried it out in action but as the memory of it came back to him Conscience unveiled her face and stuck a dagger into the heart of Mr. Smith.

Conscience Lifts Veil.

Again Fancy pulled the string and this time Mr. Smith saw a table with several bottles and glasses half filled with wine. A young man lay on the floor stone dead and a ghastly wound crushed in his temple while over him in a delirium of rage and horror was the youthful likeness of Smith himself. The murdered man wore the features of Edward Spencer and Mr. Smith cried, "What does the rascal of a painter mean? Edward Spencer was my earliest and dearest friend. Neither I nor any other man ever murdered him; he died only five years ago and remembered me in his legacy." And then Memory turned over the pages of her book and came to the place and read again in his ear and it all came back to him. They had a quarrel one night at the wine table and with his blood heated with wrath had flung a bottle at Spencer's head. It is true he missed his aim and the bottle merely smashed into a looking glass and the next morning when he remembered it they shook hands and let it go, but as the Memory of that night came back to him again Conscience lifted her veil and struck another dagger into his heart.

Once more Fancy set her box in operation and this time Mr. Smith saw himself in the latter years of his life represented as stripping the clothes from the backs of three half-starved children. It made Smith angry and he said, "It's a scandal. A man of my standing to be robbing little children of their clothes." But Memory found another page and with a sad solemn voice she poured it into his ear. It reminded him how on the ground of a legal quibble he had been tempted to commence a lawsuit against three orphan children who had fallen heir to a big fortune but he didn't do it because as it turned out his claims were shown to be utterly devoid of law and justice. But just as Memory stopped reading Conscience again raised her dagger and drove it home into his heart.

Thank God it is true that one tear of repentence would have washed away the picture and left the canvas white as snow, but the lesson of that story is that no deed was ever done unless it was first conceived in the heart and while a man's hand may be clean his heart may be as black as hell and that God judges a man as much by what he thinks in his heart as much as by what he does in his life.

A Thief In His Heart.

A man is always a thief in his heart before he reaches out his hand and steals. No man ever took another man's life unless the murderer in him didn't do the killing first. No man ever lied with his lips until the liar in him lied first. No man ever committed adultery who didn't first lust after the woman in his heart. When God told the wicked man to forsake his way He didn't forget to tell him to forsake his thoughts. Thought is the parent of conduct. A man's deeds are simply his thoughts put into practice.

Now there is no way for me to tell what is in your heart except as it expresses itself in your life. When I hear you tell a lie I know that you first manufactured that lie in your heart and that you were a liar there before you ever spoke. If I saw you go into a gambling room I would know that you first thought your devilish business in your heart and made up your mind to take some other fellow's money if a gambler's luck would help you do it.

But God can tell. He knows your heart better than you do yourself. When the prophet told Hazael that he would slay his master he threw up his hand in horor and said, "Is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing?" But he did do it. He went home and took a wet cloth and spread it over his master's face and choked him to death. "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." Don't be deceived about the wicked possibility of your own. There is enough timber in the heart of the best man or woman here to kindle a fire that will burn to the lowest hell unless the grace of God put it out.

God Knows Your Heart.

God knows your heart. You may never murder a man in cold blood; you may never rob a woman of her virtue, but if you have it in your heart to do it, God knows it. A man can be respectable or pass for being so and yet have a heart underneath an immaculate shirt front as unclean as hell itself. But outward appearance never fools God. It may fool a man. It fooled Samuel, but the Lord said that He "looked on the heart." And so don t be deceived, for the eyes of God penetrate into the hidden and innermost recesses of the soul and read there as if written in raised letters on a book the real story of a man's life.

And this after all is the thing that counts with God. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." The real man is not the outward, the visible man, but the man who hides from all save himself and his God. And heaven save us from ever thinking for one moment that we are not responsible for what is going on in our heart. What you think in your heart does not make you a criminal in the sight of men but it does make you a sinner in the sight of God. You become amenable to the laws of your State only when you act against them. You can think against them all you please. You are not responsible to your State for your thoughts but you are responsible to your God for them. Your thought makes you a sinner even though you never act the thought out in the practice of your life.

Now you don't need to read the Bible with any great care to see how perfectly plain God makes Himself on this point.

Take the sin of Adultery. Those old Pharisees seemed to think that as long as they didn't get mixed up in the actual business that they could pass muster with God. And so the fellow that went up to the temple to pray—the Bible says he went up to pray, but he really went up to brag—he thanked God he was not an extortioner or an adulterer like the poor publican that smote on his breast and said, "God be meriful to me a sinner."

Try To Be Decent.

You know one great trouble with the church today is a lot of you are not willing to acknowledge your sin. Uncle Bobbie in "That printer's of Udell's" sized a good many of you up about right when he said, "What you want to do is to be decent and quit trying so blamed hard to be respectable." Just tell the Lord what you are. You'll go out of here thinking less of yourself than when you came in but it'll do you good and bring a blessing such as you've never had before. Tell Him you're an old grouch, and that in your home you're "meaner than a mule with shoulder galls." Tell Him that you're a booze hoister and that you've got a case of Budwiser in your cellar now. Tell Him that you've got a lying tongue and that you're an old snake in the grass who meets his neighbor with a smile and then assassinates his good name as soon as his back is turned. And if you went on and told all the truth I wonder how many of you would have to say, "Oh God, forgive me for my adultery too." For you know what Jesus said to the Jews. He said, "Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, 'Thou shalt not commit adultery,' but I say unto you that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart."

It isn't because the lust of the heart leads to the open act that God condemns it. Of course it does. "The pitcher that goes often to the well gets broken at last." Somebody has said, "Sow a thought and reap an act; sow an act and reap a habit; sow a habit and reap a character; sow a character and reap a destiny," but you can reap the character and with it the destiny without the sowing of an act. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." And what God would have you know is that the prostitution of your imagination to the sensual embraces of unholy lust is a sin just as vile and great in His sight as if the loathsome thing were done in outward practice.

We read in II Peter of "eyes that are full of adultery." But precious as the eye is it is not as precious as a pure heart, and so hideous is this thing that Jesus calls heart adultery that He says if your eye offends you in this way until the demon of lust holds you in its power you had better pluck it out and go to heaven with a maimed body than to keep your eye and go to hell with a dirty heart and a rotten soul.

One of the lowest specimens of moral perverts is the lecherous scoundrel who spends the biggest part of his time dallying with the thought of sins he finds no opportunity to commit or dare not commit because of the social consequences.

The Sin In Their Eyes.

And society is full of just such men; men whose eyes are full of adultery, men who are lured by the scent of it and feast on it like a buzzard on a decaying carcass. They roll it over and over in the mind like a sweet morsel under the tongue and feel their hellish desires by lewd pictures and obscene literature and every passing opportunity to gaze upon the salacious form of a woman who has lost her modesty far enough to wear a sleeveless decolete dress.

But there are other men who are good men and yet the fiercest battles they fight are along this line. God never made any man with a mind thought-proof against this thing and yet certain things sometimes enter into the experience of some men by reason of which they are unusually susceptible to this insidious influence. They ride this demon down on one battlefield only to meet him unexpectedly on another. At what moment the devil will throw a spark from hell into their bosom and set it on fire they cannot tell.

Women, you must know these things. You ought at least to know them, and if a man is led to sin with his eyes then what are you going to say about the partner of his crime whose brazen boldness and unblushing immodesty invites him to lust by exposing herself before him with her collar under her arms and her split skirt that commences at the hem and goes as far as the city ordinance will allow and all the flesh inciting fashions of present day social life. If that sounds hard, then just call it "fool-headedness." Pretty looking birds some of you are. If God meant you to go around like that He would have put feathers on you in the first place. The Bible comes down just as hard on immodest and indecent apparel as it does on adultery of the heart and if a man goes to hell for looking he'll have a lot of company out of the people who furnished the show.

You remember the story of the virgin goddess Minerva who carried a shield on her arm and in the center of it was fixed the Gorgon's head and everyone who looked upon it was turned into stone. The meaning was that lawless desires did not dare to exist in the presence of perfect purity. But what would happen if a man looked on you dressed as some of you sometimes are? Would he get a rebuke of any kind? No, but if you had him arrested for staring at you the judge would dismiss the case on the ground that you got what the man naturally thought you were advertising for.

But man, let me tell you that doesn't make any difference. The look of lust, the thought of it (and the longing for it) is a sin and a vile one just the same, and like the Jews of Christ's day we are inclined to think all too lightly of it. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he" and what you need to do is to do as Job said and "make a covenant with your eyes" and so with God's help keep a pure mind and a clean heart.

The Sin Of Thought Murder.

Take the sin of murder. We look on that as a terrible thing, don't we? A man who will commit murder will do anything. But don't you know you might as well go and stand before God in judgment and have your hands smeared with the blood of some murdered fellow man as to go there with a spirit in your heart that wanted to murder him and would have murdered him if you hadn't been afraid of what society would have done to you. For God says, "He that hateth his brother is a murderer already."

It doesn't take any critical investigation of the Bible to find out that God can have absolutely nothing to do with the man or the women whose heart is full of hatred. I can tell you of a woman, a member of the church who hated another woman with such a hatred that it completely mastered her. The longer she cherished it the stronger it grew. But it made her miserable. The hateful, hellish thought she held for that other woman acted like a boomerang to her own peace and happiness. And then it seemed to affect her health.

And right here let me say you owe it to the health of your own body to think such thoughts as will assist nature in her efforts on your behalf in this respect. You laugh at the Bible, you old skeptic and call it unscientific but science never demonstrated a greater truth than this, that the loveless life is the life of death.

Do you know that the secretions of a man's body when he is in a fit of anger are poison? Do you know that it is a well known scientific fact that a mother with a nursing child can get so angry that the milk from her breast will throw her little one into spasms?

Well, if ever a woman was in hell on this side of the other world it was this one. I saw her on her knees at a religious meeting once and heard her cry, "Oh God, speak to me; Oh God, speak to me," and I said, "Woman something is wrong, God is more willing than you are," and then she told me of that hellish, hateful passion and I said, "You'll have to let it go." She was still a moment and I thought she would say "Yes," and then I saw her tremble and she got up and said, "No, it was a terrible injury and I hate her and I will not forgive her," and as I looked into her large grey eyes that led down into the very depths of her being I seemed to see a vision of a soul in hell. She was in hell and hell was in her.

What fellowship could God have with a woman like that? "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar, for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" "He that hateth his brother is a murderer already," for "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Sin Not A Disease.

And so I might go on with other sin. It's what's in a man's heart that make him a sinner in the sight of God, and it's out of the heart Jesus says that false witness and evil thoughts and blasphemy proceeds. One of the fool fads of old Lombroso is that sin is a disease and that criminals are defective. He said a criminal is not a fully developed man and when he noticed that anthropoid apes had long arms reaching down below their knees he assumed that the criminal must have long arms too and so he put it in one of his books. But Dr. Perrier, a great French specialist, measured the arms of all the prisoners in a large number of prisons and strange to say he found their arms were slightly shorter than the average, and so Lombroso's theory is just so much hot air. There's no use to try to relieve a criminal of the responsibility for his crime. Sin is a disease, but it's a disease of the heart, and what we need is to make the prayer of David, "Create in me a clean heart, oh God."

Now listen to me. If God is going to judge a man for what he harbors in his heart and if adultery in the heart and murder in the heart and all the rest of it is going to determine a man's sentence, then may God help us to examine our own hearts tonight. Man, what about your heart? Woman, what about yours? I want you to take a look into Fancy's Box tonight and tell me what you see.

If you have ever read "Gold Foil" by J. G. Holland you will remember his island of Imagination. He says, "It smiles in the sunlight and sleeps in the green; the waves of every ocean kiss its feet and the airs of every clime play among its trees; flowers bend idly to the fall of fountains and beautiful forms wreathe their white arms calloing for companionship." A maiden gently steers her canoe, drops anchor and disappears beneath the foliage and thinks she is all alone. Along another path there goes a matron. Next comes a lad and he is lost in the labyrinth of the bewitching charm and beauty. Up comes yet two other canoes, one containing a young wife and the other her husband. Each disappears beneath the foliage, take a different path and know nothing of each others presence. That girl would blush to tell her mother where she had been; the matron would want no one to know how she had spent the last hour and the lad would protest his innocense. This husband would deny to his wife where he had spent his time and the young wife's heart would stand still if she thought her husband knew where she had been. And Holland said, "If God's light could shine upon that crowded island and discover its secrets what shameful things should we witness—fathers, mothers, maidens, men, children whom we had deemed as pure as snow flying with guilty eyes and white lips to hide themselves from their great disgrace.

Judged According To Thoughts.

Men and women, what are we going to do about it? Where have you been today in your thoughts? What things have you done in your heart during the past week or month or year? No wonder God steps in and says we are going to be judged according to our thoughts.

And say, if in some way an angel of God could come down here tonight and make a diagnosis of your heart and yours and yours and carry back and lay before God the things he found, I think God would say, "From whose heart were these things taken?" and the angel would say, "These were taken from the heart of Mr. A," and God would say, "Then Mr. A must die." And the angel would say, "And these were taken from the heart of Mrs. B," and God would say, "Then the sentence of eternal death must fall on Mrs. B."

But I don't think God would stop there. I think He would say, "Angel, go back; go back and tell Mr. A and Mrs. B and tell every poor, guilty sinner with a polluted heart that Christ died for sin of every kind and that there's hope through Him, there's a remedy through Him if they will only take it. Go back and tell that poor man whose mind has been poisoned and besmirched with thoughts of adultery that I'll forgive him, and that the blood of Jesus Christ will cleanse him from an unrighteousness; tell that woman whose heart has been black with hate that I's cancel the claims of hell on her soul and forgive it all if she wants me to. Go back and tell them that there's pardon through Christ for every sin and that Christ will save them in spite of all that hell can do."

"What must I do to be saved?" Where are you going to find an answer to that question? Philosophy can't answer it. Science can't answer it. Infidelity mock at it, but God's answer is plain. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." "By grace are ye saved through Christ." "Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thought and let him return unto the Lord and He will have mercy upon him and unto our God for He will abundantly pardon.'"

A Pardon For All.

Thank God when a man's forgiven, when God pardons a man it's all off with the past. God blots it out. He says so. And anybody who will throw into the face of a man his past when he has once repented it is a white livered cur. I've absolutely no respect for a man like that. When God forgives you, brother, it's a wonderful forgiveness and when you come to God for His pardon the very thought of getting it ought to overwhelm you.

A few years ago a great Christian worker died. His name was William Reynolds. Most everybody prominent in Christian work knew him. One day the warden of the Joliet penitentiary sent him a letter and told him he wanted him to come and speak to the prisoners. He said, "Don't fail to come because something will take place, if you miss it you will regret it all your life. After he had spoken to the prisoners the warden, whose name by the way was Major McDougall, stepped to the front of the platform, pulled a leter out of his pocket and said, "I have a pardon for one of GALLEY FIVE.... ... ... 5,ypH'ifv the men," and Reynolds said it caused a great commotion. The rule was, "Every man sit upright and fold your arms," but every man of them unfolded his arms and gripped the seat in front of him, leaned forward and listened. The warden stood silent, and Reynolds jumped to his feet and said, "Major, tell them quick for God's sake; I think I will die and I am free; I can walk down these steps and tell the doorman to let me out and he will be compelled to do it, but these men must stay here; the suspense is terrible." And Major McDougall said, "The pardon which I hold is for William Johnson." Not a prisoner stirred. "William Johnson." Not a convict moved. And then he called the convict's number. Sometimes the men go so long by a number that they practically forget their name. And this time a man right in the middle of the section jumped to his feet. "Is your name Johnson?" "Yes, Sir, Number So and So," and the Major said, "It's a pardon for you, sir, come and get it." The convict wormed his way out of his place and came down and as he took the envelope he kissed the warden's hand and said, "My God, Major, are you sure it is for me? I've been waiting for it for twenty-two years; my wife and my children are all dead and I'm alone in the world; are you sure it's for me?" and the Major said, "Yes, it's an unconditional pardon from Governor Peifer; now sit down a moment." And Johnson sat down. When the convicts arose to file out in lock step Johnson from force of habit leaped to his feet and fell in with them and the Major said, "Johnson you are no longer a convict; you are a free man; step out of the line. And Johnson dropped down on his seat and cried and said, "My God can it mean me?"

Listen. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." Man, will you take the pardon of God tonight? No wonder Johnson was overcome, but man's pardon don't mean much after all. And then it's only for one here and one there. But with God's pardon it's "Whosoever will' and it opens the very prison gates of hell and lets a man go free forever." As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Man, if you'll take His pardon, you may have it tonight. You may have it now.

The employes of the post office made a fine appearance as they marched into the Tabernacle in their gray uniforms. After they were welcomed by the chorus choir, they called for their favorite song, "Show Your Colors."

A delegation representing the teachers of the public schools were also present and were cordially welcomed. The teachers said they wanted to join in the singing of "He Included Me."

The National Male Quartet rendered a selection.

"A Refuge of Lies" is the interesting title of the sermon for this evening.

Dr. Biederwolf welcomed the delegations and made them feel at home. He remarked, when speaking to the school teachers, that their work should not stop with the intellectual, but should include the moral and physical life of the student.

Sunday (tomorrow) will be a great day acording to the evangelist. In most of the churches the Bible School will be held in the morning, preceding the regular preaching service. In the afternoon, Mrs. Brake will hold a meeting for women only, in the First Bautist church at 2:30. At the same time, Dr. Biederwolf will address the men in the tabernacle on "The Price of Sin," and will speak on the very timely subject, "The Second Coming of Christ" in the evening.

The song service immediately preceding the preaching is very helpful and uplifting. The choir will assist Mr. Heaton in a special part of the musical program tonight.

Norristown, Pa., is a long way from Plainfield and a tedious ride on the train, but the Norristownites are not to be bluffed by such a small inconvenience, and 300 are coming to spend the evening in Plainfield and promise to meet us in the pine temple.

As the teachers filed into the seats, those who sing in the choir stepped out and marched up in the choir loft. It was surprising to see how many teachers do sing in the choir.

"Mac" sang a solo last night.

Dr. Biederwolf said that the offering of tomorrow afternoon will be for the Dutch Arms Band, and the evening offering for the Y. M. C. A.

CARRANZA TO REJECT PLANS

Upsets Agreement on Pursuit of Villa.

SAYS TROOPS MUST QUIT

Demands Time Limit Upon Stay of American Forces in Mexico—Whole Conference May Result in Failure. Hiding Place of Bandits Located, Wires Pershing.

El Paso, Tex., May 6.—According to information received from an apparently reliable source, sudden intervention by Carranza has caused a hitch in border negotiations regarding the bandit campaign in Mexico.

General Carranza, the informant said, has refused to ratify the agreement effected by Generals Scott and Obregon. The first chief insists, it is said, that General Obregon adhere to his instructions and urge the immediate withdrawal of the American troops. Failing that he is to induce the American government to at least fix a date for their withdrawal.

Carranza is represented as being very much opposed to approving any agreement which seems to lend official Mexican sanction to the American campaign in Mexico by pledging co-operation and even a partial use of the railroads.

Many messages are known to have been exchanged between Carranza and his minister of war. The fact that General Obregon constantly caused the postponement of what was to have been the final conference with General Scott gave color to the reports that General Carranza had failed to see the force of the arguments which General Obregon was presenting why the convention should be ratified.

This gave rise to the apprehension that the whole conference might result in utter failure on the eve of signing what promised to be a most satisfactory agreement.

Lieutenant Colonel Michie, aid to General Scott, visited General Obregon in his private car in Juarez and after a few minutes in the car entered a closed automobile and returned to the El Paso side. General Scott said that he had asked General Obregon to set a time for the next meeting.

General Obregon indicated that he was prepared to close the whole matter, and his train was in readiness to leave. He has received many of his officers during the last twenty-four hours, and many points have been discussed.

Scouts Locate Villa.

Villa's hiding place has been discovered by American scouts, and United States troops now are closing in upon the bandit leader "somewhere in Mexico."

This was the substance of a dispatch sent by General Pershing to General Funston at El Paso.

General Pershing, it was stated, had telegraphed that he had Villa located and that he expected to close in on the bandit immediately. The message did not state where Villa had been found, but indicated that Americans had found him and Americans would capture him if the bandit is caught.

The message was sent from San Antonio, where General Pershing had gone from Namiquipa to inspect the troops and make a new distribution of the forces.

A telephone message from Columbus said that thirty Carranza customs guards stopped an American motor supply train at Palomas, eight miles south of the border, and ordered the commander to remove American flags flying from the cars. The Mexicans, who had been celebrating "Cinco de Mayo," informed them that the American flag could not be allowed on Mexican soil. No attention was paid to the demand, and no trouble resulted.

Five Americans were murdered by bandits between Rosario and Mazatlan, Sinaloa, an American mining man who arrived at the border reported. He said the Americans were working claims in the interior when the bandits appeared, robbed them, looted their camp and shot all of them.

The American also reported that two German firms, J. Melcher and Wheeler & Bartning, of Mazatlan, had been fined 80,000 and 40,000 pesos for refusing to accept Carranza currency. The American said that when these fines were offered in Carranza currency they were refused and silver insisted upon by the officials.

DOMINICANS FIGHT.

United States Marines Land to Protect American Legation.

Santo Domingo, May 6.—Hostilities have commenced here. Several persons were killed or wounded. A Dominican gunboat bombarded the fort.

Marines were landed from the American converted cruiser Prairie for the protection of the American legation.

The situation growing out of the attempt of factional leaders to overthrow the administration of President Jimenez is critical.

Warships Destroy Zeppelins.

London, May 6.—Two Zeppelins have been destroyed by French and British warships, one off the German coast and the other at Saloniki. The first was hit by a British light cruiser squadron off Schleswig, it was announced officially.

A Picture Hat with a Towering Crown from Maria Guy

A Georgette Sailor with Streamers and an Odd Feather Ornament

Ostrich Adds Emphasis to the Brim on this Chanel Hat

Each Hat a Law Unto Itself - Flowers and Feathers, But Mostly Flowers - Hats of Dark or Neutral Color Brightly Trimmed Seem the Favorites - Textile Hats the Craze.

THERE is no definite shape or style in the millinery of late spring and early summer, if one excepts the enormously tall, high-crowned tailored models trimmed with towering bows of ribbon or nodding roses which marked the first weeks of the season. These have given a certain character to the 1916 spring, but as warmer weather advances the tendency seems to be toward hats of lower crown and wider brim—styles of more picturesque quality in short; which is quite as it should be, for summer is the time of times for lovely picture hats!

Perhaps the most notable feature in millinery now is the use of textiles, not only in trimmings but for whole crowns and brims; and indeed many of the new hats are entirely covered with textile fabric which may be anything from costly Chinese embroidery to modest striped linen at twenty-five cents the yard. It is the sport hat, naturally, that takes to itself linen covering, but there are many models for formal and dress wear that show silks, satins and other rich fabrics in combination with straw; or used all by themselves. Of the latter sort is a very stunning model by Georgette, the brim of peacock blue straw braid in narrow, overlapping rows, and the crown of satin in the same shade with embroideries in various colors. The top of the crown is oblong and the satin, is sewed to this oblong crown with an over and over buttonhole stitch done with bronze silk floss. There are five rows of buttonholing around the crown, joining strips of the satin, one row in plum color, another in old pink, another in gold, and so on.

Peacock Blue a Favored Shade.

It is surprising how much peacock blue one sees in the new millinery. It is a deep, greenish blue which one calls peacock for want of another name—there may be some special French cognomen for it, but peacock is the shade it most resembles. Lewis has evolved a stunning creation of shirred black tulle whose piece de resistence is a great dragon fly wrought with blue and green beads which is poised over the front of crown and brim. A frill of the black tulle flutters over the brim's edge, and another frill stands crisply up from the high crown. For wear with this imposing hat the milliner recommends ear-rings with pendants of blue and green stones set in pearls. There is an art in choosing ear-rings to match the hat—nothing gives a woman a more complete effect of chic than this clever little touch of matching ear-rings. If there is a cockade of blue ribbon on the hat and eyes and ear-rings are blue also, the effect is entrancing.

Odette has a wonderful black tulle model, the tulle draped without shirring over a low-crowned, wide-brimmed picture shape of leghorn. A tiny frill of the tulle stands out beyond the brim and is caught to it by a narrow band of jet sewed to a band of peacock blue ribbon. At the brim's edge also are two pink roses with black and peacock blue leaves.

Tulle Sprouts From Tall Crowns.

Height is added to height by adding upstanding pleatings of tulle to tall hat crowns, the tulle appearing to sprout from the inside of the hat in some miraculous manner. This effect is illustrated in the hat of braided black straw with a narrow mushroom brim of wired black tulle, and a wide pleated frill of the tulle rising from the crown. Braided straw is excessively fashionable this season and on a hat of this sort it can be easily managed, even by a tyro in the millinery art. The straw is braided separately and then tacked lightly to the hat. A piece of stout crinoline is cut first, and fitted around the tall crown. Then the crinoline is pinned out on the table and the straw braided over it, the ends being folded over the edges of the crinoline strip. The whole strip may then be easily attached to the hat frame. Do not try to wrestle with straw braiding unless you have patience and steady nerves for the many lengths of straw, each one starting to fray out at its ends, are rather troublesome to manage. In any event purchase a generous quantity of straw so that you need not do your braiding with short pieces. After the ends of the braided section have been turned under on the wrong side and tacked in place, the raveled and frayed bits can be cut away.

Leghorns Have Frilled Silk Crowns.

For wear with dainty frocks at May festivities and June commencements and weddings, there are enchanting hats of leghorn with crowns disguised under frillings of silk. From Lewis comes such a hat, pictured on today's page. The poke shaped brim is quaint and its quaintness is emphasized by the "bride" of pink ribbon, picot edged, which passes under the chin. The crown is made of pink satin—a long strip, run by hand with deep tucks. On the hat the tucks are drawn up into frills, the gathered satin fitting itself to the shape of the crown. Two pink roses arranged in natural effect with leaves complete the trimming. Some of the new flower-trimmed hats are lovely past description. The milliners seem to be vying with each other in delectable flower arrangements. Sometimes roses nod aloft, several inches above the high crown; again they tumble riotously over the brim to mingle with the hair. They may be perched formally on the edge of the brim, or massed in clusters against the crown, and they trail in wreath effect across crown and brim. On a black straw hat by Carlier are no less than twenty fair sized pink roses—almost two dozen roses, think of it! And the hat is not over large, either. They cover the crown entirely in a mass of pink and green and mount above the crown, four of the roses towering on long, leafy stems high above the hat. One or two peep over the edge of the upturned brim. A prettier hat for a June day was never conceived! To a low-crowned hat of blue straw has been added a wide brim of blue tulle and the crown is encircled by a rose pink ribbon run under a shirring of the tulle. Three roses in tearose and pink shades are clustered at one side.

Speaking of rose-trimmed hats, one must not forget the Watteau models which are for very, very pretty faces, and preferably for heads with blonde tresses. There is no mistake about it—golden hair does set off a flower-trimmed hat marvelously, and red hair does set off a black hat. The Watteau hat is very flat in front, tilting down to shade the eyes, but at the back it rises to untold heights, shooting up at an angle to show the mass of puffs which make the high Watteau coiffure. From the sides of the hat narrow ribbons extend backward to tie in a bow just below the knot or puffs of the hairdressing, and roses, forget-me-nots, heliotrope or other old-fashioned flowers are massed across the front of the brim, over her eyes.

Feathers Promised For Summer Season.

Quite in contrast to the coquettish Watteau bonnets are the severe, high-crowned Directoire bonnets with a bunch of small ostrich feathers nodding from the top of the tall crown in front. One of these hats, in fine black straw, has a fawn-colored ostrich plume in pompon shape at the very top of the crown, in front, a ruche of black tulle running around the crown, two inches from the top. Under the chin goes a "bride" of black velvet ribbon.

The graceful Georgette sailor pictured is trimmed with a new conceit in ostrich—a sort of shell ornament combined with a short, curling feather. Another feather is attached piquantly to the velvet streamers, the little plume curling over the shoulder when the streamers are pulled forward—as all hat streamers should be, for hat ribbons hanging down the back do not accord with the smart silhouette. This Georgette sailor, in the graceful, unexaggerated shape that this milliner loves best is of taupe colored milan with ostrich in fawn color and streamers of Nattier blue.

An exceedingly smart hat by Chanel shows a new adaptation of ostrich to the needs of a high-brimmed turban. The crown of this hat is quite lost except from a top view for swathings of ostrich mount to the very edge of the high, turned-up brim. An ornamental pin of pinkish pearl is thrust among the feathery mass at one side, giving a characteristic touch to the black hat. To Lewis again one turns for an example of the newest feather arrangement. And who would not turn to Lewis—and turn and turn again—for hats and hats and hats, if one had carte blanche to buy one's heart's desire of millinery? A new Lewis hat all black—as so many of the smartest hats are this spring—is of fine crin in Napoleonic shape with a very wide turned back brim held to the crown by a pleated cockade of black grosgrain ribbon. From side to side of the hat, traveling quite across the crown go sixteen tiny black ostrich tips, placed close together. At a little distance they might be tiny, plump birds roosting on that hat and the effect is chic and unforgettable.

Black and silver hats are a special type of this season, for silver has found its way to the hat after exploiting itself all winter on the dance frock. A black and silver model by Marcelle Demay is pictured. The graceful shape is of black lace straw, the brim tilted up at the back to show the hair. Picot edged silver ribbon, tied into little bows, encircles the base of the crown and at the front is a big rose of silver petals and leaves. Streamers of black velvet are attached to the brim at the back and are caught together below the shoulders with another silver rose.

Navy Blue and Roses.

Because navy blue is a shade hard to obtain just now, capricious fashion elects navy blue as her special favorite. Rather new are leghorn models trimmed with navy blue silk and ribbon, and deep pink roses. The blue is a bright rather than a dark navy, the shade that is almost universally becoming to dark, light and gray-haired women. A charming summer hat from Marcelle Demay is of floppy leghorn with crown entirely covered with navy blue taffeta. A cluster of five pink roses rests on the back of the brim toward the right, weighting the supple brim at this point, and from the under side of the drooping brim come two navy blue streamers which are pulled forward over the shoulder. An Odette hat of navy blue crin has a down-slanting brim and a tall crown around which swirls buff-colored ostrich, and tiny pink roses nestle among the feathers.

From Georgette is a practical and smart sailor of blue milan faced with blue satin. Around the crown are many overlapping bands of narrow ribbon in parrot red, buff, black and blue.

POLISH THE SPECS

IT is deplorable to note, as one travels about, how many eyeglasses need a polishing cloth. People otherwise well groomed and smartly dressed wear glasses sadly in need of cleaning. Fingermarks show all around the edge of the lens and sometimes there are smudges and spots on the glass directly in front of the eye, the wearer twisting his head sidewise to regard you through a clear place, when thirty seconds' use of a polishing cloth would make the lenses clear and shining. It is the eyeglass that is constantly put on and off that seems to be the neglected one. People who wear glasses continuously usually keep them spic and span—perhaps because they realize how much their appearance depends on the clear, flawless condition of the glass always before their eyes. For a few cents a package of prepared cleaning and polishing paper may be obtained and one has only to tear off a leaf and rub the glasses half a minute to make them brilliantly clear.

MOTORING DEMANDS A PILLOW NOW.

THE latest addition to the comfort of the luxurious motorist is a tonneau pillow of leather which may be shoved between the seat-cushion and one's shoulderblades, or tucked under an elbow, or even placed beneath the feet. Two or three of these pillows make a wide tonneau seat much more comfortable when only one person occupies it, for the leather pillows, wedged in the space ordinarily occupied by another person, keep the solitary one from sliding and slipping about in the jolting of the car. The pillows are bag-shaped and have handles at one side so they may be carried easily. They come in various shades of leather and will be useful also in the canoe and at roadside picnics when the car stops for luncheon en route.

A Mantilla At the Opera

AMERICANS are quick to take up new style tendencies—if the tendencies please them. The Spanish vogue has "caught-on" to feminine fancy and one counts scores of high Spanish combs sustaining piled up coiffures in every well dressed audience at the theatre now. In an opera box late in March was observed a slender blond woman wearing a well suggested mantilla device made of airy folds of black tulle—a long black tulle veil, it was really thrown over the head and falling almost to the waistline at the back and on the shoulders. Around the head, confining the folds of tulle was a tiara of jet and brilliants. This rested just above the brows in front and rose to a peak. At the back it narrowed to of black tulle, veiling the golden hair of the wearer and her dazzling white shoulders in an effect that was alluring and fascinating. Her white gown had the Spanish tendency also in that it was laden with flounces of real old Spanish lace alternating with flounces of Chantilly. A bolero of white velvet embroidered in silver formed part of the bodice.

BONBONS FOR MILADY.

THE most fascinating candy box yet, it seems, is being offered to generous swains and gallants who step into a certain Fifth avenue shop where sweets are sold—for a price. The swain or gallant who orders this particular bonbon receptacle for the box, and a pound of chocolates will cost him almost all of three ten dollar bills. Think of nearly thirty dollars for a box of candy! Milady must have a sweet tooth indeed, to appreciate such a gift. But it is the box that is expensive, the chocolates being the quite ordinary—in Manhattan—sort that come for a dollar or so the pound. The receptacle for candy forms the base of a graceful Empire couch of hand-tooled green leather. Upon the couch are many little cushions of colored silk and gold lace and upon the silken cushions reclines a wee Parisienne, a graceful little figure made of bisque and clad in a modish negligee of white tulle and silver lace, with a pink rosebud about the size of a pin head here and there. After the candy is gone the receptacle may be used as a jewel

Helping Nature's Roses

ROSY girlhood!" How the poets have sung of it, from time immemorial! "A June rose of a girl,' sings one; "My rose of the rosebud garden of girls," says another. Girls themselves give very little thought to their likeness to roses; it is after the forty year mark has been passed and the rose flush has faded from a sallow, sluggish middle-aged skin that woman locks back with yearning toward that wonderful, brilliant, altogether unappreciated complexion of girlhood.

It is safe to say that there is no living, civilized woman, to whom the thought of "make-up" does not occur at one time or other. Sometimes the thought is put sternly away as immoral and worldly; sometimes the temptation is resisted because of ignorance of the ways and means of acquiring that rose-flush of prettiness through artificial means.

The time is past when a little becoming "make-up" was considered a "disgrace to a decent woman." Even the debutante touches up now—after a wearing season of late hours; the chit of seventeen has her vanity kit of poudre de riz and lipstick and uses them, unashamed, in the dressing room at ball or restaurant. The only heinous crime about making-up, these days, is the sin of being found out. A false and artificial appearance is in execrable taste. Make-up that is apparent robs a face of beauty and of charm; but there seems no valid reason why woman should not "help out" her faded complexion and make it more youthful, just as she "helps out" her faded tresses by adding artificial braids and puffs.

Flesh colored powder should be used for daylight unless one is a very swarthy brunette. For dark complexions there is a special brunette powder. The pure white or rose-tinted powder is for gaslight use only, and even then is safe only for the blond beauty with a naturally clear, dazzling skin. After the powder has been applied evenly all over the face, smooth it down with a bit of chamois, lambswool or tuft of absorbent cotton and finally blend it into the powder with the bit of chamois. If the face is plump and rounded the rouge should be applied high on the cheeks and near the nose; if thin and narrow, the face should be touched with color lower on the cheeks and toward the cheekbone.

The removal of the make-up is as important as its application. The face must be gone over with pure cold cream and then bathed in warm water and soap and rinsed in several waters, the last one rather cold. The bits of chamois and lambswool with which powder and rouge are applied must also be kept scrupulously clean. If they are not, grime and dust will be rubbed into the skin each time they are used.

If the complexion is clear and fine-textured it may be induced to show a pretty natural color, even though ordinarily rather pallid. The color will not last long, of course, but while it lasts it will be charming. Care should be taken, however, not to roughen or coarsen the skin by too much pinching and pulling in order to bring up the color. The tiny blood vessels under the skin of cheeks and nose are very delicate, and constant pinching and stimulating of the complexion may bring about a result more unbecoming than sallowness or pallor.

Systematic slapping is the best pun-

A pinching massage to stimulate circulation.

Alcohol, sprayed on the skin every night after the careful face bath with warm water and then cold water, will help to make the skin firmer and more youthful in texture. A loose skin sags over the muscles and puckers into tiny wrinkles around the eyes. Be very careful, however, to keep the eyes tight shut while you use the alcohol spray. Next, pat the cheeks, brow and chin lightly with the palms of the hands, going over the entire face with light, quick little taps. This will bring the blood to the surface.

A sensitive skin will respond to the alcohol spray with a rose flush of pretty color.

on the fingers, go over the face with a light, firm, pinching motion, picking up every inch of the skin between thumb and forefinger and rolling it around slightly before letting go. Be careful to pinch the muscles under the skin as well as the skin itself. You will be all in a glow by the time you finish.

If you have strong scruples against the use of cosmetics, try this simple vegetable treatment sometime, when you wish to appear especially well and wish you possessed a little of that rosy girlhood look you used to have. Massage the face and neck with crushed strawberry pulp and juice. Follow with a massage of thick, sweet cream, pinching a whole half pint of the cream into the skin. Allow this to dry in for half an hour or more—you will be surprised to note how youthfully pink and white your complexion has grown! Now slice a raw beet and apply it lightly to your cheeks. You will be rewarded by a delicate rose flush of color. Last of all use a very little powder, ordinary talcum will do if you have objections

VOLUNTARY TRUSTS

These trusts are operative during life and not after death. Their purpose is to establish an income producing fund for dependent friends or relatives, or for charitable endowment, and are particularly designed to relieve the overburdened business man of the care of his accumulated capital.

Voluntary Trusts are created by mutual agreement, the terms of which may provide for the disposition of the fund at death. This Company is prepared to handle such trusts and our Officers will be glad to answer questions on the subject.

KEEP 'EM SHORT.

MEN ARE MIGHTY PARTICULAR ABOUT THEIR SHOES THESE DAYS.

Formerly style didn't cut much of a figure. It only mattered whether soles were as thick as a beefsteak, toes copper plated and heels benailed like a riveted boiler plate.

But nowadays men demand style, and more than that, little touches of individuality and personality such as found in "Van Arsdale's Shoe Leaders for Men."

DR. O'BRIEN WEDS MISS TOWNSEND

Daughter of Former Mayor and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Bride of Albany Man.

A RECEPTION FOLLOWS

Rev. Dr. Vincent G. O'Brien, Brother of Bridegroom, Performs the Ceremony—Couple to Live in Albany Following Honeymoon.

Miss Margaret Townsend, daughter of former Mayor and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, of Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, and Dr. Joseph P. O'Brien, of Albany, N. Y., were married at 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. Dr. Vincent G. O'Brien, S. T. L., of Albany, brother of the bridegroom, performing the ceremony in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends of the couple.

The bride wore a white satin gown covered with silk net, trimmed with pearls, court train, and she also wore a tulle veil and cap, caught with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of bride roses. Her attendants, which were ribbon carriers, were as follows:

Mrs. Edward T. Booth, Mrs Chas. E. McConnell, the Misses Helen Joy, Dorothy Burke and Ruth Waldo, of Plainfield; Miss Marion Overton, of Flushing, N. Y.; Miss Margaret Foss, of Newton, Mass; Miss Catherine Hooper, of Montclair; the Misses Joyce Knowlton and Dwight Power and Mrs. Thomas J. Goddard, of New York; Miss Marian Yeaw, of South Orange; Mrs. Frederic B. Clark, of St. Albans, Vt., and Miss Adice Williams, of Springfield, Mass., nearly of whom were school and classmates of the bride in college. They were all gowned in white. Dr. Joseph Cox, of Albany, N. Y., was the best man.

The ribbon carriers formed an aisle through which the other members of the bridal party walked as the wedding march was played by an orchestra. Following the ceremony there was a reception, during which Dr. and Mrs. O'Brien were showered with congratulations, and an elaborate wedding supper was served.

Later in the evening the bride and bridegroom left for Ashville, N. C., where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside at Albany.

The home was lavishly decorated for the affair by Carson with a choice assortment of Southern smilax, spring flowers, palms and greens, the arrangement in the large living room, where the ceremony was performed, and the dining room being especially attractive and greatly admired by the guests. The color scheme was green and white.

Mrs. O'Brien is a graduate of Miss Hall's School, Pittsfield, Mass., and Smith College, class of '11, of which she has been vice-president and secretary. She is president of the Alpha Society, member of the French Club, Pleides, G. D. and A. O. H. and White Lodge of Smith College. The family is prominent in business and social affairs. Mr. Townsend, father of the bride, was formerly Mayor of North Plainfield, is president of the People's National Bank, of Westfield, a director of the Plainfield Trust Company and a member of the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital. The bride was the recipient of a large collection of valuable gifts from relatives and friends.

Dr. O'Brien is the son of Professor and Mrs. Stanley O'Brien, of Albany, his father being the head of the Albany Teachers' Training School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Union College and Albany Medical School, an active member of the Clinical Club of Albany and Albany County Medical Society, a member of the board of directors and on the staff of St. Peter's Hospital, Albany, and one of the two attending physicians there.

TAXI STOLEN WHILE DRIVER COLLECTS FARE

Harry Huff, owner of the Ford Taxicab Company, reported to the police this morning that a taxicab driven by Jack Kreger was stolen last night from in front of Iroquois Hotel in Newark. The machine was left there for only a few minutes while the driver went inside to collect for a trip. It has not been recovered.

PROMISED TO TREAT WIFE BETTER AND IS RELEASED

Edward Neal, arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of abusing his wife, entered a plea of guilty, but when the woman begged that he be given another chance he got off with a suspended sentence. Neal promised Judge De Meza that he would take the pledge and be a better husband. He also promised his wife in open court to treat her better and was released.

WORK ON PLANT WILL START SOON

Ground to Be Broken in Two Weeks for American Motor Corporation Factory.

PLANS ARE COMPLETE

First Group of Structures Will Include Administration Offices, Power House and Main Building 400 Feet Long.

Plans have been completed and approved for the automobile plant to be erected on West Front street near Grant avenue, by the American Motor Corporation, of New York, the first announcement of which was made in the Plainfield Daily Press a week ago, and within the next two weeks ground will be broken for the buildings. In the meantime the various contracts will be awarded.

The plans call for an administration building, power plant and a main structure which will be about 400 feet long, occupying almost the entire depth of the tract. Concrete and brick will be used in the construction, with steel sashes, all of the buildings to be strictly fireproof. These plans will be filed within a few days with Building Inspector T. O. Doane, when a permit will be granted.

While the exact cost of the buildings to be erected has not been made public it is known that it will run into many thousands of dollars. The American Motor Corporation will manufacture pleasure cars chiefly, it being understood that one of the machines to be built will be made to sell for about $1,000. Mr. Chevrolet, who is already engaged in the manufacture of automobiles, is the vice president of the American Motor Corporation, and all of those who are connected with the concern are thoroughly experienced in the business.

Only skilled mechanics will be employed at the plant, which means that a large number of desirable citizens will be added to Plainfield's population. Several hundred employes will be engaged, the majority of whom will have to find homes in Plainfield or vicinity.

The land upon which the plant will be built was owned by former Councilman John E. Dunn, of West Front street, and in disposing of it to the automobile coming, first made sure of getting a railroad siding which will be required by the company. Mr. Dunn has asked the City Council to vacate Oxford place for that purpose and as he owns practically all of the property involved there is no question but what the street will be vacated.

A citizen who is in touch with the situation said: "Plainfield and all its civic bodies should feel highly pleased over the advent of a large and desirable industry here, and the best part of it is that the American Motor Corporation is coming here asking no special favors. All it wants is fair treatment from the city which I am sure it will receive.

"There was a strong possibility of the plant being located in Newark, but Mr. Dunn is to be congratulated upon his successful efforts in inducing the company to build in Plainfield. The officials are much pleased with the site for their plant, adding that it offers so many advantages, not the least of which are the railroad macilities, and the proximity to New York making it possible to run cars back and forth to New York within a comparatively short time."

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY TO HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

The woman's auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. will hold its annual meeting in the Y. M. C. A. building tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, for the annual election of officers. The National Quartet of the evangelistic party have very kindly promised to sing at this meeting. A large attendance is desired so that members will not only enjoy the privilege of hearing these singers, but also show their appreciation of their kindness. It is hoped that all members will make an effort to be present, as this will be the last meeting of the auxiliary until next fall.

He Who Hesitates Is Lost!

URGES SUPPORT OF CLEAN SHOWS

Rev. C. H. Mallery in Sermon Says "Movies" Can Be Force for Good or Evil.

AVOID BAD PICTURES

Preacher Says Solution is to Be Found in Making Real Christians Out of Those Who Like Doubtful Entertainments.

Endorsing the Mayor's letter in reference to moving pictures and other forms of amusement, also the committee recently formed to assist in the work of preventing improper and injurious entertainments, Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, at the morning service yesterday delivered a strong sermon on these topics.

He showed that the executive and the leading citizens of this community are alert and jealous of the moral welfare of the city. Among other things Mr. Mallery said:

"Our own church allows a wide liberty in the matter of amusements. It does not condemn theatre-going as such, but trusts to the developed Christian conscience of her children. She holds that you cannot make people righteous by legalism, and wishes her members to use their God-given free will in these matters, strengthened by sacramental grace. In short she wishes to train them to say yes to that which is good and no to that which is bad.

"There is nothing inherently wrong in any form of proper amusement, only in the abuse of it. Moving pictures occupy the central position in the amusement world today. They provide a cheap form of entertainment. They vividly portray the scenes from real life and enormous sums are expended upon these productions.

"They attract numberless persons, young and old. Herein lies the point, like the newspapers serving so large a constituency they can be a force for great good or great evil. Now the managers supply what the public want. We are part of the public. It is therefore for us to want only what is uplifting and amusing in the highest sense. This leads me to the real problem.

"What are we going to do with that part of the public which seems to want and delight in the low, vulgar and unmoral? I won't say immoral for that I do not believe is permitted anywhere. And as a necessary consequence what are we going to do as Christian people about the pictures which managers supply for the gratification of this part of the public?

"The solution of the matter is to be found in making real Christians out of those who like the doubtful pictures. Then they won't want to see them. All public questions are religious and moral questions at bot-

GERMAN ANSWER IS SATISFACTORY

Washington Believes New Submarine Orders Meet Demands of U. S

PEACE TALK HUSHED

Lansing Says There Will Be Important Developments Soon—Assaults on Hill 304 Are Repulsed Claims French War Office.

Washington, May 8.—The American note replying to Germany's submarine concession will be ready today and probably cabled to Germany immediately. This was stated by an administration official today. The note is brief and simply accepts the new instructions to submarine commanders as complying with the demand of the U. S.

No Peace Talk Now.

Secretary of State Lansing announced today that he would make public a statement regarding the submarine situation in the near future, but he declined to discuss the forthcoming note to Germany. The note, it is understood, will tell Germany that her contention that the American Government press its claims against Great Britain regarding the orders in council is not acceptable to the United States. Secretary Lansing declined to discuss the peace talk which is oin the air, but important developments are expected in the near future.

Steel Charge Kills 804.

Paris, May 8.—French war statement:

Fighting of the utmost violence was in progress all night on the Verdun front. Following further attacks by the Germans, the French launched serious counter assaults on both sides of the Meuse. The War Office announced today: To the west of the Meuse the Crown Prince again hurled his Teutonic legions against the French positions on Hill No. 304, but the Germans were thrown back after suffering heavy losses. To the east of the Meuse the French attacked south of the Forest of Haudremont, driving the Germans from 500 yards of trenches they had captured on Sunday.

German U-Boat Sinks.

Amsterdam, May 8.—Advices from Berlin received here today state that a German submarine was recently sunk by a mine in the Black Sea off the Bulgarian port of Varna. Most of the crew were saved by a destroyer despatched from Varna.

ANOTHER TOWN IN U. S. RAIDED

Three Soldiers Killed as They Fight Off Three Hundred Bandits.

MORE TROOPERS SENT

Carranza's Attention is Called to Latest Outrage—Scott and Obregon Still in Conference on Whole Situation.

Washington, May 8.—Secretary of State Lansing today announced that Consul General Rodgers at Mexico City had been instructed to call Carranza's attention to the Glen Springs raid in which three American soldiers and a boy were killed.

The raid happened at 10 o'clock Friday night, when a force estimated at from 150 to 300 Mexicans crept up on the little settlement. They avoided the border patrol, forded the Rio Grande and crossed the intervening sandy stretch at night. There were nine men of the Fourteenth cavalry stationed at Glenn Springs. Others in the village were C. D. Wood and W. K. Ellis, owners of a wax factory, with their families; J. Deemer, owner of a general store, and F. Compton, Deemer's clerk. Deemer and Compton were captured and are reported to have been killed by the bandits.

The United States cavalry men killed, all privates, were:

Rogers, Lawrence K., Danville, Ky.

Colock, Stephen J., father lives at 331 East Thirty-ninth street, New York.

Cohen, William, mother lives at 227 East Ninety-eighth street, New York.

The Big Bend country is in a white heat of rage, and throughout the district cattlemen and other residents are rallying to the cry for vengeance. A battalion ordered out by General Funston, following delayed reports of the fight of the American troops converging on Marathon, Tex., by railroad, detrained immediately and swept southward over the desert.

CONFERENCE IS STILL ON.

General Scott notified the War Department that he and General Obregon will continue their conference today. It was stated at the War Department today that no steps yet had been taken to send reinforcements to the border as no request has yet been received from General Funston for additional troops.

INDOOR PICNIC TONIGHT.

Everything is in readiness for the indoor picnic to be given in the Columbus Club tonight under the auspices of the Sisterhood of Temple Sholem. The spacious hall has been attractively decorated for the event and fitted up with booths of various kinds to supply the needs of the attendants. Dancing will be the chief enjoyment.

SECOND COMING OF CHRIST NOT FAR OFF, DR. BIEDERWOLF WARNS PLAINFIELD; PREPARE, HE URGES

SIGNS OF GROWING UNREST AMONG THE JEWS ONE REASON FOR BELIEF THAT PROPHESIES OF THE BIBLE ARE SOON TO BE FULFILLED.

ATTENDANCE OF 18,500 SINCE SATURDAY

Men's Meeting Yesterday Afternoon Was One of the Most Impressive of Entire Campaign.—Many Turned Away Last Night—Total Number of Decisions and Reconsecrations Now Nearing 4,000—Community Day Enjoyed.

Expressing his belief that the second coming of Christ was not far away the Rev. William E. Biederwolf last night made a plea that Plainfield people prepare for this, the most important event yet before the world.

He gave as his reasons for believing that Christ was soon to visit the world again, the large number of people running to and fro over the world in ships, railroad trains, automobiles and aeroplanes; the fulfillment of the prophecy of Matthew that the "Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness and then shall the end come"; the coming of perilous times on the world in anarchy, nihilism, lawlessness and war; the falling away of faith on the part of Christians and the growing unrest among the Jews.

"And what's the meaning of all this unrest among the Jews" asked the evangelist. "They are going back to Jerusalem. Every morning in every clime and in every nation wherever the Orthodox Jew is scattered, he lifts his voice and prays for his return that he may have a part in the rebuilding of the temple in Jerusalem. The Zionist movement has been organized with a capital of $50,000,000 to help on with the work."

The sermon on the Second Coming of Christ was delivered at the evening service of Sunday and the largest crowd that has attended a service at the Tabernacle heard it. Every seat in the big pine temple was filled, and there were at least 250 people standing in the rear of the building. Hundreds more came and went away.

In the afternoon a crowd of 2,500 men heard Dr. Biederwolf's sermon on "The Price of a Man," and Saturday evening there were 3,500 men and women present to whom he preached on "A Refuge of Lies." During all of Saturday the Tabernacle was a mecca for worshippers. It was "Community Day," and people came from all parts of the county and the community to attend the all-day services. At noon, luncheon was served on a big table, and free coffee was served to all there. In the afternoon, Mr. McEwan conducted a Chautauqua hour, that was a pleasing feature of the day's program. Dr. Biederwolf preached at 11 a. m. and again at 3 p. m. Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Brake conducted a woman's meeting in the First Methodist church, and a good crowd attended this service.

Norristown is Represented.

More than 200 friends of Dr. Biederwolf and his party came all the way from Norristown, Pa., Saturday to attend the evening service. They were headed by Mayor Saul and the Rev. Dr. Evans, and the delegation was big enough to warrant a special train. Mr. Roberts met them at the depot and they marched to the Tabernacle behind the Dutch Arms Band. "Mac," and the big chorus choir gave them a rousing welcome when they filed in and took the section of seats reserved for them in the center of the building, and they joined in singing their favorite song. There was also a delegation from Allentown, Pa., and one from Stelton, Pa. Dr. Biederwolf said there was a delegation present from Lockport, N. Y., but as it was only a single visitor he did not call upon her to stand up and be counted.

The Norristown visitors wanted

SUNDAY COLLECTIONS AMOUNTED TO $537.72

The collection at Sunday afternoon's service for men at the Tabernacle was $217.74. This money goes to the Dutch Arms Band and more will probably be added by the committee. The collection last night was $319.98 and it goes to the Y. M. C. A. to repay that association for extra expenses incurred in connection with the Biederwolf campaign.

ARRESTED AS FUGITIVE FROM TWO OTHER CITIES

Carl Prusser was arrested by Capt. Flynn on Front street Saturday night charged with being a fugitive from justice. It is said that he is wanted in Lynchburg, Va., and in Rochester, N. Y. When arraigned in court this morning the man was remanded for a day by Judge De Meza until the two cities could be heard from.

FUNERAL OF T. A. KURZHALS.

The fueral of Theodore A Kurzhals, whose death occurred at his home on West Sixth street, following a long illness, was held at the late residence yesterday afternoon. The service was private and was attended only by the relatives and immediate friends. Rev. Dr. C. W. F. Attlee was the officiating clergyman. The numerous floral tributes in evidence included handsome set pieces from Plainfield Lodge, No 44, I. O. O. F.; Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M, and Exempt Firemen's Association, to which Mr Kurzhals belonged. Burial was in Evergreen cemetery, the pall-bearers being six members of Plainfield Lodge of Odd Fellows. These were John Becker, Joseph Sheppard, Jacob Kettenring, Charles Shleif, Peter Doeringer and Michael Koller.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' MEETING.

The continuation of the City Union of King's Daughters' annual meeting will be held in the First Baptist church tomorrow afternoon, at which time Dr. William E. Biederwolf will make the principal address. Another address on the State work of the King's Daughters will be made by Mrs. Charles A. Menet, of East Orange, president of the State Union. The National quartet will sing and Mrs. Brake will also be present. The public is cordially invited. All King's Daughter are requested to wear their silver cross or a bow of purple.

FORETELL SUCCESS OF THREE PLAYLETS

Cup Bearers' Circle of King's Daughters Present Theatricals Tonight.

Rehearsing for the three amateur theatricals to be produced under the auspices of the Cup Bearers' Circle of King's Daughters in the Plainfield High School auditorium tonight was brought to a close with a dress finale Saturday night, the results of which foretell a monster success. Three shows, "The Open Door," "That Brute Simmons" and "Our Aunt From California," are included in the program, the first named being overflowing with pathos and the latter two having enough of the humorous element to return the audience to a natural state of mind.

During the past month a cast of amateurs, many of whom have scored successes in other local productions in times past, have been rehearsing the various parts and the last drill Saturday night indicated that the rough edges have been smoothed off and all is in readiness for the curtain raising at 8:15 tonight.

Tickets have been selling at Miller's drug store in a very satisfactory manner to date but there are still a number of good reservations left and these may be either purchased at the store or at the door tonight.

Mrs. Maxwell Perkins and Brown Rolston take the serious parts in the evening's program, being the only two principals in the playlet, "The Open Door." Both have polished up their parts to perfection and it is expected that they will appeal to the softer sentiments of the entire audience. Mrs. Perkins and Mr. Rolston are well known to lovers of amateur theatrical efforts and have won a name for themselves in many charity entertainments staged in this city and borough.

Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick, Walter L. Righter and Harold Underhill have been assigned to the roles in "That Brute Simmons" and Miss Dorthy Burke, Mrs. Jesse E. Ward, Miss Edith Griscom, Mrs. Edward C. Suffern, Mrs. Edward J. Waring and Miss Hope Ivans appear in "Our Aunt from California." Both of these playlets are filled with mirth and many side-splitting lines guaranteed to put the audience in a jovial frame of mind will be carried by the participants.

Additional entertainment will be provided by Walter L. Righter, who will render a number of Scotch songs for which he is well known. The Watchung Troop quartet will sing several selections.

WILL LENGTHEN P. C. C. COURSE

Purchase of Sixty Acres Adjoining Land Will Probably Be Authorized.

PROVISION FOR WOMEN

It is Expected That Nine-hole Course Will Be Set Aside Exclusively for Feminine Competition—Property in View is Ideal for Purpose.

Negotiations for the purchase of sixty acres of rolling meadow land have practically been completed by the trustees of the Plainfield Country Club, and a special meeting of the organization has been called for Wednesday night in the auditorium of the Hartridge School. Three questions will be placed before the members on that occasion, and upon the reception of these issues depends the success of the proposition to increase the course from 5,706 yards to nearly 9,000 yards, or possibly more.

Notices sent to club members indicate that votes will be taken on the proposition of increasing the dues of active members from $35 to $50 per year, on and after April 1, 1917; on the purchase of sixty acres of land; and on the issuance of a new mortgage for $100,000 and the retirement of a portion of the existing bonds.

The contemplated purchase property immediately adjoins the present eighteen-hole course and an informal canvass of those interested foretells the success of the plan to put the deal through with all possible haste. The acreage is ideal for the use to which it will be put, and its addition would make the Plainfield Country Club course one of the best in New Jersey.

Tentative details call for a split in the present links which will mean that nine holes will be kept exclusively for feminine competition. This nine-hole arrangement for women's play has long been needed and the increasing number of feminine players who use the course has made it imperative that some provision be made immediately.

The present eighteen-hole course has been in use for years, but a number of improvements have been made to it which have placed it on a plane with the best in the State as far as the lay-out is concerned. Should the proposition to purchase the land meet with favorable consideration—and it seems likely that it will—immediate plans will be made to lay-out the additional stretch and the advice of some of the best-known golf-course architects in the country will be sought.

 In my opinion nothing is so great a source of annoyance to telephone users, nothing results in so great a loss of temper and time and such general irritability, as the practice of calling a telephone number and then having an office boy or the office telephone girl hold the wire until the desired party answers.  If there's waiting to be done it's the CALLING party's obligation to do it. ******

An excerpt from one of many letters of protest against a time-wasting practice.

Be Ready To Talk When Your Party Answers

The practice of giving a telephone call to the operator and then allowing the office boy or the office telephone girl to "hold the wire" until the called party answers, may save the time of the calling party—but it wastes the time of the called party.

Numerous letters received on this subject from prominent subscribers and numerous protests clipped from the daily press indicate that the proper way is to

EDITOR TALKS ON 'FACTS OF SOCIALISM'

First Public Gathering of Socialists is Held in Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall, Dunellen.

The first public Socialist meeting ever held in Dunellen took place Saturday evening in Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall, under the auspices of the English and Slovak branches of the Socialist party, both of which have been organized since the last November election. Edwin W. Wheat, who is the secretary of the English branch and editor of the "fun column" of the New York Call, introduced the English speaker, Eugene J. Brock, of Newark.

Mr. Brock, who spoke on "The Facts of Socialism," showed how primitive industry has developed into the present complex industrial system, and how the means of production have passed into the hands of non-producers, to whom the actual producers of wealth must come for "jobs." He made the statement that Socialism is already in force right in Dunellen, samples being the publicly- or socially-owned schools, fire department, streets and post office, and undertook to show that Socialism means nothing more nor less than the extension of this same government ownership and operation for the common good.

The secretary of the Slovak branch, Jacob V. Halenar, then introduced the Slovak speaker, Joseph Schiffel, of Rahway, who gave a very interesting exposition of the Socialist principles, laying special stress on the idea that univirsal peace is, from the Socialist point of view, impossible under the present capitalist system, and that Socialism is the only cure for war.

The Dunellen Slovak Brass Band organized eight months ago and composed entirely of shop men, rendered several selections, including "America" and the Socialist international air, "La Marseillaise."

BIRTHDAY PARTY GIVEN TO MISS FRANCES GARY

Mrs. Elwood Gary, of Dunellen avenue, tendered her daughter, Frances, a party in honor of her ninth birthday Saturday afternoon. The program of entertainment included games, dancing and music. READS EXCELLENT PAPER ON "FRIENDS' PRINCIPLES"

An excellent paper on "Friends' Principles" was presented by Mrs. Ford Carver, of Newark, at the meeting of the Young Friends' Association Saturday evening. It was clear and forceful and was followed by an earnest discussion. It was pointed out that if only the policy of clearly stating religious principles to children and young people had been common fifty years ago instead of the suicidal scheme of turning out members for marrying out of the meeting, the long period of dwindling would have been avoided by the Society of Friends.

Following the talk, refreshments were served by a committee. It was announced that the annual picnic of the Young Friends' Association would be held on June 10.

SUPPORT GOOD SHOWS

tom. When we realize this and act upon it most of our social problems will be solved. As to the degenerate pictures themselves our duty is to avoid them, protest them, back up the authorities in their efforts to suppress them and create a public sentiment against them.

"To sum it up, do something yourself. Don't simply complain or blame something or somebody else or write letters to the newspapers. The Mayor and Council are on the job and are trying to serve the people and I would urge that you give them your support. Finally, to get back to the text let us take St. Paul's advice in all these matters: 'Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind that ye may prove what is good and acceptable and the perfect will of God.' 'Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.'"

MRS. GEORGE ENDICOTT HITS THE BULLS-EYE

The feature of Saturday's meet of the New Market Rifle Club was the fact that a woman took her turn for the first in endeavoring to hit the bull's eye with the men. Her name is Mrs. George Endicott and while she was next to last in the standing at the completion of the match in which she participated she succeeded in hitting the bull's eye once, which her husband was the only other contestant to do. Mrs. Endicott has been doing more or less shooting all of her life with rifles of small calibre, but she had never handled an army rifle. She says that with a little practice she had ought to do as well as any of the men.

"The Price of a Man"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Sunday Afternoon

Text—"And he sold his birthright"—Gen. 25:33.

Some men are 99 per cent. meat. They make you think of a walking advertisement for a butcher shop. All that's lacking is one of their signs, "Dressed Pork" or "Dressed Beef." If you were looking for manhood you'd have to hunt for it in avoirdupois, but its mighty poor hunting ground for a thing like that, believe your Uncle Fuller.

One of the keenest men the Senate has ever known was Alexander H. Stevens. He was noted for his wit and his quick repartee and a man always trembled when he thought of crossing swords with him in debate. He was a little fellow from the standpoint of avoirdupois, and he was known as the "little giant." During the last part of his Senatorial career they had to wheel him back and forth from the Senate in a chair. One day he got in a debate with a fellow by the name of Tombs, a Senator from Georgia, and Stevens said something that Tombs didn't like. Tombs was a great big 280-pounder and he came over to where Stevens was sitting, and bending over him, said: "Stevens, God curse you. I can eat you up," and quick as a flash Stevens replied, "If you do you'll have more brains in your belly than you ever had in your head."

And yet it wasn't brains that gave Stevens his manhood. Some men are all brains, and if you were looking for manhood you'd have to hunt for it in the gray matter of th skull, but that's a mighty poor hunting ground for a thing like that.

And then, you know, we talk about a man being made out of money. And when he is, depend upon it, there's precious little other timber goes into his makeup, and as a rule he's as hard and as tough as the money he's got his heart set on. I said "heart," but if you dig down into the place where his heart ought to be, looking for manhood, you'd find the image of a small safety deposit box, and that's mighty poor hunting ground for a thing like that, my word and yours for it again.

They Sold Out.

And so on I could run down through the list of the voluptuaries and the political de-humanized pieces of human furniture and the Beau Brummels and the effeminate sissies of society and so on looking for manhood but I'd never find it. Where has it gone? It's been sold to the Devil for the stuff they've stolen in return. The Devil made his bid and they sold out.

We talk about a man being self-made. Well, I'll tell you there's more of them made that way than any other. That's what Tom Tombs said to Stevens when Stevens told him about the brains he'd have in his belly. Old Tombs commenced to hedge, and he said to Stevens: "I never had the opportunities you had; I'm a self-made man," and quick as a wink Stevens said: "Well, that relieves God of a mighty big responsibility."

You've got men here in Plainfield in the church and out of it, and if the angel of God came down and kept company with you for five minutes they'd have to disinfect him and fumigate him and deodorize him for a week before they could let him back through the gates of heaven again. That's because these men have undertaken to make their own lives and told God to get off the job.

Esau got a mess of potage for his.

A meaner and more despicable piece of business was never pulled off than the bargain made between those two twin brothers. Esau was the first born, but Jacob ran him a close second and come holding on to Esau's heel. They were after the birthright and Esau beat him to it by a length. The birthright was a great thing in any family in those days, but in the case of Isaac's offspring it meant all it ordinarily did and a good deal more, and Jacob had been scheming now for years to get hold of it in some way.

Esau was the world's first Epicurean; he was the founder of that sect whose motto and philosophy was "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow you die." Esau was a hunter. He had taken his gun in the morning and said: "Goodbye, Jacob, I'm off for the wild game," and then plunged into the woods.

Had Broth All Ready.

Now, I'd go you most anything that Jacob said to himself, "I'll put it over on Esau tonight when he comes home." He knew he'd come back with an appetite like a bear; he knew he worshipped his belly and didn't care about the covenant God had made with his father, and so he fixed some red broth, and I think he put in a little extra flavor that day and had it steaming hot when Esau got back.

And Esau came in faint and he said: "Say, Jacob, that stuff looks good to me; give me a bowl of it, for I'm dead hungry."

And now Jacob gets ready to drive a shrewd and a hard bargain. I'll declare I never find myself shouting over Jacob's character. He didn't give three whoops on the other side of Aram for what became of his brother. He was eternally looking out for number one.

And so Jacob said: "Esau, I tell you what I'll do; I'll give you all you want if you will sell me your birthright."

It was a most infamous thing to do. He could have swapped him a bucketful of some of his game, if he couldn't feed his hungry brother without a price. But Jacob's idea of charity was about the size of a coffin. Room for himself and nobody else.

And then the size of Esau's commenced to show up. He said he was dying and the birthright couldn't do him any good, and he lied when he said it. Nobody ever came in from a day's hunt as hungry and weak as that. He simply sold himself out for sensual satisfaction, and showed his contempt for the mighty heritage of God in which was wrapped up the everlasting salvation of the whole race, and if he had been just a little part of the man he ought to have been he would have died before he did it. But he despised his birthright and sold it for a bowl of red broth.

World Full of Them.

Esau was a fool and the world is full of others like him today—men who are selling their birthright every hour of every day for tempting morsels held out by the Devil's hand.

Say, my brothers, look here. Are you just the man you used to be? Are you the man God made you and meant you to be or have you been drifting away from manhood and from God? Luke Howard sold out sensual satisfaction and so did Esau. What are you selling for? What's the price you're putting on your own soul?

1. Some men sell out for money.

And there isn't any doubt about it we've got more moral paralysis for this reason than for any other. I'd like to talk an hour here.

A fellow says: "Well, we've got to have money?"

Sure, if you want it that way, and it's a good thing to have, but God never furnished any man an excuse for selling himself out—his conscience and his soul—to get it. And what we need is commercial men who will stand and refuse to do any business that violates God's law and people on the other side of the counter, especially church members, who will ring just as true to the Word of God and their own consciences when it comes to buying.

It would take just a little of that kind of stuff to put an end to all this unnecessary Sunday traffic. I've said many a time: "It's better to sell meat and flour and groceries and run the delivery wagon on Sunday than it is to sell cigars and tobacco and candy and soda water because the first are necessities and the others are luxuries, and the man who sells the groceries on Sunday is a better man than the man who sells the tobacco for the same reason, and I have had druggists to go back to their stores and say, "Look here, clerks, hereafter we'll fill prescriptions only on the Lord's Day and liverymen to go back to their barns and say: "Look here we'll run business hereafter on Sunday only for funerals and errands of mercy and drives of necessity."

I don't say it won't cost some of you a few dollars to be a Christian, but God will get it back to you some way. But what if he doesn't? I'd rather walk to heaven in rags than drive to hell on dirty money.

Many an old, grasping, money hearted rascal will pay his girls five and six dollars a week and expect them to get the balance they need from their gentlemen friends.

The Greedy Merchant.

And nine times out of ten a man like that will expect his clerks to stand behind the counter and lie and misrepresent his goods on bargain counters. This same man lives in a mansion and rides in a faultless limousine and a man stands on the street with his little boy and says: "There goes Mr. So and So; he's a millionaire and one of the great and honored men of the city" and do you mean to tell me that God won't damn in the hottest fires of hell a greedy old hog like that who, for the sake of putting a few more dollars in his till, will carry on his business in such a devilish way as that?

When Vanderbilt dropped dead, do you know what he was doing? He was talking to the vice-president of the B. and O. Railroad about a $100,000,000 deal. And you sit out there wondering how much you are going to leave when you die. And for all you know this sermon may be your funeral sermon, and I'll tell you how much you'll leave. You'll leave it all and God pity you if you sell out for money.

2. Some people sell out for political power and preferment and fame and honor and all the rest of it.

A fellow was talking to me the other day about the nervous strain of political life. It sounded like a joke to me. That's about the only thing the average politician has left when he comes out—his nerve. If he had talked about the moral strain, I would have said, "Sure thing; history's with you." Thousands of men have gone down under that strain, and all you've got to do is to take a look over into the great whirlpool of corruption to see where multitudes of the brightest characters of this nation have gone down in disgrace and everlasting moral ruin.

You once let a man put his foot on the virtue and the nobility that rises up with him, let him choke the truth that struggles for the mastery, let him sell out if he will his convictions, his manhood and his hope in Christ and get in the bargain everything that political power and fame and the honor of the world can give him, and when he's had it all and kept it till his hairs are gray and his back is bent, I'd like to try to have you take your scalpel and work down into the quivering secret of his soul and tell me what you find. I can tell you, for I know a man who had the experience, and when the doctor had shaken his head, the preacher came to see him.

He said: "I hope you are willing I should come."

And the dying man said, "Yes, preacher, I'm glad to see you; what you have to say to a man like me, say on, but don't talk about hell, for I've been in hell all my life and its flames have gotten hotter with every year that has rolled by, but if you've got any hope let me have it now." A man don't have to go to hell to realize what a fool he's been for putting a price on his manhood. The Price of a Man. God give us men the Devil can't buy.

Sensual Satisfaction.

3. Some men sell out for sensual satisfaction like Esau did.

With some men it's booze that does the business, like it was with poor Luke Howard. Go way back in the history of your own town and call the roll of your men up to the present time and how many of them have pawned their soul and gone to the Deil on account of whiskey. Men that might have had a happy home and been kind fathers and faithful husbands and amounted to something and been a credit to your town if it hadn't been for that damnable stuff.

The Price of a Man! With some men it's lust that does the business. I was in an Eastern city some time ago where they had a big funeral, and I was talking to a very prominent doctor about the man who was buried. He was a prominent attorney and a career of great promise had stretched out before him. Distinguished men from a distance, judges and men of the bar were there. And I said, "Doc, he must have been some citizen." And then he told me of his standing in the community and the things I've mentioned, but he said, "Biederwolf, if the people of this town knew what I know it would cause a sensation," and then he told me the story. Three years before he had gone to a city in the South and contracted a terrible social disease. He came back to his own wife. He gave the disease to her. And as a result of it all, mind, in just three short years she had to undergo an operation. Nine-tenths of women's operations are from this cause, I am told by a doctor.

Well, the result of the operation on this man's wife was a frightful obesity of fatness and she became mishapen, and a little later her whole face was paralyzed, and there she was, that once beautiful woman, suffering for the sin of a man she had given her love to, and nobody knew what it was or why it was but the doctor and that miserable whelp of a husband. He went to the springs, but they couldn't help him, and then he came and confessed it all to his doctor, but it was too late, and he died within a few weeks. And they gave him the big funeral, and nobody knows it to this day but one or two.

Held Up as Pattern.

And that's the way with more than one rotten-hearted cuss in almost every town on God's earth. He's respectable. Yes. And honored wherever he goes. If they can just get his name on the paper to head the list the project will go through and fathers will point their little boys to him and say, "Jimmy, you must try to be like Smith." And when he dies they give him the big funeral and they come from neighboring towns and they pow-wow over his rotten old carcass and pass a string of resolutions as long as this platform and send a copy to his wife and his lodge and print it in the dailies, with its "whereases" and "whereases" and "resolves," and all the time some broken-hearted mother's daughter in yonder village and the women in the red light district and his poor crushed wife, and maybe the doctor, knows the story of his rotten, treacherous life, and do you mean to tell me God won't deal with a man like that!

The Price of a Man. Have you got one? God pity you if you have.

4. Then some men sell out for popularity and the favor of man. You know it says in the Bible that many of the chief rulers believed in Christ, but they wouldn't confess Him, and it tells the reason why. It says they loved the praise of man more than the praise of God, and they would be put out of the synagogue.

You know it says, "The Fear of Man Bringeth the Snare," and why any man wants to be a big enough fool to turn his back on Christ for the sake of what man can do for him is a conundrum too hard for me to solve. Most of the bunch will pass you up while you are living if you get in trouble, but what are you going to do when you are dying? What are you going to do in the judgment? What are you going to do when you are in hell? Your best friend can't help you out. And yet there are some men who won't walk this aisle because you are afraid some old whiskey soak or some loose moraled cuss you've been running with will give you the horse laugh.

Say, men, get the laugh on the other fellow. I'd rather have the manhood and the courage to take a stand for Christ now and let a few old blokes laugh at me a little while here than I would be too cowardly to do it and have the Devils in hell poke it into me all eternity long because I didn't have the nerve to do what I know was the right thing to do.

Some Can't Be Bought.

The Price of a Man! Then what is your price? Thank God there are men that can't be bought at any price. I remember in the Spanish-American war down in Florida on Sunday the colonels and lieutenant-colonels, majors and other officers loaded up a small steamer with booze and went for a high old time down the St. John's River. And they said to William Jennings Bryan, colonel of the Third Nebraska Regiment, "Come on, Bryan, we'll have a great time." And Bryan said, "Gentlemen, I can't go; I don't drink. And then, this is the Lord's day, and I'm a Christian man, and then I have an influence over these 1,200 boys in my regiment committed to my care by the mothers of Nebraska, and I dare not go." And while that crowd, and a lot of them members of the church, were off on a drunk, on the Lord's day, for they passed by my tent at 1 o'clock, Monday morning, three sheets in the wind, Bryan passed the day reading and walking among the soldiers, and in the evening, when I went over to his regiment, I found them gathered beneath a huge canvas and William Jennings Bryan was standing before them with the Bible raised in his hand pleading with them to give themselves to their mother's Christ.

Gentlemen, let's be men—true men. Let the world, the flesh and the Devil make their bid. Don't damn your soul by selling out. For what is it going to profit you if you get the whole world and then go to hell? And if you've gone away from God, remember God will forgive you. And there isn't a man here today, I don't care who you are or where you have gone, that God doesn't love and He'll help you to become the man you always thought you'd be and the man I know you want to be today.

An old man, who was dying, said to me, "Do you think God will forgive me?" And I said, "Yes." But God pity you this afternoon, my brother, if you want to wait till a time like that. It's not the easiest thing to be a Christian, I know, but come out here and give me your hand and God will help us both, and we'll fight the Devil to the last ditch, and God will help us or let us go even if we go down in the fight a thousand times. Come on and give me your hand, and God help you today.

"THE SECOND COMING OF CHIRST"

Sermon of the Rev. William E. Biederwolf at the Tabernacle Last Night.

This old earth, this whirling ball of living, dying people, of forests and fields, of rivers and lakes, of bridges and sky-scraping buildings, of ships and trains, automobiles and aeroplanes has been the stage of many wonderful events, all the way from the time when God spoke it into existence by the word of His power until that memorable Christmas night around the little town of Bethlehem when the heavens suddenly became aglow with the glory of God and with hallelujah chorus the angel choir proclaimed that Christ had come into the world, and you would say: "That was the most wonderful event of all."

But I'm going to preach tonight about an event that is yet future, more wonderful in some respects than the coming of Christ just mentioned and far more wonderful than all these other events put together, and this is the Second Advent of Christ or the fact that the Lord Jesus is coming back again to this earth; more wonderful in all its accompanying circumstances and more wonderful in what it has to do with the times that follow later.

Now, if the Bible speaks more clearly and emphatically about one thing than any other, it is the certainty of the coming again of Christ to this earth. Notice, I say, the certainty of His coming. It don't say when He will come. And I suppose more men professing to be wise, have shown themselves fools by seetting an exact time for this wonderful event than in any other way as far as Spiritual speculation goes.

But when the Disciples asked Jesus when He would come back didn't He say: "Of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father." He said He didn't know Himself. Only God knows. And why people, who profess to teach in spiritual things, can't be satisfied with what the Bible tells them, is a thing I never could understand.

Bible Makes It Plain.

But the Bible does make it plain that He is coming again. Jesus said, "If I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you into Myself, that where I am there ye may be also." His coming is mentioned more than 300 times and Paul alone in his epistle refers to it at least fifty times. And yet it seems as though about 99 ministers out of every 100 put a taboo on the whole subject and let it severely alone, and as a result the church is full of members who know nothng about it, and no wonder they are not concerned about it—this glorious event for which everything has been groaning and waiting, for which all history has been preparing and toward which every divine event from the call of Abraham to the cross of Calvary and the proclamation of the Gospel to the ends of the earth has been looking.

Some say that Christ's second coming took place at the destruction of Jerusalem, and others say it was at Pentecost, and still others say it is a spiritual coming and takes place in regeneration, and others yet say, the second coming means death, and how many times have you gone to a funeral and heard a sermon from this text, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh." But the verses just quoted knock any and all of these assumptions in the head, to say nothing of certain other things the Bible says is to take place when He comes.

All these interpretations are the doctrines of men and not the inspired truth of God. What men think has nothing to do with it, but what God says is the thing that counts, and the man who, in the face of the plain and multitudinous statements of Scripture can satisfy his mind to say nothing of his conscience, with explanations like that is a fit subject for what people in this day call a bug house.

Now there is no use to say that the Bible teaching about the Second Coming is as clear as daylight at every point. If it was there wouldn't be any difference of opinion at all, and to say it, is not only a species of consummate bigotry but it's dishonest to say so when you know better.

No Room For Dispute.

But there are some things about it the Bible don't leave any room to dispute about and I'm going to mention these first.

Listen to Paul in First Thessalonians: "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we who are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall precede them who are asleep. For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trumpet of God." Now listen, "for the dead of Christ shall first rise. Then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

Now there are two things that are as clear as daylight.

One is that when the Lord comes the dead in Christ, the Christian dead, will be raised up out of their graves and the other is that with them the living Christians will be caught up to meet Him in the air. That's what we mean when we talk about the rapture. My what a meeting that will be.

"On that bright and cloudless morning,
When the dead in Christ shall rise,
And the glory of His resurrection share.
When His chosen ones shall gather to their home beyond the sky
What a gathering of the ransomed that will be."

That meeting in the air is going to mean something mighty fine for the Christians.

1. It will mean that we are to be a part of the body of Christ. This is what God is doing now; taking out of the nations, out of the Jews and the Gentiles, "a people for His name." He is not going to come until that number is complete. Nobody knows when it is. The very next soul converted in these meetings right here tonight, may be the last one of them and He will come.

God's Children Favored.

The church is the body of Christ and it is bounded on one side by Pentecost and on the other side by the Second Coming of Christ. And if you are a child of God you are going to be favored in a way that Abraham and Isaac and David and all the Old Testament saints are not, and no matter whether there's a chance for anyone else to be converted after His coming or not, they'll never belong to the Bride of Christ or be a member of His glorious household in the sense that you will if you accept Him now. The one who becomes a Christian now will be one of the most favored beings in the universe of God. And yet some of you sit out there wrapped up in your dollars and your Godless pleasures and you don't care.

It's like wearing dough beads when you might have diamonds.

2. In the next place, there's the time when the Christian is going to get his reward.

That is what Paul meant when he said: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the Righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them that love His appearing."

We are going to be like Him. That's part of the reward. It says: "When He shall appear we shall be like Him." The changed body will be glorious enough, but think of a changed soul made perfect at last and like the soul of Jesus!

You know I sometimes find myself hankering after a look into heaven like a Southside Chicago kid hankers after a peep at one of the big league ball games. You know when the teacher asked Johnny if he could have three eyes instead of two where he would want the third one to be and he said: "In the end of my finger so I could stick it through a knot hole in the fence and see the baseball game. And when a ball is knocked over the fence if he gets it the gates open and they let him come in and that's the glory world for him. But to think that some day when He comes the gates of that celestial place where waits for the child of God all the beauty and joy and glory that the infinite mind of the Son of God can conceive and His unmeasureable power can create, will swing open on their jeweled hinges and while angels and archangels shout: "Come in," there shall be no one to say: "You must stay out."

Reunion of Loved Ones.

3. And then the meeting, in the air means a reunion of the loved ones. Paul told the Thessalonians to stop worrying over their dead because he said, "If they are asleep in Jesus they'll be with you when He comes," "for," he said, "the dead in Christ shall first rise, and together with them you shall go to be with the Lord."

There was a mayor of a certain city who was not a Christian. I was in his home and he showed me an enlarged picture of a beautiful girl, his daughter, Nellie, who had died about eight weeks before. If ever a man loved a girl he loved her. And with the pastor we walked over toward the church. It was a new church and he had helped to build it although he wasn't a member, and he was interested in the building.

He never mentioned his daughter, but the tears came into his eyes. And when he asked me why I thought Christians were to meet again, I quoted him the words I have been talking about. We were standing by the baptistery and the pastor saw his tears and he said: "Mr. G. do you know Nellie was the last one to go down beneath that water?" And the strong man trembled as he put his hand on the minister's shoulder and said, "Pastor, may I be the next one?"

God pity you, if you lay your loved ones away and haven't got any hope of the first Resurrection.

4. And then this meeting means that some of us may never have to die. Every true child of God alive at His coming will be caught up without dying. "Be hold I show you a mystery. We shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed."

Think of it! This poor, trembling tabernacle of clay changed in the twinkling of an eye into the likeness of His glorious body. Look at that bent and withered old man hobbling along, blind possibly, and led by a child. Look at that poor, bed-ridden saint, worn out by disease and years of awful pain; look at that poor, demented and raving lunatic, beating the bars of his prison cage. I know it is hard to understand that he's a saint, an heir to glory; and lo, suddenly, in the twinkling of an eye, when Jesus comes, the palsy is gone, the disease is swallowed up, the mind is touched with the illuminating finger of God and wrinkles and pain and aches and mental ravings will be gone.

"Oh, joy! Oh, delight, should we go without dying;
No sickness, no sadness, no dread and no crying;
Caught up through the clouds with our Lord into glory,
When Jesus receives His own."

Meaning to Non Christian.

The Bible says: "Be ye therefore always ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh." God help us to get ready.

5. And yet think what this event will mean for the man who is not a Christian. If only the Christian is changed and taken up to meet the Lord, what becomes of the unbeliever who is alive when this wonderful rapture takes place? Why, he is lift behind of course.

In Matthew it is told that the return of Christ will be as it was in the days of Noah, eating and drinking and not caring a rap about what God says, but suddenly the Son of Man comes, and then, says Matthew, "Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left."

You say, "That's foolishness." Well, tell that to God. He said it. Don't talk to me about it.

Look here, you Godless husband, you boasted so often that your wife had enough religion for both of you, and you hurry home in the afternoon because of the strange rumor about town and find she has gone, and your daughter, who pushed aside her mother's faith for the tawdry pleasures of this world, sits alone in the house crazed with fear.

Suppose He should come tonight and a big part of the town would wake up in the morning and find a lot of their loved ones gone and all the sweet little children gone, for the very young, of course, who are not yet responsible, will not be left behind. You'd wake up early in the morning and find them gone and you go to your neighbor and say—

Neighbor, the strangets thing has happened; wife and two daughters and one of my sons are all missing," and the neighbor says, "I'm dumbfounded;" the children went to bed last night at an early hour and my wife laid herself down by my side, and this morning I find that my whole family is gone; I thought it was a joke and went across the street to the preacher will say, "What a fool I've them can be found."

Yes, sir, it will be a sensation. Big headlines in the newspapers; a big part of the church members will be left and a lot of preachers, and the preacher will say, "What a fool I've been," and if any one was left or sent back to preach the Gospel, I think they'd have revivals such as the world never heard of.

But now we're at a point where a few people differ, but what we need to do is to stick close to the word and take it for what it says, and we'll get reasonably clear on the matter.

Looking for Peace.

Some people, a very few, think the world is going to get better and better and better until a thousand years of peace and righteousness will prevail and then Jesus will come, all in the grave, good and bad, will be resurrected and the end of the world will be here. But the vast majority of scholars and Bible students think that while mankind in general is improving, "evil men," as the Bible says, "will wax worse and worse," until Jesus comes and brings the Millenium with him. There's been so much fool fanaticism connected with this last view that I confess for years that I have tried to believe the first way, but every time I have gone to the Bible I have been compelled to admit that if the Bible really means what it says the argument is all in favor of the second view, in fact, that there is practically no argument on the other side at all.

If there's any verse in the Bible that says the world is going to be converted before Jesus comes I'd like to see it. But the Old Book is chock full of verses telling us that in the last days perilous times shall come. It's not what Professor This or That says, for some of these ecclesiastical doctors can twist anything out of the Bible they want to. The size of a fellow's hat isn't always the safest gauge of the quality of what's in it.

Because culture and knowledge have been on the increase and discovery has brought us radium and science has brought us airships and wireless, some people think all this is a sign the Millennium is coming, and some think it is already here and we are in it now. But all such talk is nonsense. Science never made a saint, and all the libraries that Andy's millions can ever build will never be able to change a man's heart. The human race has improved in some ways, but I tell you it's in a bad fix spiritually. The spirit of the world with its lust has crept into the church and almost eaten its heart out. They look at the vice and graft and the anarchy and the war and divorce and tell me the Millenium is here or about to come because the world is so nice and good.

Well, if Jesus is to come before the Milennium, then what? He is coming back with the saints that were caught up to meet Him in the air to establish His Millennial reign. How long the meeting in the air is going to last no one is quite sure. But no matter, during that time all hell is going to break loose on earth. It is called the time of "great tribulations." Matthew says, "Then shall be great tribulations such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be," and says Matthew, "Except those days be shortened there shall no flesh be saved," but God in His mercy will cut them short So it won't be very long.

If what the Bible says is true no pen can paint, no imagination conceive the awfulness of those times.

Rebuild the Temple.

You know the Jews are fast going back to Palestine and it is during these awful years that they will rebuild their temple in Jerusalem, but during these years the Anti-Christ will also come, some man, some incarnation of the sum total of all wickedness, and the Jews enter into a covenant with him. This Anti-Christ (who midway in the tribulations is revealed as the Man of Sin), is supernaturally endowed by the devil. The Bible says: "He doeth great wonders so that He maketh fire to come down from heaven on earth, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by means of those miracles which He had the power to do." The Jews will doubtless think Him to be their Messiah. He will go into the temple and as Paul says, "He as God sitteth in the temple of God showing himself that He is God." He will set up an image of a beast and who ever refuses to worship the image is put to death, and when the Jews turn against Him two-thirds of them are destroyed; but at last the Lord Jesus flashes with power and great glory, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and "then shall the wicked one be revealed whom the Lord shall destroy with the brightness of His coming," and the reign of the Son of God shall be established upon the earth.

During this reign of the Lord the devil is to be bound and the Spirit of God shall have unhindered sway among the people of the earth. The Jews are then to be missionaries of the Cross, the preachers of the Christ, the evangelists, and nations shall be born in a day.

If He should come tonight, would you go with Him or would you be left behind?

And as God has warned you, so I say to you again tonight, in His name, "Be ye therefore also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

And there are signs that seem to say that the time is almost at hand.

1. Daniel says as the end draws near, "Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased." If there ever was a day when that is true it is now. Ships, railroads and automobiles running to and fro, and riders on the air. And knowlege. One sometimes wonders how much more there is left for the race to learn.

2. Matthew says: "This Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness, and then shall the end come."

To All Nations.

That has practically been done, and if it hasn't it soon will be for the missionaries are going every where, and there's an open door to every nation that was once shut against the Gospel.

3. Paul said, "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come." It's going to be worse yet, but God knows it is bad enough now. Look at the anarchy and the nihilism openly boasting of their purpose to blow into smithereens the present forms of government. Men's hearts fail them for fear of what is about to come upon them. Look at the lawlessness and the social unrest and the nations of the world armed to the teeth and flying at each other's throats and tell me the times are not perilous.

4. Then Paul said, "The coming of the Lord would not take place, except there be a falling away first." Well, there's a falling away in godliness and a falling away in faith.

(a) People profess godliness, but practice godlessness. It says in the last days, "Men will have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof." Church members are reading novels and letting their Bibles mildew. For thousands of them the church is merely an institution of respectability; male members thinking more of the creases in their trousers than they do of the crisis in the kingdom, and women quoting the apostles' creed and going to hell on a gallop in worldliness while they are doing it.

The church is soaked with the world. I don't know what's going to become of some of you people who observe Lent if you die ouside of it. You become pious for forty days and refrain from the devil's devices, the tango and the show house, and seem to think that gives you a warrant for becoming impious for ten months and two weeks and going to the devil on the same old road you left for Lent.

And then God pity some of the preachers; putting smoking rooms and dance halls and theatres within the very walls of the House of God. I know a Presbyterian elder who put on a dress and blacked himself up as a negro woman. Up in Copake, N. Y., the church gave a fair and the Ladies' Aid Society had a tent on which this announcement was displayed: "Miss Emily Lawson will sell kisses—Price, 25 Cents each."

Of course the kisses went like hot cakes. The managers had taken in

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

Wash poison from system each morning and feel fresh as a daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul live in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that insid cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do. —Adv.

$43 and would have taken in more had not one of the young men, after investing his quarter, made the remark that "There's only one trouble with that girl's kisses; she needs a shave." Upon this hint the tent was raided and the alleged "girl" turned out to be a man. This damnable scheme, which was immoral on its face, proved to be a deliberate fraud in the bargain.

I could keep you all night telling things as bad and worse than that. In the name of God, where are we coming to?

Losing Faith.

(b) And then there's a falling away in faith. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils."

It's all here today—Spiritualism, Christian and Theosophy—all alike denying the Deity of Christ and His atonement and making man his own savious. Never such search for truth and never such espousal of lies as we see today.

"Except there be a falling away." If it isn't here, it's coming mighty fast.

5. Then once more, Jesus said about His coming that when the Jewish nation began to show signs of a revived national life, when the fig tree began to put forth its leaves, then look out. "Know," he said, "that it is nigh; even at the doors."

And what's the meaning of all this stir among the Jews? They are going back to Jerusalem. Every morning in every clime and nation wherever the Orthodox Jew is scattered he lifts his voice and prays for his return and the rebuilding of the temple in Jerusalem. The Zionist movement has been organized with a capital of $50,000,000.00 to help on with the project.

But they are pouring back by the thousands, and they'll be there when Jesus comes. They won't be taken up to meet Him in the air with the Christian, but will have to go through the tribulations with other unbelievers, and only a third part of them will come through, and they are to preach the Gospel when Jesus return for the Millennium.

These are some of the reasons why it seems to me the last times are not very far away.

Be Ready for Him.

But, no matter, God has told us to watch and be ready.

Jesus is coming and the question for you to decide is, Are you ready? If you are and die before He comes, it means for you the bursting of the bars of death on the morning of the first resurrection, and if you are alive it means that marvelous change in the twinkling of an eye, and together we'll escape the tribulations and live and reign with Christ a thousand years.

But what if you are not a Christian? Well, if you are alive at His coming there's no hope for you. You've got to go through the time of tribulations when God will withdraw from the world and hell will have its own way. Murder and rapine and lust will fill the land. Churches will be turned into brothels and court houses into rendezvous for criminals. Some of you people who sneer at God and criticize the church and vote or the saloon and say, "Let the houses of prostitution run; it's a necessary evil; we need 'em," and favor all kinds of hellishness, may have a chance to find out through a frightful experience what it means to live in Plainfield when the devil is the boss and God and Jesus Christ and all good people have withdrawn into the skies.

"One shall be taken and the other left; one shall be taken and the other left."

If you are not a Christian and are dead when He comes, then it means a thousand years more in the grave for you until you hear the trumpet of God and come forth into the resurrection of damnation, when the world will end and heaven and hell will begin to end no more forever.

Come and give yourself to Christ tonight. Be on the safe side. Purify yourself by the hope of His coming. Get right with God and "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Even so come Lord Jesus! Come on men, come on women, come on friends and take Him tonight.

WATCHUNG COUNCIL READY FOR PARADE

Local K. of C.'s Wll Try to Capture Membership Percentage Prize at Newark.

Watchung Council, No. 552, of this city, has determined to make a strenuous effort to secure the prize for the largest percentage of members in line when it sends a delegation to the Knights of Columbus State Convention Parade at Newark next Monday night. The committee has practically completed all plans for the affair, and from indications it will have at least 250 Plainfielders representing "552" in the procession. The men will wear a uniform garb of white flannel trousers, dark blue coats, and straw hats, each one carrying a bamboo cane. The delegation will be headed by the boys' band from St. John's Protectory in Brooklyn, numbering fifty musicians in all. This will be one of the biggest bands in line, and as the St. John's boys have an interstate reputation for splendid appearance on parade, they will materially aid in helping Watchung Council bring home a prize.

Because of so many requests pouring in upon the committee from friends of the members who wish to attend the affair, a special train will be run over the New Jersey Central leaving the North Avenue station at 7:05 Monday evening. The return trip will be commenced from the Broad Street station at 11:45. All information may be had from any members of the general committee or the council as a whole.

John Kyle has been appointed grand marshal for the paraders, and he will be assisted by the following captains: John Caulfield, George Taylor, Daniel McAfee, Robert McCormick, John J Kenney, Thomas Carty, Franke Burke, John McCarthy, David Doyle and Otto Linke.

The parade is to mark the opening of the Knights of Columbus State Convention, which is being held at Newark in connection with the 250th anniversary celebration in that city. Every K. of C. council in New Jersey will be represented, the total number of men to be in line being estimated at between 10,000 and 15,000.

Don't you think, judging by the interesting store advertisements printed today, that a visit to some of the stores just now might be interesting as well as profitable to you?

The shopper may often reduce the VALUE-GETTING POWER of her dollar to fifty cents—simply through neglecting to read the ads, or to know values—and by buying at "the nearest place."

WHAT DO YOU

know about the printing of that most wonderful book—the Bible? Read the interesting facts and figures about it given below, and perhaps you will know more!

PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS

offers the very best edition ever printed for popular use, to its readers, in what might be called a "gift distribution:"

The Big Print Red Letter Bible

Fascinating Figures About The Bible

Over 200 million copies of the Bible have been printed. Touching end to end, they would go 'round the world —25000 miles. Piled one on another, it would take 4000 mountains like Mt. Everest, the highest in the world, to reach the topmost book. But this is not all. The public libraries of the entire world could not contain them. It would take two of the largest ships ever built, loaded to the deck, or a hundred freight trains, with 25 cars to the train, to transport them. Stacked in columns, they would make 100,000 Eiffel Towers, the tallest structure ever built by human hands. To print them would require at least 100 billions of pages of type.

The mere physical facts about the Bible stagger the imagination. All the other books ever printed seem microscopic by comparison. The Bible has been read by more people than any ten thousand other books. Today it forms the basis of religion for several hundred millions of the most enlightened peoples of the earth. The greatest war in history began in 1914, and shook the world from center to circumference. As a result, untold millions of people, startled out of their lethargy, took to the Bible to save their sanity and restore their mental vision. The first year of the war saw more Bibles sold than in any other year since it was printed.

It was the consideration of these facts that led this newspaper, in conjunction with all the leading newspapers of the country, to seize upon the psychological moment in which to inaugurate a nation-wide revival of Bible-reading. The edition now offered in these columns is the same as is being offered by the leading papers everywhere—not for profit to themselves—but for the benefit of their readers.

We invite comparison with any other edition of the Bible. We challenge competitive examination; secure in the knowledge that the Famous Red Letter Edition we offer, is easily first —and beyond any ordinary offering by publishers who seek only profit.

VILLISTAS SLAY FIVE AMERICANS

Cross Border and Raid Texas Towns.

THREE CAVALRYMEN KILLED

United States Soldiers Are Surprised In Their Tents at Glenn Springs. Raiders Murder Boy—Soldiers Sent to Pursue Bandits—Demands Made For Calling of National Guard.

Washington, May 8.—All Washington is indignant over the news of the attacks at Glenn Springs, Tex., which exceeded in boldness the raid on Columbus, N. M.

Members of congress are demanding more vigorous action and insisting that whatever may be the terms of the Scott-Obregon agreement the American troops shall not be withdrawn from Mexico. There is also a strong demand, which may be heard on the floor of the house and senate, that the president call out the national guard for service on the border.

Although the White House refuses to comment on this latest outrage, officers of the war department are understood to be in favor of utilizing the opportunity to send a new expeditionary force across the line, thus giving General Pershing an opportunity to shorten his line of communication.

Senator Sheppard of Texas has received a number of telegrams from Texans living in the Big Bend country, where the raid occurred, appealing for more troops.

The effect of the latest raid, it is predicted, will be to postpone materially the date of the withdrawal of the American expedition, although it is suggested in Mexican quarters that General Carranza might suggest that the American forces could do better if they would confine their operations to defending the American border on the American side.

Fifty-five Killed by Howze.

Further reports received at the war department concerning the fight on May 5 between the detachment under Major Howze at Ojo Azules, Mexico, and Villista bandits raise the number of bandits killed to fifty-five, including Colonels Antonio Angeles and Valentine Vasquez, and the number of wounded bandits to sixty.

There were no American casualties. Four Villista bands are reported by Major Howze to have reunited in the Satevi district, just north of Parral.

The first news of the attack on Glenn Springs and Boquillas reached the treasury department in a brief dispatch from the collector of customs at Eagle Pass. Later the war department got a report from General Funston which, as announced by Major General Bliss, placed the number of Villistas at fifty and indicated that the same band attacked both places. General Bliss made the following announcement:

A telegram received from General Funston at the war department confirms the message previously received from the collector of customs at Eagle Pass, Tex., about the raid of Mexican badits at Glenn Springs, in the Big Bend country in Texas.

Mexicans numbering about fifty attacked small American detachment at Glenn Springs, killing three American soldiers and one boy and wounding two soldiers. Four soldiers and one civilian reported missing.

The town was looted. It was reported Boquillas was raided by presumably the same band. Several civilians missing.

A relief detachment of American soldiers reached Glenn Springs, and another left Marathon for the same place on motor truck.

Details of Fight.

Still another report giving full details of the fight as far as had been learned at that time by General Funston was received. General Bliss announced it as follows:

A telegram from General Funston received at the war department gives further particulars of the Mexican raid at Glenn Springs and Boquillas. They were telegraphed to General Funston by a reliable citizen of Marathon, Tex., who obtained them from an American soldier wounded at Glenn Springs and who had just arrived at Marathon in an army motor truck.

This soldier said that 200 Mexicans attacked the garrison at Glenn Springs, consisting of eight men under Sergeant Smith.

The fight lasted about two hours, when they were forced to abandon their quarters, which the Mexicans set on fire. They continued the fight in the hills. The Mexicans left and went toward the river, crossing at San Vicente.

About the same time an unknown number of Mexicans raided the store of J. Deemer & Co. at Boquillas, Tex., looting and burning same, taking Mr. Deemer with them. It is reported now that he is killed. Sergeant Smith estimates Mexican force in surrounding hills is about 500 or 600.

Sergeant Smith remained at Glenn Springs and is also wounded. There are also five civilians and one soldier missing. Carranza troops left Boquillas, Mexico, about fifteen days ago, collecting all arms from the town and leaving no guard there. Mexicans while fighting were reported as shouting first "Viva Villa!" and then "Viva Carranza!"

Information from Boquillas is meager, except regarding killing of Deemer. The garrison at Glenn Springs left their mounts and side arms. Private Coloe was shot while attempting to get horses from the corral.

General Bliss further announced that two troops of the Fourteenth cavalry had been ordered to the scene from Fort Clark, Tex.

Because of the action of the Carranza garrison at Boquillas, Mexico, which is just across the line from Boquillas, Tex., officials here are inclined to believe they may have been advised in advance of the approach of the raiders or subsequently joined them in the raid.

Officers at the war department declared that the Mexicans selected a vulnerable point for the raid. The lower tip of the Big Bend country is sparsely populated and for that reason few American troops have been kept there, most of them being stationed about fifty miles north of the border in this section along the line of the Southern Pacific railroad.

It is assumed here that the small force of American soldiers were taken off their guard owing to the fact that there never has been any disturbance of the kind before in this territory and because of the absence of any reports to indicate the presence of bandits in the vicinity.

About three weeks ago a band of Villistas was reported in the vicinity of Ojinaga, a Carranza garrison on the Mexican side of the border about 100 miles west of Boquillas.

GERMAN U-BOATS HEADED THIS WAY

Attack French Liner, Which Makes Escape.

New York, May 8. The news that two German submarines were headed toward the American coast under convoy of two commerce raiders was brought to New York by the Fabre liner Venezia, which narrowely escaped capture and escaped because of her superior speed. The chase and escape took place on April 29, when the Venezia was 1,200 miles out from Bordeaux and about 1,800 miles from New York.

British naval reserve officers in New York on merchant ships said that the two raiders probably had escaped from Kiel on the night of Feb. 28 in company with the Greif, which was sunk on the following morning in the North sea by the British auxiliary cruiser Andes. Four raiders got out at that time, and the sighting of the two by the Venezia on April 29 leaves one more to be accounted for.

Captain Bonifacio of the Venezia, who is a taciturn man and averse to publicity, refused to give any account of the incident to reporters when the steamship was docked at her pier, foot of Thirty-first street, South Brooklyn, and said he would make his report to the agents of the Fabre line and the French consul.

MRS. HERZOG RECEIVES TELEGRAM FROM HUSBAND

Mrs. Albert Herzog, of 226 West Second street, whose husband was reported to have been arrested in St. Louis last Friday on suspicion of being a German spy, received a telegram Saturday night from Mr. Herzog in response to one sent by her, that he would advise her when he left St. Louis for home. Mrs. Herzog still believes her husband innocent of the charge, and in discussing the matter today said that she knows that he will be able to clear himself. She expects that he will reach home either today or tomorrow.

MRS. ELLEN LENEHEN DIES AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Ellen Lenehen died this morning at the home of her niece, Mrs. H. P. Greenwood, on Cameron avenue, following a long illness. She was born in Ireland and had lived here twenty years. She was a communicant of St. Mary's church.

There survives beside Mrs. Greenwood, two nieces, Mrs. P. J. Kenney, of Newark, and Mrs. Joseph Robinson, of Plainfield; also two nephews, John Kennedy, of Newark, and Michael Kennedy, of Plainfield. The funeral will be held at St. Mary's church Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock and burial will be in Calvary cemetery, Long Island.

WOMEN'S GUILD HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

At the annual meeting of the Women's Guild of Grace church held this morning in the Parish House, the following officers were elected for the coming year: Chairman, Mrs. F. W. Iredell; vice chairman, Mrs. Henry E. Titus; secretary, Mrs. J. Albert Lane; treasurer, Mrs. V. M. Pursell. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, the pastor of the church, presided during the entire session. There was a large attendance of women present and much interest was manifested in the discussions.

Reports submitted by the secretary, treasurer, the auxiliary, missionary and entertainment committee were all encouraging and showed each department to be doing excellent work. Beside those already mentioned, the nine independent church working sections of the guild rendered reports telling of the individual work in each case.

SEBRING SUIT ON IN NEWARK COURT

Injunction Case Against Sewer Plant Being Heard Before Chancellor.

Newark, May 8.—Application for an injunction against the cities of Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen restraining them from constructing the sewerage disposal plant near Dunellen, is being heard in Chancery Court here today. Judge William A. Coddington, of Plainfield, represents John H., Henry E. and Kate C. Sebring, owners of a farm below the plant on Green Brook, and they charge that the purifying plant will contaminate the waters of the brook so that it will be unfit for the stock to drink. Another reason for the injunction, as set out in the bill, is that the spray at the plant will fill the atmosphere with nauseating odors.

Judge Coddington this morning asked that 40 or 50 more riparian owners be added to the original complainants, but action on this was deferred. Attorney J. Edward Ashmeade, appearing for the city of Plainfield, contested the ownership of some of these to riparian rights.

The first witness called was Chas. J. Merrill, chief clerk in the office of the State Board of Health, who testified to minutes of the Board approving plans for the Dunellen plant and its location. Judge Codding denied the right of the State Board to fix a location, or even authorize this. H. M. Herbert, a civic and hydraulic engineer, was called as an expert to testify to conditions near the plant and the Sebring farm. The case will be continued this afternoon and tomorrow.

PETER BENWARD PASSES AWAY AT NEW MARKET

Peter Benward, an aged resident of Piscataway township, died Saturday night at his home in New Market. He was 83 years old and was born in Hunterdon county, his parents being Mr. and Mrs. James Benward. He came to Piscataway township about sixty-three years ago to take charge of the Dayton farm for Mrs. Evelyn Dayton, widow of Simeon Dayton. About four years later he married Mrs. Dayton's daughter, Miss Louisa. Mr. Benward had been totally blind for the past eight years. He is survived besides his wife by two daughters, Mrs. Henry S. Garretson, of Dunellen, and Mrs. Carrie Giddes, of Plainfield, and a son, Herbert Benward, of Brooklyn.

The funeral will be held from the late home at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Rev. George H. Gardner, of Atlantic Highlands, a former pastor of the First Baptist church, of New Market, of which the deceased was a member, officiating. Burial will be in the Middlesex Hillside cemetery.

Whatever may have been the motives that prompted Congressman John H. Capstick in his vote upon the McLemore resolution, he is making a bad matter worse, and is not "playing fair" with the Republican party by his evident disinclination to be frank with his constituents. About the only voters in his district who are at all outspoken in their praise of the Congressman are members of the German-American Alliance, and their friendship for him is too prejudiced, too un-American, to suit a majority of those who are to elect Mr. Capstick's successor. It is probable that his own political doom is sealed. No matter what explanation he gives now, the seed of distrust has been sown and Mr. Capstick is pretty sure to find himself unpopular if he ever asks for public office again. However, he owes something to his party, and as things stand now the chances for a Democratic Congressman from the Fifth New Jersey district are good. Mr. Capstick must personally assume responsibility for his act, or the next Republican nominee for Congress from this district will be forced to answer for it.

The action of the Sloane-Day Aeroplane Company in giving to the New York National Guard a $10,000 machine that its officers might prepare to defend their country, and the announcement yesterday that it would replace the machine which was destroyed last week, is but another example of the patriotism of Plainfield. This service to the country is no small one, and is deserving of the highest praise.

As proof that men will make political capital even out of the misfortunes of their brothers, Hugh Dorsey has announced himself as a candidate for the governorship of Georgia. Mr. Dorsey is solicitor-general of Fulton county, and his sole bid for popular favor is that he brought about the conviction of Leo Frank. The Frank case has already become an important part of his argument for votes. Mr. Dorsey is running on a "law enforcement" platform, which ought to be popular in Georgia.

Next Friday is New Jersey Day, by proclamation of Governor Fielder, and on that day every loyal son and daughter of the State is expected to tell someone on the outside of the wonderful advantages here for farmers, workingmen and all others who may be desirous of changing homes. This should be a real labor of love. There is no need for those of us who are so fortunate as to live in New Jersey shutting out our friends and loved ones who know not the State. Write them a letter next Friday, and put into it all that you know and feel about your home. In his proclamation the Governor said: "I call upon every citizen to make known our superior advantages for homes, farms, business and manufacturing, not only to residents of other States, but to his fellow-citizens, so that we, as well as others, may know our State and thereby our love for our commonwealth may be stimulated and strengthened and our State made to grow in population and prosperity."

Those who are in charge of the operation of the ambulance at Muhlenberg Hospital have shown pretty conclusively that they do not intend to make that vehicle safe for its work of mercy on public streets, and it is about time for Chief Kiely to enforce the laws which regulate the handling of automobiles insofar as they touch this machine. It has been repeatedly pointed out that without a bell, a siren, or a distinctive signal of some kind, the ambulance becomes a menace to all traffic when passing over the crowded streets at a rapid rate. It is absolutely essential that an ambulance should move fast at times, and yet there is no law, written or otherwise, that justifies an ambulance driver in killing or even injuring a sound man, woman or child, that one already suffering may have a few minutes more under the care of a physician. The accident in which the ambulance figured Friday evening is but a forerunner of a horrible mixup that is inevitable unless an adequate warning signal is placed on this machine. A Klaxon on a Ford can make just as much noise as on an ambulance, and no one is expected to scramble for safety, for an ordinary car is not entitled to right of way over other machines. As it is now equipped, the Muhlenberg Hospital ambulance should be made to observe all the traffic laws of the city and State, and it is the duty of policemen to see that it does, no matter whether it carries a patient or not. When the stubborn idea that it does not need a horn or bell gives way to a sensible understanding of the rights of others who use the streets, the ambulance will again become a vehicle of mercy and will be entitled to travel as fast as the condition of its patient passenger demands.

ROBBERS KIDNAP A CASHER.

Hold Banker Captive and Flee, but One Is Caught After Chase.

Millerton, Okla., May 8.—Two bandits who robbed the Millerton State bank of $300 kidnaped cashier Taylor instead of locking him in the vault. While one robber collected the currency the other held one revolver on the cashier and another on the entrance. They made Taylor pass out the money, but did not go into the vault.

Half a mile out of Millerton the robbers made Taylor dismount, hardly stopping for him to get off. Within the next two miles they abandoned their horses and ran into the fields. One of them surrendered, but no money was found on him.

"BAH! I FEAR NOTHING."

New York, May 8.—"Bah! I laugh at all danger," declares Cleofonte Campanini, director of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, who sails today for Cadiz, Spain, on his way home to Italy. Submarines and mines have no terrors for him. This is the way he explains it. "Any man who has dealt with grand opera stars for a score of years places small value on life. I have been blown up so many times that I fear nothing." Campanini will return in a few months and expects to bring a famous Italian conductor with him for next season.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

An Alien.

He stands alone, a thing forlorn,
Far from the home and friends, so sooth;
Far from the place where he was born,
Far from the happy scenes of youth.
His voice is still, his face is drawn,
As though he had no friend on earth.
The strangers view him and are gone;
They little value his true worth.
A stranger from a distant place,
A humble stranger, be it said;
Ambition's light has left his face,
His hope is gone, his spirit dead.
The salt aroma of the sea
He lately left clings to him still;
The past is but a memory—
His future chances are but nil.
He cannot see a single friend,
No matter where his eyes may roam,
Who has a helping hand to lend;
No dim reminder of his home.
One day a poet came and then,
He found a friend at last, indeed,
Who took this stranger to all men
To his own home with utmost speed.
The tale ends here, but this is Fate,
Although we'd gladly tell you more;
The stranger is, we fain would state,
A codfish in the grocery store.

Getting Rid Of It.

Some years ago it began to dawn upon us that we were acquiring one. It took more cloth to make our clothes, and the tailor began talking about raising the price from $17 to $19. Old articles of wearing apparel that used to button about us comfortably and loosely so that we could turn around in them and speak to some gentleman behind us refused to negotiate a meeting and our friends began to talk of running us for alderman. That's an old gag, of course, but there was no mistaking its significance.

Acting upon the perfectly good advice of our friends we took everything in the drug store except the soda fountain and the cash register, but it still clung to us like a brother or like one of those rounded conservatories that is built right into the house in the first place and meant to stay. The anti-fatters got our address and swelled the postal receipts of the government at the rate of about twenty six cents a day for a period of years. We took all of their remedies, sometimes two or three of them at once, but they gave a correct imitation of Congress by revising our waist line upward instead of downward.

Then a friend advised rolling. He said Lillian Russell did it, and that was enough, for we had always been a firm admirer of the beauteous airy fairy creature. We got into our silk pajamas and rolled and rolled and kept rolling. We tried it first in the parlor, smashed a $32 mahogany and plate glass parlor plate case into smithereens, upset Venus, giving her a compound fracture of the left leg and broke three limbs off a gilt chair that had come over in the Mayflower and had always looked as though it regretted the trip very much. We rolled in every room in the house, and rolled in the barn and rolled all over the back yard and kept it up for six days. Then we tried on our winter suit and found it lacked about three inches of coming as near together as it did last winter.

They say that a rolling stone gathers no moss, but we have stopped rolling just the same. We have still got it.

Signs of the Times.

Just for fear a lot of people would never find it out otherwise, we mention the fact that the price of hides has gone up 40 per cent.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Today at Proctor's marks the most pretentious program of photoplay attractions ever known in the history of local theatricals, for the two greatest screen stars appear today on the same program. Charlie Chaplin, the highest-paid professional in the world, will commence a three-day engagement today at Proctor's in his latest and most expensive comedy creation—his burlesque on "Carmen." Those film fans who saw Theda Bara and Geraldine Farrar in the legitimate productions of this feature last week, will be especially interested in Chaplin's burlesque on "Carmen," in addition to the hundreds of theatregoers to whom Charlie is the greatest of funmakers. The cost of booking this feature alone was so tremendous that no theatre in this vicinity could afford to present it; but in addition to this massive four-reel attraction, the management provide today, Mary Pickford, the most popular moving picture star in the world, in "Madame Butterfly," one of her most charming productions, many of the scenes of which were taken right here in Plainfield but a short while ago. Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin on one program is a wonderful step indeed, but when one takes into consideration the fact that this colossal entertainment is offered at no increase in prices is almost unbelieveable; but owing to the fact that this is true, the management of Proctor's deserve the highest commendation ever accorded a local showman in his efforts to please his patrons. In addition, today, the first episode of that compelling serial, "The Mysteries of Myra," will also be shown. This is acknowledged by all critics to be the greatest serial yet released, and the daily newspapers are full of praise and favorable comment regarding this epoch-making production. Tomorrow, Dorothy Gish and Owen Moore (Mary Pickford's husband) appear in a charming Triangle play entitled "Little Meena's Romance"; Charlie Chaplin is seen in his burlesque on "Carmen"; a funny Keystone is shown and the tenth episode of "Mary Page" is also presented. On Wednesday, Bertha Kalisch, the eminent emotional star, will appear in "Slander," her first motion picture; Charlie Chaplin will be seen in "Carmen," and the latest episode of "The Iron Claw" will be presented.

THE GOLDEN KEY

--Astor Theatre--

Today will be Theodore Roberts' day at the Astor Theatre. The Jesse L. Lasky Company presents this leading character star in an American classic, Mark Twain's "Pudd'nhead Wilson," with the consent of the Mark Twain Co., a photoplay of combined humor and stirring drama, tempered by a deep note of human sympathy and heart-interest.

Theodore Roberts as Lawyer Wilson, comes to a small Missouri town to practice. On his first day in town, angered at a dog snapping at his heels, he remarks, "I wish I owned half of that dog. If I did, I would kill my half." The subtlety of this remark passed over the heads of the townspeople, as they couldn't figure out what would become of the other half of the dog if Wilson killed his half. This remark, his eccentric speech and his habit of securing thumb-prints from everyone with whom he came in contact, induced the town wits to call him "Pudd'nhead Wilson;" a nickname that remained with him throughout his life. This nickname blighted his career as a lawyer, but he managed to eke out a fairly good existence.

The late E. S. Willard, famous English actor, employed "John Needham's Double" as one of the pieces which first introduced him, under the management of A. M. Palmer, to American theatregoers. He used it, alternately, with "The Professor's Love Story" during the first few seasons he was over here. The play itself is intensely dramatic, and the manner in which Mr. Power plays the separate and distinct roles of John Needham and Joseph Norbury is, of itself, an interesting study in dramatic art as combined with the newer craftsmanship of photoplaying. "John Needham's Double," a mystery play, will provide the entertainment tomorrow at the Astor Theatre, featuring the splendid Protean star, Tyrone Power. Always a big bill at the Astor Theatre the only place showing first-run Paramount, Blackbird and other Broadway features. Our motto, "Quality, Not Quantity." We give Travelstamps.

.· Plainfield Theatre.·.

Local vaudeville patrons who like to see a singing and dancing number with lots of snap and ginger to it will have the best chance of the season at the Plainfield Theatre the first half of this week. Commencing this afternoon, Manager Shannon will put on for a three days' engagement as the headliner for a fine new bill, the big New York success, "The Midnight Frolics." It is presented by a company of sixteen people, including a kid chorus which keeps the audience deeply interested for thirty minutes as they present a variety of musical numbers, eccentric and ballroom dances and other diversions. A unique part of the setting is derived by the appearance of the accompanying orchestra on the stage instead of in the orchestra pit.

Beside "The Midnight Frolics," there will be five other splendid acts on the bill for the next three days, and today and tomorrow there will be the latest Charlie Chaplin comedy. Three reels are required to show the inimitable funny man in his latest mirth-provoking escapades and the experts who have already seen it declare it is the funniest picture he has ever posed for. There are always film specials on every Plainfield program. The Pathe semi-weekly animated newspaper is shown every Tuesday and Saturday, and the serial films, "The Iron Claw" and "The Strange Case of Mary Page," are shown Thursdays and Fridays.

MAY 8 IN HISTORY.

1657—Oliver Cromwell refused the title of King of England.
1792—Congress passed laws organizing the militia.

IRISH COUNTESS ESCAPES DEATH

Sentence Is Commuted to Life Imprisonment.

London, May 8.—"The Countess Markiewicz has been sentenced to death, but the sentence has been commuted to penal servitude for life."

This brief official statement, issued in Dublin, ends the remarkable career—in freedom at least—of the "Joan of Arc" of the Irish rebellion, the woman whose daring defiance of the government's soldiery and of the police of Dublin has more than once directed attention to herself in the past few years.

Because of her sex and her close affiliation with the Sinn Fein movement, of which she was one of the most enthusiastic and audacious adherents, the sentence imposed upon Countess Markiewicz caused a country wide stir. The countess, who is married to a Polish painter and who is well connected in circles of the British nobility, played a dramatic role in the recent revolt in Dublin.

She was one of the chief participants from the first hours of the rebellion until it was finally quelled. In the midst of the violent street fighting she again and again nerved the rebels to withstand the machine gun charges of the government troops. Flourishing a revolver, the countess, clad in green, marched at the head of a column of 120 rebels into St. Stephen's Green and seized the Royal College of Surgeons, holding it against attacks by government troops.

Virtually starved out and lacking ammunition, the countess on that day finally haled down the flag of the "Republic of Ireland" and substituted the white banner of surrender.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How the Trold's Sons Behaved At a Party.

The Elf Maidens Danced.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

"A FAIRY story, daddy!" the children reminded him after supper.

"Once upon a time an old elf king gave a party. When everybody came they all went into the elf hill together, the grandest company of them. They had been got together so hurriedly that you might almost say they had been blown together. But it was all charming and arranged to please everybody's taste. The merman and his daughters sat at the table in great tubs of water that the elf king's old maid housekeeper, his distant cousin, had very kindly fixed for them. They said it was just like being at home. Everybody had excellent manners, except the two young Trolds from Norway. Sad to say, they put their feet up on the table, but then they thought everything they did was right.

"'Take your feet out of the dishes' way!' the old Trold told them.

"Finally they obeyed, but not at once. Then they tickled the ladies they brought in to dinner with fir cones they had in their pockets, and soon they pulled off their boots to be quite at home and comfortable and handed them to the ladies to hold."

"Who taught them table manners, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

"Nobody. But the old Trold was quite different. He made himself agreeable by telling some splendid stories of the Norway mountains and the waterfalls dashing down in white spray with a roar like thunder. He told the ladies about salmon leaping up against rushing waters and nixies playing their golden harps. Then he went on telling them about the sparkling winter nights in Norway, when his sleighbells rang and his lads flew over the ice with blazing lights, while the ice was so clear you could see startled fishes darting away under your feet. Yes, indeed, the old Trold could tell stories! You could even hear and see the things he described—the sawmills going, the men and maids singing and dancing, and, huzza! all at once the old Trold gave the old maid housekeeper a smacking kiss that echoed down the banquet hall.

"Then all the elf maidens, who had practiced a long time, had to dance, first just in plain dance, then a step dance and finally a fairy dance. Preserve us, how nimble they were! You couldn't tell where they began or where they ended, which were arms and which were legs. They were all mixed together like shavings in a saw pit. They twirled around so often that it made the sea horse, one of the guests, so dizzy he had to leave the table," daddy ended the bedtime story.

"Oh, we love that party, daddy!" cried the children.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

When You Marry a Butterfly You Are Sure to Have Some Little Annoyances.

"Ethel, have you seen my collar buttons? I am sure I left them on top of the chiffonier this morning when I went away," called Ralph Gordon as he was dressing to attend a dinner given to the heads of departments by the firm.

"I am surprised that anyone so painfully neat as you are ever has to ask where anything is," drawled his wife, looking up from the novel she was reading. Then followed the noise of opening and closing drawers, hurried footsteps and impatient exclamations. Finally Ralph appeared at the living room door and said:

"Ethel, I wish you would come and look through your drawers and see if you have not got my collar buttons mixed in with your traps. I have gone through all my space—it is little enough that you allow me to have—and they are not there. I might have known better than to leave anything around if I ever wished to see it again." Ralph's tone was irritated.

"My dear, you seem heated;" Ethel looked up in perfect unconcern at her husband's flushed face.

"Heated!" exploded Ralph. "I am due there in fifteen minutes, and I cannot keep the dinner waiting."

"Where are the ones you took off?" Ethel yawned to show the utter boredom of the topic of conversation.

"Well, I like that," snapped Ralph. "Here I have been wearing a negligee all day and you ask that question."

"My confidence in your ability to dress properly is such that I never worry about your clothes," replied Ethel easily.

"Won't you please come and help me find the buttons," entreated Ralph. "I am so late."

"My dear, you seem to have mistaken me for your valet. I really must decline to keep in order your honorable wardrobe."

Ralph strode forward and caught the provoking little creature in his arms and started for the bedroom.

"You have simply got to look in your drawers and see if you have not stuffed them in with your things." Ethel wound her arms around his neck and kissed his cheeks and eyes, remarking, "I'd kiss your mouth only it is so busy scolding me."

Ralph gave her a shake, kissed her and set her down, saying:

"Now, go to it, little tease. Claw that snarl of stuff out of that drawer and see if you can't unearth those buttons."

"What, all that! I had an awful time getting it in there this morning."

"So it was this morning. Just as I thought. I did not want to get into your private drawers." She commenced removing the ribbons, laces, gloves and handkerchiefs from the drawer. Finally the collar buttons dropped on the floor, shaken free from the plethora of merchandise.

"There, what did I tell you!" Ralph was grappling with his collar.

"I must have gathered them up with this mess by mistake," said Ethel sweetly.

"Mess is right. Why in the name of common sense can't you have some order about things?"

"That is what mother always said, but it is not in me, and it always ended in her picking things up, because they made her so nervous lying around," laughed Ethel.

"You seem as pleased as Punch that you have made me all this trouble," grumbled Ralph, seizing his coat and hat and giving his wife a flying kiss as he tore out of the room.

WIFE IDENTIFIES HUSBAND'S BODY

Hudson River Victim Found to Be Adam Dorber Who Disappeared From Borough.

MAY BE A SUICIDE?

The body of an unknown man taken from the Hudson River at Ninety-second street Saturday afternoon and removed by the police to the New York city morgue was positively identified yesterday as that of Adam Dorber, of 77 Chatham street, the borough, who disappeared from his home here two months ago. The belief exists that he either committed suicide or fell into the water accidentally about the time he was reported missing to the North Plainfield police.

Mrs. Dorber was notified early yesterday that the body of the drowned man resembled the description of her husband. She hurried to the morgue and although the features were badly decomposed she was able to state by means of two scars on the neck and portions of the clothing that the victim was absolutely her husband. The body was removed to the home of Dorber's mother in Brooklyn, where the funeral service will be held this afternoon. Interment is to be in the Lutheran cemetery on Long Island.

Adam Dorber was forty-eight years old. He was a native of Brooklyn, btu came to Plainfield fourteen years ago to conduct a merry-go-round privilege at the then flourishing Galvin's Park, near Scotch Plains. He was a wood carver by trade, but made a specialty of making and personally running merry-go-rounds and similar devices. After one season at the park he formed a partnership with William A. Schorb, the local auctioneer, and conducted a small theatre where the Plainfield Theatre is now located. He gave this up in 1904 to re-enter the amusement park game.

About five years ago Dorber erected a carousal at South Beach, which cost him about $5,000 to build. It was placed on spiles running out over the beach, and during the winter after his first season, a heavy storm drove the ocean so far inland it carried the machine out to sea. The loss of his business and money preyed upon Dorber's mind to such an extent that it became unbalanced and several years ago he was given treatment at the Morris Plains State Hospital. Returning from there he secured work as a carpenter for local contractors and was employed in this capacity until a short time ago. Beside his wife, he is survived by two daughters: Edith, aged seventeen, and Madeline, aged ten.

MISS HARDIE TO SPEAK AT SPECIAL AID MEETING HERE

Miss Isabel Hardie, chairman of the Hygiene and First Aid Committee of the National Special Aid Society, has stated that she will positively attend the meeting at the Cedarcroft, 1003 Park avenue, tomorrow morning, when a local chapter of the National Special Aid Society will be perfected. Miss Hardie will give one of her able addresses on "Hygiene and First Aid," a topic with which she is unusually well versed. Her services have been in great demand and the local promoters feel honored at her acceptance of their invitation.

The meeting tomorrow has been called for 10 o'clock prompt. The executive committee has already outlined plans for the permanent organization and the business transacted will include the election of officers, the appointment of committee and the completion of the charter role. It is believed that the Plainfield and North Plainfield chapter will begin activities with at least one hundred members, but it is hoped to have twice as many as this by the time the work is well under way. A general invitation is extended to all interested to be present tomorrow.

IN MEMORY OF VANDERBILT.

Flags at Newport at Half Mast on Lusitania Anniversary.

Newport, May 8.—Tributes were paid here to the memory of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, one of the victims of the steamship Lusitania, torpedoed by a German submarine a year ago. The flag at Oakland Farm, which was many years Mr. Vanderbilt's home, was at half staff and that of the Newport Young Men's Christian association as well, the latter being the memorial Mr. Vanderbilt erected for his father, Cornelius Vanderbilt.

During the service in Channing Memorial church the minister, the Rev. William Safford Jones, offered special prayers for those who went down on the Lusitania and for their relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Grant, of No. 10 Linden avenue, are the parents of a bouncing boy who arrived Saturday.

TROOPERS ATTACK HILL AT GLENSIDE

Local Cavalrymen Engage in Mimic Warfare Following Dismounted "Hike."

'SURPRISE THE ENEMY'

Lieut. Runkle's Platoon Falls Into a Trap and is Caught Between Two Fires—Opposing Forces Fail to Capture the Objective Point.

The farmers of the valley in which Glenside Park is situated were startled by the crackle of rifle fire yesterday morning when the second platoon of the Watchung Troop, under Lieutenant J. M. Charles, attacked the wooded hill which the first platoon of the troop, under Lieutenant Daniel Runkle, was defending. This was the culminating event of a "hike" which began in the middle of Saturday and ended at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the troop, soggy and footsore, marched into their quarters on the corner of Putnam and Kensington avenues.

It was a dismounted "hike." Captain Borden felt that since actual cavalry fighting is nowadays largely conducted on foot, it would be well on this occasion to concentrate upon this single function with freedom from the necessity of looking after the horses.

The march to Dreeke's farm, the campground, adjoining Glenside Park, began at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, under a blue sky. As the column swung along Mountain avenue under their rifles no thought of rain troubled the men; the great bank of the mountain was delicately green with early spring foliage, and the fields were scattered with white clumps of apple blossoms.

At Scotch Plains the platoons separated. The second, under Lieutenant Charles, turned up the hilly road toward the mountain; the first, under Lieutenant Runkle, continued on Mountain avenue. The two forces expected to meet as opposing forces. Each threw out an advance guard of flankers, who examined every position behind which an enemy might lie in ambush. But Captain Borden, acting as umpire, fooled each platoon in turn. Thinking to catch each off its guard by confronting each with an enemy before it would expect one, he asked each lieutenant in turn if he might carry his advance guard forward in his automobile, and then set his guard in ambush against its own main body. Lieutenant Runkle's platoon fell into the trap; its advance guard hidden in woods on either side the road caught it between two fires. Lieutenant Charles sent scouts along the crest of a wooded hill, who took the men under Sergeant Rolston waiting in ambush below, in the rear, while another body attacked them from the road.

Skirmishing in this way the troop came to the campground—a hillside on the northern slope of the Glenside Valley. Here, each squad under its sergeant, arranged its own camp independently, in a test to see which would best conduct itself. Each erected a large pyramidal tent on the site chosen by its sergeant, and fell to the preparation of mess. Each trooper cooked his own supper over his own fire—bacon, brans, coffee and eggs. One man did bring along an alcohol stove, expecting to beat everyone else; but wood proved better, and he threw it away in disgust about the time when in the twilight, the bacon of the others began actually to sizzle. Only the coffee was a bit disappointing when made in tin cups. It had an annoying tendency to boil over and extinguish the fire, and in several cases it was spilled in removing it from above the blaze.

The troopers turned in at about 10 and few of them knew of it when rain began to fall about 2 a. m. It stopped at 5 a. m., reveille, long enough for the cooking of breakfast, but began again soon after; the troops had to wear their slickers during a skirmish drill in an open field. This man running, and falling to the ground on signal more strenuous even than usual, especially as a slicker is the hottest garment yet fabricated.

At 9 the troop again divided into two platoons which marched away from camp on different roads with instructions which would bring them into contact sooner or later. Each platoon aimed to take the other by surprise. Lieutenant Charles' commmand cut across country to a parallel road, pushing through woods and underbrush. It was heavy work. They marched in loose, scattered formation, yet always in complete touch. After some miles Corporal Cox and a party of flankers ranging the woods to the right of the road were fired upon. The rest of the platoon rallied to them and rounded up an advance squad of the enemy. From this point on they advanced with great caution, supposing the main force could not be far away. Every copse of trees, every hill was investigated before the platoon passed it.

Just across the road from the camp a steep hill forms an acute angle with it, and commands it. As Lieutenant Charles' flankers approached this rifles began to crackle from its summit. Lieutenant Runkle had taken up this position. Lieutenant Charles' men were not surprised, however. They advanced rapidly among the trees, dropping to the ground to shoot. They failed to take the hill, but at least they were not themselves surprised.

All this time the rain was falling more or less heavily, and this made it difficult to prepare mess. But that was somehow done. The soaked tents were then struck, rolled up and packed into the wagon, and every column began the homeward march. Toward the end they fell into the automatic swing of infantrymen and so came home in rapid time and good form, under a brilliant sun.

There will be a mounted hike early in June. The latest recruit to the troop was Nelson Ramsey; he was sworn in last Thursday after the regular drill.

BIEDERWOLF CAMPAIGN

"Mac" to lead in singing "All Hail, Emmanuel," and asked the National Male Quartet to sing "Heaven," and their wishes were obeyed.

Dr. Biederwolf said that their presence was an evidence of the fine spirit and friendship that was formed through Christian fellowship, and he was beaming throughout the entire service because of gladness at their coming.

Mayor Saul, of Norristown, was called on, and he declared that his home city—the brightest, biggest and best borough in all the world—sent greetings to the finest, loveliest and most liberal city—outside of Pennsylvania. The big delegation, he said, was an appreciation of the great work that Dr. Biederwolf and his party did for Norristown, and in it were men and women who had lived in sin and shame until the evangelistic campaign there, but who now were happy in their new-found life and hope. Pastors in Norristown churches were now busy taking in those converted during the services, and the city was enjoying a cleanliness and Godliness never before dreamed of. On behalf of the city and of the delegation present, he presented to Dr. Biederwolf and the "best-looking woman in the Tabernacle" a handsome bouquet of roses, as an evidence of the love of the givers and with the hope that the aroma from the life of the recipients would continue to be as sweet as that of the flowers, and to bless and purify and elevate many, many more thousands.

In accepting the gift, Dr. Biederwolf said that a more beautiful bouquet had never been presented to him or to "the best-looking woman in the Tabernale," but that it was no more beautiful than the spirit that prompted its giving, and he thanked them for himself and wife.

Benjamin F. Evans, one of the visiting delegation, was called on by Dr. Biederwolf to sing "Out of the Depths," and his fine baritone voice was so well liked that the audience demanded another song, but there was not time.

The Rev. Dr. Evans, of Norristown, led in the opening prayer, after which Dr. Biederwolf delivered his sermon on "A Refuge of Lies."

He said that Spiritualism, Universalism, Unitarianism, Agnosticism and many other "isms" were all lies—lies that would damn the soul and send it to eternal punishment; and he begged that those who had sought refuge in these "new-fangled" doctrines come back to the religion of the Bible and be saved through the atoning blood of Christ.

Men Are Much Moved.

The Dutch Arms Band was on the platform at the Sunday afternoon service for men only and gave an enjoyable concert of sacred music before the opening song. Despite rain, more than half the seats in the Tabernacle were filled, and Dr. Biederwolf announced it a "fine-looking body of Plainfield citizens." He said that a collection would be taken for the band, which would be used in other necessities of the organization, and urged that every man present give as liberally as possible. The band, he said, had been coming to the Tabernacle at the head of delegations almost every night of the campaign and had done a volunteer work that would have cost many hundreds of dollars if paid for at regular rates. He added that the committee would probably add something to the collection.

In announcing that he would preach to men only next Sunday afternoon on "Booze," Dr. Biederwolf expressed his gladness for an increasing sentiment in Plainfield against the saloons, and for the courageous stand taken by Mayor Calkins and Mayor Smalley. He said he hoped the day would soon come when every man would stand up and fight against the sale of intoxicants.

The quartet sang "Saved by His Grace Alone," and Mr. McEwan sang "My Sins Are Forgiven; Are Yours"

Dr. Biederwolf's text was "And Esau Sold His Birthright." He said that men of today were making bargains more contemptible than that of Esau, in selling out their souls for money, for sensual pleasure and for power. After he had covered the men in the above-named classes in a frank manner, he admitted that many were left, but they sell out, he said, for fear of their neighbor. "There are a lot of you in this Tabernacle," declared the evangelist, "who won't walk out for God today because you are afraid some old whisky-head will give you the horse laugh when you go down town." He appealed to their manhood and many walked down the sawdust aisle at the close of his sermon.

End of a Glorious Day.

"It has been a glorious day," Dr. Biederwolf said last night, and this was before the evening service, which brought many more converts and reconsecrations at the foot of the pine pulpit. After a song by the quartet, "Nearer My God to Thee," W. D. Murray, president of the Y. M. C. A., announced that the collection of the evening was to go to the local Y. M. C. A. He explained that the Biederwolf campaign originated in the local association and that its officers, directors and secretaries had given practically the past two months to details of the services. He added that the collection was not to be considered as a contirbution to the regular work of the Association, but only a fund to assist in paying extra expenses incurred because of the revival. Within a short time the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. will ask for $200,000 with which to build a suitable building here, he said.

All afternoon meetings of the week will be held in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, instead of the Tabernacle, it was announced last night. It had been decided that it would be well to hold these meetings in another section of the city. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons, Dr. Biederwolf will preach there. Friday afternoon he will preach to women only at the Crescent avenue church, and again Saturday night at the Tabernacle he will preach to women only.

Dr. Biederwolf's famous lecture on Christian Science will be given at the Tabernacle Tuesday evening. On this evening, women of the First Presbyterian church will attend, and the evangelist said last night that this was an "excellent example" for the other churches of Plainfield.

Wednesday night, at the Tabernacle, Dr. Biederwolf will preach on "The Question of the Dance." He said his sermon would not be a sensational tirade, but a reasonable and logical presentation of the question concerning het most popular of modern amusements. Old people and cripples will be allowed admittance, he said, but are not invited. A collection will be taken at the service for the Family Altar League.

Because a number of local merchants cannot secure permission to close their stores for two hours Thursday afternoon of this week, "Merchants' Day" will be postponed one week. The evangelist said last night that nearly all had agreed to close, but that some must secure permission from New York owners and that it had been decided to give them a week's time. He added that he had faith in the business men of Plainfield and that he believed the day would be one of the greatest of the services.

Mr. McEwan sang a solo at the evening service and Dr. Herring led in prayer.

MAYOR CALKINS PRAISED BY REV. FATHER HART

After lauding Mayor Leighton Calkins for his recent action concerning moving picture houses in the city, Father P. J. Hart, rector of St. Joseph's church, in the borough, strongly urged the parents of children to cooperate with the city's executive and keep their children away from pictures of a questionable character and to voice their disapproval of them by immediately writing to the Mayor.

Such a concerted action by the citizens of the city, he said, would without a doubt bring a cleaner and healthier motion picture atmosphere in the city. Father Hart made reference to the item at both of the morning services. The forty hours' devotion began yesterday and will conclude tomorrow morning. The service this evening will be at 7:45 o'clock with a sermon by a visiting clergyman.

JOHN G. ECKHARDT.

John G. Eckhardt, aged sixty-two years, died Saturday night at 7 o'clock at the home of his son-in-law, Charles Schwartz, of 5 Walnut street, the borough. He has been ailing for the past year with a complication of troubles, following a stroke of paralysis. Mr. Eckhardt was a native of Germany, but had lived most of his life in New York city, where he was a manufacturing jeweler. He came to the borough to make his home with his daughter when his illness first began. Besides Mrs. Schwartz there are no surviving relatives. The funeral will be held at the Walnut street home, tomorrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock, and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

SOFIELD—GERBER.

Announcement was made today of the marriage of Miss Rose Gerber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gerber, to Daniel Sofield, son of Harry Sofield, both of South Plainfield. The ceremony was performed at Warrenville a week ago today. Mr. Sofield is employed by the Suburban Transit Company as a bus driver. The couple will reside at the home of the bridegroom's parents.

WILSON TO SEND ANOTHER NOTE

To Ask Explanation of Several Ambiguities.

PRESIDENT IS ANNOYED.

Wanted Definite and Unequivocal Reply—Finds That the More Kaiser's Answer Is Studied the Less It Is Understood—Will Not Question Germany's Good Faith.

Washington, May 8.—It is believed here that President Wilson has virtually decided to write another note to Germany.

Secretary Lansing returned from Annapolis unexpectedly and had a long conference with President Wilson. While the secretary of state declined to make any comment on his call at the White House, it is understood that it related to negotiations with Germany, late developments in Mexico and the message delivered by the apostolic delegate expressing the hope of the pope for an early restoration of peace.

Though the German reply to the president's "ultimatum" pledges the imperial government to suspend illegal methods of submarine warfare and thereby avert an immediate break in diplomatic relations, it is regarded here as having left the whole status of the submarine issue on an uncertain and unsatisfactory basis.

In addition, it is explained, the German note is so worded as to make elucidation necessary.

What the tenor of the president's next communication to Germany will be has not yet been decided. It will probably be discussed at Tuesday's cabinet meeting. The president's official advisers are said to entertain two distinct views in regard to it.

Two Procedures Outlined.

One view is that the president should accept the substance of Germany's pledge at its face value and express gratification on the part of the United States for the decision which the imperial government has reached. Coupled with this expression of gratification may go a declaration of confidence that the pledge will be scrupulously kept and the misunderstanding between the two governments over the submarine issue happily disappear.

A general statement reiterating the purpose of the United States government to see that international law is not violated by any of the belligerents, so far as American rights are concerned, is regarded as sufficient to cover Berlin's reference to the British blockade.

The other view is that the president should briefly inform Berlin that the United States has noted Germany's pledge to suspend illegal submarine operations, that this government fully expects this pledge to be carried out for reasons of "humanity" aside from considerations, and that the United States cannot regard Germany's pledge as conditional upon the result of negotiations which the United States might undertake with another belligerent.

The Vague Points.

It is confidently believed that the president will seek an explanation from the imperial government on certain points in the German note which are vague and subjected to several interpretations.

There is apparently no desire here to question the good faith of Germany's orders to submarine commanders directing that submarine operations be conducted according to the general principles of visit and search of merchantmen. But the German note contains the definite statement that orders to submarine commanders which have been in effect right along have been to operate in accordance with the general principles of visit and search except in the case of enemy freighters in the war zone.

This part of the note presents a puzzling and unsatisfactory problem for the administration. Germany intimates that except in the case of enemy freighters the present methods of warfare have not been changed because it was not necessary to do so to make submarine warfare conform to international law.

Mr. Wilson is understood to be nettled at the turn the submarine issue has taken, though his official duty apparently now makes it mandatory for him to continue negotiating over questions which he believes should have been definitely settled long ago.

The president particularly desired a definite and unequivocal reply to his last note. He finds now that the more he reads the German reply the less it is understood. And the fact which is said to be uppermost in his mind is that Germany by her diplomacy has succeeded in deferring a settlement of the questions involved.

URGES CO-OPERATION OF LOCAL AUTOISTS

State Safety Federation Sends Out Pamphlets of Instruction.

Plainfield civic organizations received from the Safety First Federation of New Jersey pamphlets urging cooperation in the matter of educating folk, especially auto drivers and children, in the matter of taking pains to avpid accidents and the incidents that lead to them. The board has studied these conditions and finds that the rules and regulations are enforced by the police and, consequently, the fatalities here are extremely light. The rules of the federation, which are indorsed by the trade board and by the police department, are as follows:

Safety is more important than speed.

Nine-tenths of the motor accidents are due to the fact that the driver cannot stop his car in time. He should always have his car under control.

If the buildings on the corner ahead interfere with the view, slow up. Perhaps there is a reckless driver coming toward the street you are on.

If there is another automobile ahead, slow up. Keep a safe distance between. One never knows what may cause the car ahead to stop.

If the street ahead is dark, slow up. There may be an excavation or washout in front that the headlights cannot illuminate.

If the pavement on the roadway is slippery, go easy. Many skidding accidents have proven fatal.

If you are about to change your course, slow down. Look back. The fellow following or alongside is entitled to a warning signal.

The safety first education of the school children has already been carried on upon a wide scale. Some of the rules impressed upon their minds were:

Don't run across the street in front of or just behind a car, a wagon, a motorcycle or an automobile.

Do cross the street slowly, after looking both ways, and let the "danger things" go by first.

The time gained by risking the danger incurred in hurrying in front of a moving vehicle is infinitesimal, and by the average person is frequently immediately wasted, so that it is actually time lost. Much better to have devoted it to the proper consideration of the "safety first" thought.

Don't steal a ride on a car or automobile or wagon.

Do watch out for the cars, the wagon and automobile coming the other way.

CHALMERS ACCURACY APPEALS TO DRIVERS

Walter Stryker Talks on Perfectly Tested and Balanced Parts.

"As a class, the racing drivers who have made a name for themselves in American road and track contests, are probably quicker to appreciate advances in motor car manufacture, than any group of men connected with the industry," reminisced Walter Stryker, of the Stryker Motor Car Company, in an interview with a Daily Press reporter today.

"For some time past the Chalmers Company has claimed the distinction of being the only concern manufacturing on a quantity basis, that tests out crankshafts to balance at 2,000 revolutions per minute. While it has made no special capital out of the fact, news of the innovation seemed to reach the various racing camps with the speed of a wireless.

"Immediately the news became known letters were received from Mulford, Chevrolet and other famous drivers, requesting permission to have the crankshafts of their racing cars tested at our factory. Permission was granted as a matter of courtesy and the Chalmers Company has tested the crankshafts of a good many prize winners in the past six months.

"The careful balancing of crankshafts and flywheels is of the utmost importance in the manufacture of high speed motors. As the two most important rotating parts of the motor, the flywheel and crankshaft must be in perfect balance to insure a smooth-running, vibrationless car.

"In the first place, a small overweight on opposite ends of a shaft may not show up at all under ordinary tests, yet when the car is running at high speed, the vibration will cause serious disturbance. Then too, in the flywheel, the density of metal may vary and cause a vibration in the motor.

"One ounce of overweight on the periphery of a 16-inch flywheel will result in a disturbing force of 14.2 pounds at 1,000 revolutions and will obtain the weight of 56.8 pounds at 2,000 revolutions per minute.

"The Chalmers balancing machines specially designed for the purpose, will register irregularities so small as to be infinitesimal. The preliminary operation of balancing is identical for both the flywheel and the crankshaft. The part to be tested is supported on stationary steel parallels of triangular shape. As perfectly as possible, skilled operators balance each flywheel and crankshaft. Small pieces of steel, the weight of which is known, are pasted to the revolving part, until it will stand still at any positions on the parallels. A weight corresponding to the weight of the piece of steel is then drilled out of the flywheel or crankshaft pins, as the case may be. The difference weights indicate the depth of the hole to be drilled.

"Apparently in perfect balance, the flywheel and crankshafts go to the separate balancing machines which are supported in the air by an overhead framework. The machines are then set in motion and the parts revolve exactly as they perform their functions in the completed motor. The revolutions per minute are recorded on a tachometer. If the flywheel vibrates before it attains a speed of 2,400 R. P. M., the operator knows it is not in perfect balance and slaps on pieces of putty on opposite sides until it runs vibrationless at 2,400 revolutions. Holes are then drilled, representing the weight of the putty, the flywheel goes back to the stationary parallels once more, and again to the balancing machine to see that it is absolutely noiseless at the required speed. In place of the putty used on flywheels, the crankshafts are balanced with small bands of steel of a measured weight, which snap over the opposite pins of the crankshaft.

"The crankshaft must revolve without vibration at the rate of 2,000 revolutions per minute before it receives the O. K. of the inspector and is released for the motor assembly.

"While these balancing operations are only one of the hundreds of tests prescribed by the engineering and production departments, they serve to illustrate the extreme care now exercised by motor car manufacturers to safeguard the interests of the automobile buyer. The car is judged rightly by the performance of its motor, and the best possible reward of the maker is the steady service and satisfaction rendered by his product in the hands of owners."

NEWARK AUTOISTS WILL VISIT HERE

All Towns in This Vicinity Included in Itinerary Mapped Out by Boosters.

The "Boost Newark" auto trip arranged by the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club, to tell the people of the municipalities in North Jersey all about the Newark anniversary celebration, has been postponed until May 11 and 12. This is two days later than the original dates.

The first day will bring the motorists to Somerville for luncheon and to Morristown for dinner. The second day will see them at Paterson for luncheon and Dover for dinner.

The itinerary is as follows.

Thursday, May 11 — Elizabeth, Perth Amboy, Metuchen, New Brunswick, Bound Brook, Somerville, Dunellen, Plainfield, Westfield, Springfield, Summit, Chatham, Madison, Morristown and South Orange.

Friday, May 12 Jersey City, Englewood, Hackensack, Ridgewood, Paterson, Pompton, Haskell, Bloomingdale, Butler, Boonton, Rockaway, Dover, Caldwell, Verona, Montclair and Bloomfield.

REO

Have You Ridden in the New Reo Six?

IF YOU HAVEN'T we think it is not too much to say you have yet to taste the real joys of motoring.

AND WHEN YOU HAVE ridden in this big luxurious equipage—the latest and in some respects, greatest product of Reo experience—you will understand why this car enjoys such a vogue—is so tremendously popular this season.

REO SIX WAS PROCLAIMED the "fashion plate for 1916" by designers generally, from the moment its graceful lines were seen.

AND DOUBTLESS YOU'VE OBSERVED the influence this Sheer Line Reo has exerted on the design of seven passenger cars generally.

BUT YOU MUST SEE IT—must ride in and finally drive it yourself to fully appreciate what a magnificent car and what wonderful value it is at its price.

AND THE CLOSER YOU STUDY the details—the more carefully you enquire into every point of design, of construction, of quality of materials, of equipment and finish—the greater will be your admiration and the deeper your wonderment that it is possible to produce such a car for such a price.

FOR YOU MUST KNOW that this Reo Six is made as only the Reo Folk can make automobiles. It is real inside and out—the Reo Folk do not use substitutes. Real leather in the upholstering and real hair.

BUT THAT STATEMENT is scarcely necessary. For you know the Reo Folk and you know Reo ideals. You know that Reo reputation is built on the most solid of foundations—a good product honestly made and honestly sold and honestly backed up afterward.

SO WHEN WE TELL YOU that this new Reo Six is a Reo from radiator cap to taillight we have said the most that could be said for any automobile.

AND THERE'S QUANTITY, TOO, if you like to put it that way. This is a big, full-size seven passenger car. Seats seven full grown adults comfortably—luxuriously.

WHEELBASE IS 126 INCHES. But that is increased—or rather the riding qualities are—to much more than it would otherwise amount by the Reo cantilever springs. They enhance the riding qualities of a car immeasurably—especially a big car like this New Reo Six.

BUT, AS WE SAID in the first paragraph, you will have to see and ride in it yourself to fully appreciate. Then remember one thing more:

DEMAND IS TREMENDOUS—always is for Reo cars, but this season more than ever. Only way to get a Reo and be sure of having it for spring delivery is to order well in advance.

NEVER SINCE THE FIRST REO was made and went into the possession of its proud owner has it been possible for us to make enough cars to supply all who wanted Reos.

AND NOTWITHSTANDING the Reo plants have been extended from year to year till they now cover nearly forty acres (39.23 to be exact) still, we cannot supply the full demand.

ON MARCH FIRST there were more orders on file at the Reo factory than at any previous time in Reo history.

IF YOU APPRECIATE the shortage there is going to be. If you want a Reo. And if you get us your order now—tomorrow—you will be one of the "lucky ones."

BUT DON'T DELAY—there won't be enough—never have been enough—Reos to go 'round.

$200,000 AHEAD IN COLLECTIONS IN 1915

State Motor Vehicle Department Took in $899,499.14 in Four Months.

Already $200,000 ahead of the collections for the same period during 1915, the State Motor Vehicle Department, with receipts of $899,499.14 for the first four months of 1916, seems in a fair way to fulfill the estimate made by Vehicle Commissioner William L. Dill that the total collections for 1916 would approximate $1,300,000.

Thus far 81,994 drivers and 69,079 automobiles have been licensed by the State department. Of this number, 9,207 machines are commercial vehicles, 3,909 being over 4,000 pounds in weight. Motor-cyclists have taken out licenses for 6,781 machines. A total of 757 manufacturers' registrations have been received and tags have been given out for 146 trailers. That many motorists are careless about fixing their tags to their machines is attested by the fact that 609 automobile plates have been lost for which duplicates have been issued.

Of the larger agencies in the State, the one in Jersey City shows the greatest increase in receipts over 1915. A total of $84,946.04 has been collected this year. This compares with $83,439, its total collection for the entire year of 1915.

Newark has accounted for $174,078.36 as against $185,277.62 for the entire year of 1915. The New York city agency to date has collected the sum of $83,122.14. During the year of 1915, the collection from this branch amounted to $83,439. Paterson, too, has advanced strongly, contributing to the coffers of the department $64,273.76, which compares with the receipts from that office in 1915 of $71,726.75. In the Trenton office, the receipts up to April 30 were $56,649.81, whereas the total receipts for 1915 amounted to $82,007.95.

During the first four months of 1915, 7,913 were examined and granted licenses. Within that period this year, 9,352 drivers have been passed, an increase of 1,439 over the number who legally operated cars a year ago. During the month of April 4,245 drivers were examined. Of this number, 3,588 passed and 657 were rejected. This large percentage of successful applicants for licenses probably speaks for the simplicity of operating the modern motor vehicle.

BOUND BROOK ROAD BAD.

The Phillipsburg-Clinton direct route through Bloomsbury is in perfect shape as far as West Portal. Here the recent construction work has been halted, pending a survey of a road over Jagtown mountain. By turning left at West Portal a poor stretch of 2.6 miles is encountered until the outskirts of Asbury are reached, where macadam is again picked up, with direct connection with the Washington-Hampton road. The surface of the road after leaving Asbury is badly heaved in a half-dozen places and no signs of repair work are to be seen as yet. The exits from Clinton are in good condition, especially the one toward Annandale, where grading work was done last fall. The Somerville-Bound Brook road is in need of attention from the repair gang.

FEDERAL FILM CONTROL.

Censorship by United States Plan of Congressman.

Washington, May 8.—After prolonged hearings the house committee on education has evolved its plan for the federal supervision of moving picture films. The bill is fathered in the house by Chairman Hughes of the committee.

Under cover of the authority conferred by the commerce clause of the constitution it is proposed to give the federal government complete control over films by prohibiting their transportation in interstate commerce if they do not meet the requirements laid down in the bill.

The censorship machinery provided by the bill is to consist of a federal motion picture commission composed of five members to be appointed by the president and approved by the senate. The salaries of the members are to be $7,500 a year each, with the exception of the chairman, who is to receive $8,000.

FRENCH FINISH CANAL.

New Waterway Connects River Rhone With the Sea.

Paris, May 8.—The new canal connecting the Rhone with the sea at Marseilles, which has been completed during the war, was officially opened. The canal is seventy-seven kilometers long (48.1 miles).

The most difficult work in the construction of the canal was the building of the tunnel, which is seven kilometers (4.3 miles) long. The canal will accommodate 600 ton barges drawing eight feet.

CAMDEN TO GIVE BIG CIVIC SHOW

Industrial Exhibition to Start May 18.

WILL COST OVER $100,000

Fourth City In State Desires to Demonstrate to World How It Has Grown. Palace of Industries to House More Than a Hundred Moving Exhibits.

Camden, May 8.—This city, the fourth largest in New Jersey, with a population of 105,000 and growing at such a rate that four years hence it promises to take third place, is now dressing up for the greatest civic demonstration ever held in south Jersey. Merchants, manufacturers, professional men and persons in all walks of life will spend more than $100,000 within the next three weeks in celebrating the passing of the 100,000 population mark with a civic exposition from May 17 to 27. The event will be conducted under the auspices of the Camden board of trade, 200 members of which have enlisted on a civic celebration committee.

Camden is the home of more than 100 manufacturing industries, and more than a fourth of these are making a separate product in which the output leads any other city in the world. Of course it is well known that Camden has a great talking machine factory, a great soup factory and great shipbuilding yards, but the civic exposition will introduce many other Camden industries occupying a high place in the manufacturing world. This demonstration will take place in the Third regiment armory on Haddon avenue, which is being transformed into a palace of industries, in which more than 100 moving exhibits will be placed.

In the palace of industries will be shown how Camden produces 90 per cent of the world's supply of writing pens, the most paper boxes, the greatest number of gas mantles, the largest steam heating systems, thousands of tons of chocolate candy, the most macaroni, over half of the whiting used in America, the greatest supply of licorice, nearly all of the cork products in the world, 40,000,000 cigars annually, 20,000,000 bricks annually, the most dressed leather, 127 varieties of an annual output of 1,000,000,000 wire staples, the most lace in the country, the greatest production of wire stretching machines, the largest iron castings ever made, most of the oilcloth and linoleum, more wool scouring than all other cities combined and many other accomplishments of which the city is justly proud.

The palace will be formally opened on Thursday evening, May 18, at 8 o'clock with an elaborate program. Mayor Charles H. Ellis will press the button that will start the exhibit of machinery. The exposition palace will be open every day and night until the close of the general celebration on Saturday, May 27, at midnight. Entertainment will be provided daily. One of the biggest nights will be May 24, which has been set aside as Victor night, when the Victor Talking Machine company of Camden will present personally some of the great artists making records for the company. The Victor military band will furnish the music.

NAMES ROAD COMMITTEE.

Fielder Says Political Influences Have Prevented Solution of Problem.

Trenton, May 8.—Governor Fielder has appointed a committee of five to make an independent investigation of road problems in the state with a view to the establishment of an adequate road system. He expressed the belief that failure of past attempts has been due in large measure to political influences.

The committee is composed of the following: State Road Commissioner Stevins, J. H. Wood of the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey, John W. Herbert of Helmetta, a member of the state chamber of commerce; Frank B. Ridgway of Mullica Hill, a member of the state grange, and Horace A. Bunnell of East Orange.

TAX OFFICIALS TO MEET.

State Board Calls Conference to Be Held May 16.

Trenton, May 8.—Frank H. Sommer, counsel for the state board of public utility commissioners; Jerome T. Congleton, president of the Essex county board of taxation, and John Howe, president of the Newark board of assessors, will be speakers on tax subjects to be heard May 16 in this city, when a conference of New Jersey tax officials will be held under the auspices of the state board of taxes and assessments.

The conference is called in the interest of co-operation and of uniform methods. Lucius T. Russell of Elizabeth, president of the state board, will preside.

Navy For Rahway.

SHE'S THERE BECAUSE SHE PERFORMS—THE 3400 r. p. m. CHALMERS

Most cars start alike. But very few finish alike. Therein comes a mighty difference.

Step on the little button 10 months after date and you'll readily note the inequality.

One is sluggish, "dead", without emotion, and responds to the touch with the speed of old-time oxen responding to the lash.

The other is alive, alert, ready; radiates desire to plunge ahead.

This is the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers kind. The other kind is the species known to the trade as "one-year" cars.

Chalmers makes a five-year car. There's many an old 1909 Chalmers 30 Blue Bird giving a good account of itself today. You'll find the everlasting pep there five years from the day you take your first turn at the wheel.

Largely because of the 3400 r. p. m. engine. Which delivers mighty power with easy effort.

It's mostly in the design. The pistons are aluminum, about two pounds lighter per piston; the reciprocating parts lighter, which eases up the thrust on the bearings.

Then the crank-shaft, which is very heavy, and balanced to the weight of a hair in a special Chalmers device, spins at the rate of 3400 revolutions per minute.

It means excellent reserve power. For at 10 miles an hour the engine is turning up only 500 r. p. m. while at 20 she is doing about 1000 r. p. m. So that at excessive road speed she has the punch to deliver when called upon.

16% of her power is used at 10 miles an hour. So that she has 60% to 84%—when a twisting, hilly road looms ahead, when a sharp corner with a rugged grade hoves in sight; when the man ahead is showing you too much dust.

You'll like the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers for one single little reason. She sure can perform.

Ask your dealer about Chalmers service inspection coupons, negotiable at all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is a most important consideration in buying your car.

Mr. McEwan wants every High School student of North Plainfield and Plainfield to be on hand at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday afternoon at 2:15. Arrangements are being made for big High School night on Friday.

Delegations for Tuesday are the Elks from Westfield and Plainfield and an outside delegation from Westfield.

The offering last night was for the Y. M. C. A., in which the seed for this campaign was planted just one year ago on May 6, 1915, and from which has developed this great revival which Plainfield is now witnessing.

The afternoon services for the coming week are to be held by Dr. Biederwolf in the Crescent Avenue church.

Merchants' Day has been postponed one week.

Delegation last night was from Metuchen and they were heartily welcomed by Dr. Biederwolf.

Mr. McEwan sang by request "My Ain Country."

Dr. Biederwolf interrupted his sermon to have Mac sing "Should We Go Without Dying?"

THE IDEAL CAR.

The ideal car should have two pedals and a steering wheel. When power is wanted for starting, for speed or for hill climbing, press the power pedal; when it is desired to stop, press the retarding pedal.

At all speeds there should be no vibration and no sound.

Its operation and maintenance should require no mechanical knowledge.

It should cost little to buy, and less to run.

If that is truly the ideal, are we not a very long way from satisfying it utterly?

The automobile of the type we know is a wonderfully perfect machine, like the typewriter or the telephone; but, like both, it is marvelously imperfect, in that it is an immense distance away from what the human mind is capable of desiring it to be.

INFLATION THAT PAYS.

It is not overinflation but underinflation that should be guarded against.

The average owner would get 35 per cent. more mileage out of his tires if he would see to it that they are always proerly inflated.

A tire will not be hurt by the rise of a few pounds pressure due to running. Tests have shown that it is not possible to obtain an increase in pressure due to overheating while running sufficient to injure the tire.

POPULAR DEMAND FOR RETURN OF QUERY DEPARTMENT

Owing to the urgent demand of late for a return of the "Queries, Comment, and Answer" columns conducted successfully some time ago by the Plainfield Daily Press, this feature will be renewed with tomorrow's issue. The bulk of sport news that has been handled of late by the Press sporting department has made it impossible to devote the required time to this interesting department, and, as a result, a stack of queries have accumulated. The first batch of these will be answered tomorrow and others will be taken care of in the order received. It is not necessary to sign your name to the queries; initials are sufficient. Information will be given on all subjects, not alone sports, and readers are free to use the columns for comment or settling issues of any kind. Watch for the return of the popular feature tomorrow.

KEEN RIVALRY PRODUCTIVE OF CLEVER BASEBALL HERE.

All doubt as to the calibre of baseball competition that will be set forth by the City League contenders this year was dispelled Saturday afternoon, when a trio of the speediest organized contests ever put on in this section were staged. The rivalry is keen, the baseball clean-cut and the management all along the circuit is above reproach. Saturday's combats were full of "pep" and brought to the surface an array of talent that exceeds in playing ability the highest anticipations of those instrumental in the founding of the league. The support in the opening games has been mediocre, and if we're to make the league permanent we'll have to give the six managers a whole lot more encouragement by our appearance on the sidelines Saturday afternoons.

"UMP" HAS TO "PULL A BONE" TO GET IN PRINT.

Too often is it the case that umpires' names are forgotten until they pull a "bone," and then they are presented with enough publicity to pay up for the portion they missed by performing in a satisfactory manner. While a City League "ump" is going good, making a hit with the fans and keeping the players in fairly good spirits, his name is never mentioned. The local circuit has the finest trio of officials doing duty this year that could be collected in this section and they deserve the co-operation and support of every player and fan in taking care of a not altogether popular task. To date the Plainfield "umps" have kept in the good graces of both players and fans and have not broken into print.

SMALL TOWN GOLFERS WELL UP THE LADDER OF FAME.

Just as evidence of what "small town stuff" will sometimes produce, take a glance at the score returned by the Cranford Club golfers over a set of Plainfield's finest devotees to the Scotch pastime Saturday afternoon. The Queen City brassie wielders were outclassed and heavily outscored by a group of suburbanites who have been mastering the fine points of the sport on a green that doesn't class with the one at the country club. Yet they have developed in Max Marston one of the world's best-known golf performers at Cranford, and that there are other "Marstons" in the process of making in that town is indicated by the result of Saturday's team match.

PLAINFIELD NO SCHOOL FOR GOLF CHAMPS.

Plainfield has sent golfers to compete in metropolitan classics, but for the most part they have met with only mediocre success. Just why we haven't developed a Marston or a Ouimet in Plainfield is a problem that has been troubling the minds of veteran golfers for years past. There's something sadly lacking in the way the game is being promoted locally and the sooner the remedy is found the quicker we are going to have a chance of breaking into national print with a phenom.

DUNELLEN ISN'T BUCKING CITY LEAGUE—IT COULDN'T.

An unpleasant and not altogether correct version of the calibre of opposition Warry McLaughlin intends to stack up against the City League program has gained considerable circulation here during the past few days. From certain quarters word has come that "Mac" and his Dunellen forces are planning to buck the league project. Furthermore, it has been stated that Warry and his colleagues propose to do everything within their power to send the organization to the wall. A bulk of this information is without foundation. Warry is friendly toward the City League and he has sense enough to realize that his efforts of a single combine would not be sufficient to disrupt an organization such as this. He's promoting the game in Dunellen on a square basis and if the Plainfield players treat him halfway decent he can be relied upon to return the compliment.

Despite the fact that boxing has been legalized in Jersey, we haven't as yet caught a glimpse of any activity along the pugilistic line hereabouts, outside of an occasional setto between a couple of inebriated gentlemen. Boxing fans don't get hot until there's frost.

Certain Plainfield baseball players are kicking their heads off because an amateur league is keeping them from earning a few shekels each week pastiming in the semi-pro field. These are the players who think they are too good for the city circuit. Well, sometimes even a baseball artist outgrows his class—but more often his class outgrows him.

Saturday's Results

Netherwood, 5; T. A. B. S., 4.
First Baptist, 5; Clinton Ave., 2.
Hopes, 7; Farmers, 3.

The second set of games in the City League schedule were ushered in on Saturday and the old machine was found to be as fit as a flivver. The few touchings up given the more important parts by the league moguls and the addition of a new tire in the form of the Farmer team, proved beneficial. Things ran off in good shape.

The battles were all interesting and exciting. Large crowds gathered to watch the conflicts and the rabid rooting indulged in by individual cheer leaders made things rather lively.

The upset handed the Farmers by the Hopes was not entirely looked for but would not have happened had errors been fewer. As it was the "Seeds" put up a game fight and deserve plenty of credit for the classy showing made. The Netherwoods were expected to hand the Tabs a loss and they did it in exactly the fashion anticipated. The Tabs are imbued with the fighting spirit and have a firm grip on the ray of Hope. The Baptists, who, at this time last year, were wreaths and condolence cards, are now skidding along like Charlie Chaplins. "Dunc" Patterson says they are due for no immediate halt and the Clintonians, after Saturday's loss, are willing to share Patterson's belief.

SOME SHIVERS FOR ABSTAINERS' SPINES

Looked Victory Straight in the Face But Netherwoods Had a Date to Win.

With cries of "back to Asbury Park," rending the air, Lou Slocum held the T. A. B. S. in check on Baptist Field Saturday afternoon while his mates glided away with a 5 to 4 victory. To say that the battle was not exicting is putting things mildly and to hint that the Netherwood win was an easy one and one that was never in doubt is all wrong. Right up until the same Louis Slocum threw out Frank Brennan in the ninth, things looked rather rosy for the Abstainers.

The affair opened with a rush. Frezza denting a Denny offering for a clean single, being followed in the act by Earl Moran with another single. Herb Johnson followed with the third single decker. Frezza and Moran scoring. Johnson also scored on an out made by Eddie Coughlin. The Tabs in their half of the third annexed two counters. Tone Denny was an easy out but his brother Jack raised a single and gained a life. "Shakey" Clarke was given a berth on an untimely error by Eddie Coughlin. Billy O'Loughlin walked into one of Slocum's sizzlers and a single resulted. Both Jack Denny and Clarke scored, but O'Loughlin, in his anxiety to stretch things, was caught off first base. Tony Denitzio, the next man up, was passed. Benny Rosenson came through with a neat single and the fleet Denitzio found himself on third. Things looked pretty bad for the Netherwoods but Henny Winters fell a victim to the tantalizing shoots of the boy from "Asbury."

Along about the ending of the seventh the Tabs gathered in another run on Rosenson's single scoring Denitzio who had borrowed another free ticket. Winters had another chance to sew up the game but his striking out left Benny stranded on the difficult sack. The East Enders came back in the eighth and pushed over a run on one of the fastest pieces of baseball ever pulled off on local diamonds. Eddie Cougrlin singled but Hannon could not advance him. However, Bill Dodd hit a slow grounder to Denny who threw to first, Coughlin scoring on the play. The Tabs became dangerous in the ninth and with Winters on first and Denitzio on third threatened to score. However, Slocum made Brennan tap an easy one to the pitcher's box and it was all over.

DIDN'T TAKE LONG WHEN ONCE STARTED

Ninth Inning Act Brought a Victory to Baptist's Camp.

A regular ninth inning rally ushered in another victory to the Baptist column, the three counters registered in the final frame telling the tale of a 5 to 2 Baptist victory over Tommy Apgar's Clintonians, on Saturday afternoon.

The two outfits were deadlocked up to the ninth frame and matters were about even. But in the last inning the Firsts worked wonders. The "Ty Cobbs" of the outfit got together and held a consultation in Pond's factory. Ashley Burner demonstrated that he had learned something from the conference by annexing a life. Compton, who is more like Ty Cobb in batting ability than, perhaps, any other local celebrity, followed with a smashing second base drive, scoring Burner. Terry registered Compton with a double and after both Gawler and Waller had been retired Eric Van Norden's two ply wallop accounted for Terry.

Both "Dunc" Patterson and Johnny Dixon pitched grand exhibitions, the former fanning 9 and the latter 13.

The fielding work of both combines was exceptionally good, although three errors were made. It was not necessary for Manager Patterson to call out the reserves and for that reason, Dan Randolph had no work to attend to.

MISCUES NUMEROUS; HOPE WINS EASILY

Chapelites Had Things Their Own Way With Farmer Leaguers.

The Farmers were no match for the Hopes on Emerson Field, Saturday, being forced to taste the bitter dregs of a 7 to 4 defeat.

In the very first frame, Kachelries gained a life on an error by "Tush" Jaeger. The elongated twirler then stole second and came over the pan on a smashing double by Joe Morley. It was up to Nichols to bring in Morley, but Nick was an easy out vie the Grisley-Martin route. The Hopes came back in their section of the battle-scarred frame and pushed over a tally on hits by Grisley and Britt Martin. Things trailed along slowly for a while, but the Farmers provoked disaster by teasing over another run in the third frame. Alex Campbell was responsible for this marker. The Chapelites got down to business after this and a merry-go-round was indulged in. Three runs were produced on only one hit. Errors and a complimentary caused all the trouble. These three runs came as a sequel to the three tallies made in the third canto, hits by Martin and Heron having instigated the trouble on that occasion.

The Farmers became active again in the fifth, but were as submissive as lambs thereafter.

Errors were numerous, thirteen miscues being the total registered.

FINAL SCORE 11 TO 1

Eighteen Red and Blue Players Retired Via Strikeout Route—Kyle Got the Lone Bingle for Plainfield Team.

Facing one of the best schoolboy pitchers in the State, Plainfield High School was treated to an 11 to 1 defeat at Pennington, Saturday. The locals' one run was a gift to them in the eighth inning, when Linke got on by an error, stole second and came home on another misplay.

Lance was in great form for the Academy boys, and allowed but one hit, Kyle getting one of the scratch variety. Fourteen of the locals were fanned—in the second and eighth in order. Noonan seemed to be easy, as he struck out every time at bat.

Pennington practically sewed up the game in the first three innings by getting five runs, but took three more in the fifth and sixth.

Only two other P. H. S. men reached second base and had no chance to score.

CHANCE FOR PRESS ADVERTISERS TO ATTRACT THE ATTENTION OF THE ENTIRE COUNTY.

As the result of an agreement between the Plainfield Daily Press and the Elizabeth Evening Times any advertiser placing a classified ad in the Press may have that same ad inserted in the Elizabeth Evening Times upon the payment of one-half more than is charged for the Daily Press insertion alone. Thus, if an advertisement in the Daily Press costs forty cents, the same advertisement may be placed in the Elizabeth paper for an additional twenty cents.

The Elizabeth Evening Times has a circulation of 9,000 and is widely distributed throughout Union County. Thus if an advertiser places his advertisement in the Plainfield Daily Press and Elizabeth Evening Times he places it before the eyes of thousands of readers at a very small cost.

Most advertisers welcome the opportunity to attract the attention of the whole county to their offerings and with the co-operation of the Elizabeth Evening Times the Plainfield Daily Press is now able to make this possible. The Elizabeth Evening Times has earned a reputation for itself as an advertising medium, especially along the classified line, and it is a well known fact that its influence extends into other counties besides Union.

VOLUNTARY TRUSTS

These trusts are operative during life and not after death. Their purpose is to establish an income producing fund for dependent friends or relatives, or for charitable endowment, and are particularly designed to relieve the overburdened business man of the care of his accumulated capital.

Voluntary Trusts are created by mutual agreement, the terms of which may provide for the disposition of the fund at death. This Company is prepared to handle such trusts and our Officers will be glad to answer questions on the subject.

FR. BOGAN LAUDS T. A. B. SOCIETY

Catholic Organization of St. Mary's Parish Holds its 44th Annual Meeting.

PLEDGES ARE RENEWED

Officers Are Elected for Coming Year and Various Activities Are Reviewed—Social Hour and Refreshments Enjoyed.

The forty-fourth annual meeting of the Total Abstinence Benevolence Society was held in T. A. B. Hall last evening, at which time the members renewed the pledge, administered by the Rev. B. M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church. Among those present were two members, John W. Walsh and John Barry, who took the pledge forty-four years ago. That pledge was administered by Monsignor Patrick S. Cody, of Newark.

During the past year 104 new members have been added to the organization and many new features have been started. It is quite remarkable that during the forty-four years of the existence of the society, only nineteen members have been lost and during the year just past the enthusiasm has been greatly increased, due to the energetic efforts of the various committees in charge of the welfare of the organization. Quarters have been enlarged by the addition of bowling alleys, pool rooms, shower baths and various other conveniences for the enjoyment of the members. These improvements have necessitated additional cost and this has been met with hearty response. The success is due in a large measure to the hearty cooperation and unity of the members, ably assisted by the women of the Social Club.

The society fosters athletic sports of all kinds, including baseball, bowling and basketball. Every team that represents the T. A. B. Society is first and foremost in true sportsmanship. At the present time the baseball team is entered in the City League.

Over $8,000 was expended during the past year. A large portion of which was for building and equipping new quarters recently annexed to the club. This addition was erected at quite a little expense and is modern in every respect. In fact, it is the mecca for friendly gatherings of all sorts. Bowling alleys have been built and are in use every day except Sunday. The pool tables see plenty of service and basketball is the king of T. A. B. Hall during the winter season. The maintenance of such things cements fellowship. This fact, coupled with the fact that the society pays sick benefits and death benefits to members and wives of members, accounts for the large expenditure. However, more than enough to offset this large output was taken in and, as a result, the T. A. B. S. is better financially than it ever was.

The club is a factor in a social way. Dances and euchre parties are held at regular intervals and various other amusements are provided for. The young women of the parish are given the use of the club every Tuesday evening, when they are privileged to make use of every convenience in the clubhouse. As a result, the Social Club numbers among its members several star basketeers and bowlers. To the young women of the Social Club the T. A. B. S. owe much of their success.

During the course of last evening's meeting, Father Bogan gave a short address in which he congratulated the members of the society for their splendid showing and wished them continued success in the future. Following his address, Father Bogan administered the pledge and introduced Father John McGrath, of Stoney Hill. Father McGrath stated that it gave him much pleasure to be with the T. A. B. S. on such an occasion. He told a few humorous stories of college days and also entered upon the serious side of the question of temperance.

The following officers were elected: President, Joseph T. McCue; vice president, John Force; financial secretary, Charles Schuck; recording secretary, John V. Powelson; treasurer, John J. Hines; sergeant at arms, Alex McDonald and John Gleason; executive committee, Joseph Roach, M. D. O'Keefe and John Walsh.

After routine business had been transacted and the addresses of both priests had been enjoyed, a social time with refreshments was in order. The St. Mary's Fife and Drum Corps rendered several selections and were presented with a cup, won in a recent competition. The presentation was made by Father Bogan and the cup was accepted by Major Frank Donnolly. Joe Carroll sang a few of the latest song hits, accompanied on the piano by Clarke Hamil. Bowling closed the evening's program.

Notice To All Elks.

Don't forget tonight at 7 o'clock to hear Dr. Biederwolf. There will be no meeting tomorrow night, Wednesday, May 10, 1916, the district deputy having granted that request to enable as many as can to go to Dover to witness their annual show. Get in touch at once with the Dover committee, Bros. Taverner, Coleman or Mosher. By order of the lodge. W. R. Townsend, secretary.—Adv. ***

THREE GOOD PLAYS BY CUP BEARERS' CIRCLE

Local Amateurs Shine at Performance Given in High School Auditorium.

Plainfielders had another opportunity last night to witness an excellent amateur dramatic performance, when three plays were given at the High School Auditorium under the auspices of the Cup Bearers' Circle of King's Daughters. An audience of five or six hundred applauded and by hearty laughter showed their appreciation of the splendid work by the thespians. The program was an interesting one, a farce, a comedy and a serious playlet providing a broad range of entertainment.

In "Our Aunt from California," a comedy by Madeline Barnum, were seven characters, portrayed by Miss Dorothy Burke, Mrs. Jesse E. Waid, Miss Edith Griscom, Miss Hope Ivins, Mrs. Edward J. Waring, Mrs. Edward C. Suffern and Miss Katherine Titus. Each young woman showed careful study of her part, and the situations were well worked out. Miss Edith Griscom, who disguised herself in order to play a joke on her two sisters by impersonating an aunt who later appeared in the flesh, won liberal applause because of her [illegible] this difficult role.

Brown Rolston and Mrs. Maxwell E. Perkins have become as well known to Plainfield audiences due to their work in leading parts in the various plays given by the Comedy Club, that their appearance on the stage in "The Open Door" was the signal for a most cordial reception. As has always been the case when they have acted in this city, there was nothing left to be desired in the handling of the two difficult roles. At the conclusion Mrs. Perkins was literally showered with floral gifts, three of the ushers being required to carry them to the stage.

"That Brute Simmons" gave Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick, Walter L. Righter and Harold N. Underhill plenty of opportunity to create laughter. Mrs. Mellick took the part of a supposed widow who had married Simmons, and complications began when her first husband, Ford, turned up. All three characters were excellent, Mr. Righter handling the Scotch part in an especially amusing manner.

Between the first two plays Mr. Righter also sang a couple of Scotch songs and told a story. He was attired in kilts, which added to the effectiveness of the offering. At the conclusion, of the first song a large bouquet of cabbages, and numerous other vegetables was handed to him as a gift from appreciative friends. Lewis A. Williams accompanied him on the piano.

The stage settings for all three plays were splendid, and showed that much time and effort had been put on them. The young women who form the Cup Bearers' Circle, dressed in attractive summer costumes, circulated throughout the audience selling candy and flowers.

SIX CENT VERDICT IN LIBEL SUIT AGAINST DAILY PRESS

Raymond A. Alland, former postmaster of Stirling, from which office he was removed by a government inspector in May, 1913, secured a judgment for six cents against the Plainfield Press Company from a jury at Morristown yesterday, after a trial lasting three days. Alland alleged that he had been libeled by the publication of an article in the Plainfield Daily Press on May 23, 1913, shortly after he was removed. The Daily Press did not plead justification in the case, putting as a defense that it was not the published article which damaged Alland, but his own acts as postmaster. Alland sued for $20,000.

Elmer King, of Morristown, represented the Daily Press, associated with former Governor J. Franklin Fort, president of the Plainfield Press Company. Alland was represented by Mr. Romine and State Senator Charles A. Rathbun. Judge William H. Speer was on the bench. The witnesses for the defense were Post Office Inspector Clinton A. Larabee, Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield and Leslie R. Fort of this city, W. H. Rogers, of Watchung; T. M. Holmes, Jr., Postmaster Murphy, Vincent Mallon and Edward Swanson of Stirling, Henry Sheurman of Basking Ridge, Post Office Inspector F. A. Butler of New York city, Ralph L. Morrow of Greenwich, Conn., former editor of the Press, and former Governor Fort. Alland was the principal witness for the plaintiff, and the other witnesses on his side all came from Stirling.

SEES BURGLAR BUT A POLICEMAN FINDS NOTHING

E. Ryno, of 120 North avenue, reported to the police station at 12:25 this morning that there was a man on his upstairs porch trying to get in a window. Patrolman Hendershot was sent to the home at once but could find no trace of a burglar.

FIVE DIE WHEN CYMRIC IS SUNK

Big Boatload of Munitions Goes Down Off Coast of Ireland.

NO WARNING GIVEN

Germans Making Desperate Efforts to Capture Hill 304, But French Hold Firm—Crown Prince Has Fresh Army Before Verdun.

Liverpool, May 9.—The White Star Line gave out the following statement today:

"The SS. Cymric, which was torpedoed at noon on Monday, sank at 3 o'clock this morning. It is hoped the officers and seamen were saved. Survivors in boats are making for the southern coast of Ireland. The Cymric had a crew of 107, of which five were killed. The vessel was torpedoed in the engine room and no warning was given. The torpedoing occurred about 138 miles west of Fastnet."

The Cymric steamed from New York for Liverpool on April 29. She had no passengers, except five distressed British seamen who had come to this port on board other ships and became ill while here. None of these, according to J. J. MacPherson, British Vice Consul, who has charge of the shipping department of the consulate, was an American citizen. Neither, as far as Mr. MacPherson was able to ascertain, was any of the 107 men in the Cymric's crew. He said there had been twelve desertions from the ship, and the places of the deserters were filled by eight men who signed here. But none of these, Mr. MacPherson said, was an American.

HOPE TO MAKE ROSE TAG DAY ANNUAL HOSPITAL AFFAIR

On June 17, the Woman's Auxiliary of Muhlenberg Hospital will make its appeal for financial support from all residents and visitors within the city limits and in the nearby towns whose sick and suffering come to our doors.

It is expected that on that date three or four hundred volunteer workers will take their posts in assigned districts, and during the day the red-and-white rose will be worn by hundreds of the people of Plainfield and vicinity, denoting that charity has received its contribution. The growing work of the auxiliary means that larger funds will be necessary in order to offer all possible assistance during the coming year, in supplying garments, bandages and many articles of hospital equipment which the women of the board both make and provide, as well as donating fruit, flowers and jellies to the wards and remembrances to patients and workers on the high days and holidays.

This all means progress; and progress calls for more money.

The Woman's Auxiliary Board hope for such a successful Tag Day that they will be encouraged to make it an annual affair, thereby concentrating in one large effort, instead of in many smaller appeals throughout the year.

Arrangements for every detail of the campaign are being carefully made and the city will be covered from end to end by the army of workers. Some of the collectors will start work at daybreak, and from that time until late in the evening, all districts will be thoroughly patrolled by "taggers." The collectors will wear the uniform of the trained nurse and from their baskets will pin a rose upon each and all in this city, who will give their dimes or their dollars toward making this first "Rose Tag Day" for Muhlenberg the success which it deserves.

STRATTON CHRISSAFIDES GIVEN VERDICT FOR $1,100

Stratton Chrissafides, proprietor of a lunchroom on West Front street, this city, who was struck by an automobile at a crossing near Pumptown, December 23, 1915, was awarded $1,100 damages in the Circuit Court, Elizabeth, yesterday, in a suit against the Brunswick Motor Company, the owner, and John Kraus, the driver of the car which hit him. Chrissafides who was riding in a Ford car, showed that he had sustained internal injuries, and is now suffering from hernia, it is said.

The plaintiff was represented by Attorney Irving Kunzman, of this city, and his strong presentation of his client's case undoubtedly resulted in the latter getting a substantial verdict.

COMMITTEE NEEDS ADDITIONAL $300

Urgent Appeal is Made in Behalf of Fund for Entertainment of Letter Carriers.

Contributions are still needed to complete the $1,500 fund being raised to entertain the State Letter Carriers' Convention here on May 30, and the committee is especially anxious that this money be received within the next few days. The committee in charge makes the following appeal today:

"The date for holding the State Letter Carriers' Convention will soon be here. May 30, Memorial Day, is the time, and certainly every resident of Plainfield ought to take pride in making this great undertaking a splendid success. Each and every one of us ought to make a special effort to impress upon the minds of the thousands of visitors who will be here on that day that the Queen City of New Jersey is a wide-awake, up-to-date, hustling town.

"There will be about three thousand uniformed carriers in line, New York city alone sending fifteen hundred, and the impressions they get of Plainfield on that day will be carried to all sections of New Jersey as well as to the 'Big City.' Seldom do we have such an opportunity to so widely advertise the good qualities of our city. Should not everybody, therefore, do his best to make the impressions created at that time good ones? That has been the aim of the Citizens' Committee, which has worked so faithfully, and now as the time draws so near, only one thing bothers them, and that is the thing that bothers most of us—money.

"It has been estimated that it will take about $1,500 to properly carry out the program arranged by the committee. Of this amount about $1,200 has been subscribed by generous public-spirited inhabitants of Plainfield, but the committee needs the other $300.

"Letters, with stamped envelopes enclosed, have been sent to the public at large, and many have kindly responded. The amount needed is not much, and if each person who has not donated his share toward this worthy cause will put one dollar, that is all, just one dollar, in the envelope that has been sent him and mail it, he will feel satisfied that he has done his part in helping to make this city—h city—better and more widely known, and at the same time he will have helped to make the work of the committee in charge easier. If the envelope already mailed his been mislaid, address one to Mr. William Floersch, Park avenue, who is treasurer of the finance committee, put one dollar in it and mail it to him, and then, on Memorial Day, when you behold the results of the committee's hard work, you will be glad that you did your little towards helping to make the convention a success.

PAY INCREASE FOR FIRE AND POLICE

New Salaries Will Go Into Effect About June 1, it is Said.

Both the policemen and firemen of the city of Plainfield will receive an increase in salaries within the next few weeks. Amendments are now being drawn to municipal ordinances under which these two departments are operated that will permit the payment of more money to these men, and it is believed that the increase in pay will become effective June 1. Members of the fire and police committees of the Common Council have their schedules of increase figured out and will make them public just as soon as the change is authorized by ordinance of the Council. It is said that the new salaries will be satisfactory to both policemen and firemen.

FIRE ON GRANT AVENUE.

Burning grease in the store of M. Sweeney, at 117 Grant avenue, called out men from headquarters and the West End company at 5 p. m. yesterday. No damage was done.

WAS IT YOU?

Someone in Plainfield has had an awakening of conscience. Yesterday the Treasury Department in Washington received a plain envelope postmarked "Plainfield, N. J.," and on the inside was found $1,400 in good and lawful currency. There was also a white slip of paper which bore the words "Conscience fund." Washington does not want to know who sent the money. It is an unwritten law with treasury officials that there shall be no effort to ascertain the source of such money. Plainfielders who heard of the conscience fund contribution are attributing it to the good influence of the Biederwolf campaign.

FOUR KILLED IN DOVER EXPLOSION

Mixing Plant of the Atlas Powder Plant Blown up At Noon.

Four men were killed and more than one hundred injured, some fatally, at noon today by an explosion at the plant of the Atlas Powder Company at Landing, near Dover. The explosion occurred in a mixing room, that occupied an entire building. This building was completely destroyed and others near were either destroyed or damaged.

The names of the dead could not be learned. All Dover was attracted to the scene of the explosion within a short time and hundreds of volunteer workers began to remove the injured. They were taken to various hospitals in Morris county, all blackened, burned and bruised as a result of the explosion.

It was dynamite that exploded. Only a small force of men were at work in the mixing building, and it is not believed that any of them will live, although only four bodies have been found.

The explosion was clearly felt in Plainfield. At about 12:45 windows in buildings all over the city rattled, and some were broken. One in the Timbo Social Club on North avenue was shattered. Watchung felt the shock more clearly than did Plainfield. The Press telephone rang incessantly for more than an hour until news of the explosion became generally circulated, most people fearing an earthquake.

FAY GETS EIGHT YEARS IN PRISON

Other Bomb Plot Men Are Sentenced With Him.

New York, May 9.—In the United States District Court today Judge Howe sentenced the three men who were found guilty last night of conspiracy to destroy munition ships. Lieutenant Robert Fay got two years on the first indictment, and eight years on the second, but as the two will run concurrently it amounts to eight years. Fay's brother-in-law, Walter Scholz, got two years and four years, respectively, and Paul Daeche, whom the jury strongly recommended to mercy, got two years and two years, respectively. The actual time being therefore four years for Scholz and two years for Daeche. On each indictment also a fine of $1 was imposed. The prison sentences are to be served in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, but it is stated that appeals will be taken at once.

TABERNACLE CHOIR ENJOY SOCIAL AND ENTERTAINMENT

The large chorus choir which has been singing every night at the revival meetings in the Tabernacle met in the Pine Temple last night for an informal social and entertainment. The choir sang a number of selections under the leadership of Scotch "Mac," the song evangel, and he himself favored with several solos. One of the features was the singing of popular Scotch songs by natives of Scotland who are members of the choir. Amusing games were also enjoyed.

During the evening Dr. W. E. Biederwolf spoke briefly to the choir, taking occasion to thank each one for his and her part in the evangelistic campaign. There was a presentation of a large cake to Dr. and Mrs. Biederwolf. The National Male Quartet sang popular numbers, and during an intermission coffee, cake and ice cream were served by a committee of women in charge of the affair. Before the choir dispersed Stone & Luckey, photographers, took a flashlight picture of the group.

LOCAL MOOSE ARRANGE FOR SERIES OF DANCES

A large delegation of members were present at the regular meeting of Plainfield Lodge, No. 310, Loyal Order of Moose, last night when Dictator Martin J. Whelan occupied the chair for the first time since his installation. Addresses were made by the officers and an informal program of music enjoyed while cigars and refreshments were passed in conclusion. Dictator Whelan has been an energetic worker in the lodge and his regime promises to be an unusually successful one.

In the business session last night the lodge voted to hold a social dance in Moose Hall every Tuesday night during May and June, beginning tonight. May 23 will be made an especial occasion as a package social will be held on this night. The dances will be conducted under the auspices of the Good and Welfare committee.

AMERICANS ARE WARNED TO GET OUT OF MEXICO AT ONCE; WAR HOURLY FEARED WITH CARRANZA

GEN. OBREGON DEMANDS THAT U. S. SOLDIERS LEAVE COUNTRY OR FIGHT—GUILTY OF TREACHERY.

WILSON CALLS OUT MILITIA OF THREE STATES

Funston and Scott to Stand Firm—Cabinet Approves Plans of War Department—Border Will Be Well Protected Against Invasion by New Troops, Baker Declares.

El Paso, May 9.—United States Consular representatives throughout Mexico are receiving official directions to urge that all American citizens leave that country with as little delay as possible, owing to the threatening situation between the United States and Mexico.

Washington, May 9.—Secretary of War Baker today issued the following statement:

"The outbreak in the Big Bend district of the Rio Grande has so far further emphasized the danger of similar offences along the Border, that the President has called out the militia of Arizona, New Mexico and Texas and directed them to report to General Funston, who will assign stations along the Border for patrol duty. In addition to that, two additional regiments of regular infantry have been directed to proceed to the Border, and such further arrangements will be made as are necessary for the complete security for the people of the United States against raids of this character."

Ask Report from Scott.

Washington, March 9.—Gen. H. L. Scott, Chief of Staff has been directed to report on the attitude of Gen. Obregon regarding the proposed protocol, and also as to the new punitive expedition. He has been requested to reply immediately, and it was stated at the War Department that this answer will be made public. The State Department would not confirm reports that its representatives are ordering all Americans out of Mexico. Ambassador-designate Arredondo, of Mexico, conferred with Secretary Lansing shortly after 10 a. h. The Cabinet planned a complete discussion of the Mexican situation.

Cabinet Approves Action.

Washington, May 9.—Secretary of State Lansing presented the latest developments in the Mexican situation for consideration at the Cabinet meeting today. The steps taken by the War Department to protect the Border were approved without reservation, pending a report from General Scott. Discussion of the negotiations with Obregon were postponed.

Stands by Big Army.

Washington, April 9.—Without a dissenting vote, the Senate today stood by its army of 250,000 men, and had the army reorganization bill sent back to conference.

Obregon's Ultimatum.

El Paso, Texas, May 9.—The Mexican de facto government has thrown the gauntlet down to the United States. General Alvaro Obregon, Mexican Minister of War, and Juan N. Amador, Sub-Secretary of Foreign Relations in General Carranza's Cabinet, told Major-General Hugh L. Scott and Major-General Frederick Funston yesterday afternoon that the presence of the American punitive expedition in Mexico no longer could be tolerated and that if Brigadier-General Pershing is not at once withdrawn, his forces would be attacked by government troops.

This is the end of six days of the conference and negotiations, during which General Obregon continually held out hope to the American officials that he could induce General Carranza to agree to a gradual withdrawal of the American troops. During this time, General Obregon has been distributing his armies to the best advantage and is now ready to strike. He practically admitted this to General Scott and General Funston in the former's private car in the yards of the El Paso and Southwestern Railroad at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Charged with trickery, General Obregon merely laughed and made some remarks about all things being fair in war.

When General Obregon left the conference he was asked, as a matter of form, to send the American Chief of Staff a written communication containing the ultimatum of his government. In effect it was that the Carranza government could no longer tolerate the presence of armed foreigners on its soil, and that the punitive expedition must at once and without conditions of any kind whatever withdraw from Mexico.

COUNCIL CONSIDERS REPORT ON SEWERS

Work is Progressing Satisfactorily According to G. W. Fuller, Engineer.

For the purpose of receiving and considering the report of George W. Fuller, engineer in charge of the sewer work in the borough, the North Plainfield Council met in executive session last night. The report, which was a voluminous one, covered practically everything in details up to the present time, showing that the work in the borough is progressing satisfactorily, and that 85 per cent of the trunk line sewer is completed.

The council discussed the report at some length. It will be made public in the near future. The members seemed to appear satisfied with the general progress of the work. The council adjourned to meet on Monday night, when the Somerset street commissioners will make their report. This has been delayed somewhat owing to the illness of Judge W. R. Codington, who represents some of the property owners.

DOUBLE INITIATION.

Greenbrook Council, No. 1725, Royal Arcanum, at its meeting tonight will have another double initiation. The Grand Lodge officers will attend tonight's session, and the regent and other officers urge all the members to be present. Representatives of the grand council will make reports, and there will be other interesting features at the meeting.

NEWARK GETS FUGITIVE.

Newark, May 9.—Rocco Di Gisso, 33, of 480 Lindon road, Flatbush, Brooklyn, was arrested here today as a fugitive from justice. He is wanted in Brooklyn for murder. Fortuno Grecco, of 514 Midwood avenue, Brooklyn, was shot to death at 458 Lefferts avenue on February 28.

REV. DR. BIEDERWOLF'S FATHER PASSES AWAY

Succumbs to a Long Illness at His Home in Monticello, Indiana.

Rev. Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, who is conducting a six weeks' evangelistic campaign here, received a telegram today that his father, Michael Biederwolf, died at 6 o'clock this morning at his home in Monticello, Indiana, following a long illness. There will be no interruption in the Tabernacle services. Dr. Biederwolf plans to attend the funeral, and he will leave here either tonight or tomorrow night at midnight, necessitating his being away for two evening services. In his absence Mrs. Marie Brake, a member of the party, will preach the sermons, and the other members of the party will assist as usual.

Mr. Biederwolf's death was not wholly unexpected. He was eighty-five years old and had been ill for the past seven or eight years. He was born in Germany, and for a number of years was engaged in business as a bridge builder in Pennsylvania. After removing to Monticello he entered the lumber business, which he continued until a few years ago. Realizing that his father was seriously ill, Dr. Biederwolf went home between the time of closing his meetings at Norristown and coming to Plainfield. Beside Dr. Biederwolf there survives one daughter and three sons.

WILL INSTALL CULVERT.

C. H. Stein, superintendent of the New Jersey Central, in a communication to Street Commissioner A. J. Gaett, of this city, states that the installation of an iron-covered culvert along East Fourth street, at the westerly driveway to the North avenue station, will be attended to at the earliest possible date. Mr. Stein calls attention to the fact that only recently has the weather been suitable for such work, and that there has been a scarcity of labor.

ITALIAN IS WANTED ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Frank Cisco, It is Alleged, Attacked Supt. Smith—Escapes From Auto.

Frank Cisco, an Italian laborer, is wanted by the borough police on a warrant charging atrocious assault sworn out by Herman Y. Smith, the superintendent of the construction work of the joint sewerage trunk line. Yesterday morning Cisco approached Superintendent Smith and asked for money which it is said was not due him. It is alleged that the Italian knocked him down with a blackjack. It is also reported that as Smith was lying on the ground that the Italian sprung upon him and attempted to stab him, but was pulled away by men who came to Smith's rescue.

Upon arising from the ground, Smith told the man that he would give him his money if he would accompany him to town in his machine. It was Smith's intention to bring the man to the borough jail and have him locked up. The fellow agreed and got in the machine, but after it had gone a little way he got wise and jumped out and disappeared.

WESTFIELD AUTOIST GIVEN A SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Arraigned before Borough Recorder Charles Sheelen last night on two complaints, one of auto speeding and the other of being on the wrong side of the road and causing an accident, Carlton Drumpelmann, a seventeen-year-old Westfield boy, was cleared of the first count and found guilty of the second, sentence being suspended. The charge of speeding was made by Marshal John Logan and the other complaint was made by Fanwood borough.

In the first complaint Logan tried to show that the boy had been reckless in approaching the corner of Martine and North avenues on Saturday, April 29.—Evidence brought out by Charles Springstead, of Westfield, attorney for the defendant, in his questioning of the other occupants of the car, attempted to show that Drumpelmann did not violate any ordinance or statute, and as a result the complaint was dismissed.

The second complaint was made as the result of the accident at South avenue and the Central crossing Fanwood, that occurred about an hour after Marshal Logan had charged Drumpelmann with speeding. In trying to avoid hitting William Bellerjeau, a four-year-old boy, as he turned from the crossing into South avenue, on his bicycle, Drumpelmann drove over to the wrong side of the road, but hit the lad anyway and injured him. The borough contended that if the Westfield youth had kept to the right side of the road road and hal not been going at an excessive speed he would not have caused the accident. However, is it was shown the boy tried to prevent the mishap, and had done what he could to rectify matters, Recorder Sheelen returned a verdict of guilty, but suspended sentence.

THE BACHELOR'S DREAM.

The members of the cast that will present a series of tableaux and a sketch entitled "The Bachelor's Dream," in the Fanwood firehouse, Saturday night, for the benefit of the Episcopal rectory fund, held a rehearsal in the firehouse last night.

The weekly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Episcopal church will be held tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Whitehead, in Scotch Plains.

Miss Maude Davis, of Montclair, has prepared an interesting talk for local young women at the World Wide Guild social in the Baptist church tonight. A silver collection will be taken.

George Jesperson, of Martine avenue, has discontinued his studies at the Westfield High School and accepted a position with the Anchor Iron Post Works in Garwood.

PLAN FOR ENTERTAINMENT.

Plans are being made for the holding of an entertainment in the Parish House a week from tonight under the auspices of the Sunday-school of the Methodist church.

The Rev. Raymod E. Marshal, pastor of the Methodist church, is attending a Methodist conference at Saratoga, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. George L'Heureux and daughter and son, of Brooklyn, are the first to register at the Homestead for the summer.

ANNOUNCE MARRIAGE OF MISS HELEN CLARK CRANE

Cards were received in this city today announcing the marriage of Miss Helen Clark Crane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Stout Crane, of Elizabeth, to Ralph Eugene Weber, of Haddonfield. The ceremony took place Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, North avenue and Salem road, Elizabeth, and was performed by the Rev. William Force Whitaker, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Following the wedding, a reception was held from 4 until 6 o'clock, at which there were in the receiving line, in addition to the bride and bridegroom, the maid of honor, Miss Cecilia B. Russum, and the parents of the bride, the parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Weber, of Waterville, N. Y.

After a brief wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. Weber will make their home at Haddonfield, convenient to Camden, where Mr. Weber is in business in charge of the Camden branch warehouses of the Concrete Steel Company, of which company he is also a director. Mr. Crane, the father of the bride, is the publisher of the Elizabeth Daily Journal.

RECEPTION FOR NEWLYWEDS.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Wier, of Netherwood, gave a delightful reception at their home last Saturday night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Irving F. DeMilt, who have just returned from their wedding trip. Mrs. DeMilt was formerly Miss Mary McCarthy, of Westfield. Guests were present from Fanwood, Westfield, Jersey City and Plainfield. Late in the evening, Mr. and Mrs. DeMilt left for Jersey City, where they will reside.

WILSON'S REPLY WARNS KAISER

Must Keep Pledge Despite Britain's Actions.

'RESPONSIBILITY IS SINGLE'

Note Contains Expressions of Friendliness, but is Warning That Diplomatic Relations Depend Solely on Elimination by Germany of Submarine Methods Complained Of.

Washington, May 9.—The following note has been sent to the American ambassador in Berlin with instructions to deliver it to the German minister of foreign affairs:

The note of the imperial German government under date of May 4, 1916, has received careful consideration by the government of the United States.

It is especially noted, as indicating the purpose of the imperial government as to the future, that it "is prepared to do its utmost to confine the operations of the war for the rest of its duration to the fighting forces of the belligerents" and that it is determined to impose upon all its commanders at sea the limitations of the recognized rules of international law upon which the government of the United States has insisted.

Throughout the months which have elapsed since the imperial government announced on Feb. 4, 1915, its submarine policy, now happily abandoned, the government of the United States has been constantly guided and restrained by motives of friendship in its patient efforts to bring to an amicable settlement the critical questions arising from that policy.

No Contingency Admitted.

Accepting the imperial government's declaration of its abandonment of the policy which has so seriously menaced the good relations between the two countries, the government of the United States will rely upon a scrupulous execution henceforth of the new altered policy of the imperial government, such as will remove the principal danger to an interruption of the good relations existing between the United States and Germany.

The government of the United States feels it necessary to state that it takes it for granted that the imperial German government does not intend to imply that the maintenance of its newly announced policy is in any way contingent upon the course of result of diplomatic negotiations between the government of the United States and any other belligerent government, notwithstanding the fact that certain passages in the imperial government's note of the 4th instant might appear to be susceptible of that construction.

In order, however, to avoid any misunderstanding, the government of the United States notifies the imperial government that it cannot for a moment entertain, much less discuss, a suggestion that respect by German naval authorities for the rights of citizens of the United States upon the high seas should in any way or in the slightest degree be made contingent upon the conduct of any other government affecting the rights of neutrals and noncombatants.

Responsibility in such matters is single, not joint; absolute, not relative.

LANSING.

Secretary Lansing issued the following statement explaining why the United States cannot discuss matters pertaining to the relations between this government and Great Britain with the imperial government:

"The greater part of the German answer is devoted to matters which this government cannot discuss with the German government. The only questions of right which can be discussed with that government are those arising out of its action or out of our own, and in no event those questions which are the subject of diplomatic exchanges between the United States and another country.

Says Germany Yields.

"The essence of the answer is that Germany yields to our representations with regard to the rights of merchant ships and noncombatants on the high seas and engages to observe the recognized rules of international law governing naval warfare in using her submarines against merchant ships.

"So long as she lives up to this altered policy we can have no reason to quarrel with her on that score, though the losses resulting from the violation of American rights by German submarine commanders operating under the former policy will have to be settled.

"While our differences with Great Britain cannot form a subject of discussion with Germany it should be stated that in our dealings with the British government we are acting as we are unquestionably bound to act in view of the explicit treaty engagements with that government. We have treaty obligations as to the manner in which matters in dispute between the two governments are to be handled.

"We offered to assume mutually similar obligations with Germany, but the offer was declined. When, however, the subject in dispute is a continuing menace to American lives it is doubtful whether such obligations apply unless the menace is removed during the pendency of the proceedings."

Bryan Peace Treaties.

Secretary Lansing's statement refers for the first time in the submarine negotiations to the "Bryan peace treaties" and indicates that even if such a treaty were in force with Germany now it could not well apply to the submarine issue unless Germany agreed to remove the "menace" while discussion was progressing.

So far as the president's basic demand that Germany immediately declare and effect an abandonment of its present methods of submarine warfare is concerned the Bryan treaty would, it is explained, be useless.

Weather Forecast.

Showers, followed by fair; fresh to strong west and northwest winds.

BABY WEEK

Do Your Part to Make It Successful

This is the children's century. The baby is the most important member of the family. He must be carefully tended, and above all, wisely fed if he is to grow to be a strong, healthy child.

Baby Week has been set aside to help mothers who want to give their babies the best possible start in life. Welfare organizations all over the country are interested in this movement for Better Babies. Do your part by making sure that your baby has pure, wholesome milk.

BORDEN'S GRADE A MILK

is clean, pure, rich milk. It is a nourishing food for the whole family. It is the finest blood making, body building, health giving food we have. It is the cheapest food. One quart of Borden's Grade "A" Milk is equal to eight eggs, or 12 ozs. lean beef, or two lbs. of chicken, or one pint of oysters.

So you see, Borden's Grade "A" Milk at 10 cents a quart is real economy.

Grade "A" Milk is pasteurized. It is clean and safe, rich and creamy.

Your baby should have the safest and cleanest milk you can buy, even though it cost a little more than ordinary milk. You are repaid by the reassuring sense of security that comes from having the best.

Finest Silks, 1.85 Yd.

On Monday their prices were $2, $2.50, $3, $3.85, $4.50, $5, $6.50, up to $12.50 yard.

Tomorrow, Wednesday, $1.85 yard, because the miscellaneous collection is composed of remnants. Enough in most of the pieces for a new fashioned dress or blouse.

Beautiful silks. Lovely taffetas, satin, heavy suiting pongee, shadow plaid crepe Georgette, printed crepe de chine, rich taffetas embroidered with silver or gold—black, colored and white silks—a little of this, that and the other thing.

Often only a piece of a kind, and naturally the finest grades will be picked out first.

Silk Rotunda, Main floor, Old Building.

Women's Glove Silk Underwear

337 Styles

Imagine being able to choose 337 new undergarments, each one different, each one loveliest of its kind.

We believe we have never seen prettier glove silk underwear than this. How fine is the embroidery, how dainty and foamy are the laces, how soft and satiny the ribbon, how good all the way through is the quality of the silk.

Fine camisoles that slip over the head or button, vests with strapped shoulders or bodice tops, knickerbockers well cut and reinforced, combination suits, and a really wondrous assortment of envelope chemises.

Some of the neck lines were designed especially to wear under low neck gowns. Some of the camisoles are silk net over glove silk with tiny sleeves so that they may be worn under sheer blouses. Faintly pink lace has even been used to trim some of the underbodices.

It is an assortment to marvel at. Whatever fashion of glove silk garment a woman could want is here.

Camisoles, plain, $1 and $1.50; lace trimmed, $1 to $4.

Vests, plain, $1.25 to $3; embroidered, $2 to $6.50; lace-trimmed, $2 to $5.

Knickerbockers, $1.75 to $5.

Envelope chemises, plain, $2.75 to $3.50; lace-trimmed, $2.50 to $4.50; embroidered, $3.75 and $4.50.

Combination suits, plain, $2.75 to $6.75; embroidered, $2.50 to $4.50; lace-trimmed, $4 to $9.

Young Women's Dresses--Irresistible

Suppose a sudden need for a new dress arises—a week-end in the country, a small dancing party, an afternoon of bridge.

Simple white crepe de chine sports dresses.

Georgette crepe frock in delicate pink or perhaps cool green and white.

Net dresses with satin bodices and perhaps a flower.

Dozens of little linen dresses made in coat fashion—sheer voile with beaded collars, pongee dresses with colored striped coatees.

Foulard dresses, and simple Georgette crepes for afternoon or street wear.

Moire sports dresses of silk jersey.

Sizes 14 to 20 years.

Second floor, Old Building.

19,300 Yards Pure Flax Dress Linens

Irish, French or Belgian weaves, 40 to 75c yard. Purchased before the scarcity of linens.

Dyed with old safe dyes—In cadet blue, pink heliotrope, rose, green, brown leather, gold, Quaker gray, navy blue, coral, black. Also natural color and white.

Suitable for every summer dress and suit need. For children's frocks, too.

SPECIALS — Natural color cossack linen, 45c yard; white granite linen, very serviceable, 65c yard.

Dress Fabrics Salons, First floor, Old Building.

30,000 White Sale Handkerchiefs

Three large lots just off the steamers. A prize collection for the second week of the White Sale.

Our commissioner secured them in Ireland a couple of months ago—the ends of Irish manufacturers' lines and therefore priced extremely low when compared with last year's rates.

All are all linen. Worthy to be compared with any Wanamaker all-linen handkerchief in our stock.

$1.35 dozen, men's and women's pure linen hemstitched handkerchiefs.

$1.20 dozen, women's initialed handkerchiefs in great variety of styles.

$1.80 dozen, women's embroidered handkerchiefs, a marvelous collection in colors and white, the majority our 25c apiece quality, many hand-worked.

60c dozen, boys' linen handkerchiefs of splendid quality.

They are here at these prices simply because the manufacturers cannot make them at or near these rates.

THE FORUM

Plainfield, N. J., May 9, 1916.
Editor, Plainfield Daily Press::

To criticise is the privilege of everyone, but unjust criticism by one who is not familiar with the person or thing criticised is abhorrent to every fair-minded and just individual. In your issue of the third instant appears a communication which for injustice, ingratitude and ignorance of facts, caps the climax.

I am distressed to know that Plainfield has among its citizens anyone who would not be ashamed to entertain such sentiments, much less to express them. You have very effectually disposed of this "deeply interested taxpayer" in your editorial, for which I thank you. I cannot, however, allow this communication, which attempts to detract from the splendid reputation and record of our Mayor, to pass without notice.

Mayor Calkins needs no defense by me nor anyone else. His record speaks for him. He has served the people of this city for the past three years, as Councilman and Mayor, with signal ability, unequaled energy and entirely unselfish motives. He has given his city services which cannot be measured in dollars and cents. As a reward for all of this comes a thankless individual, who tries to reflect upon his honor and integrity by saying he has no interest in the taxpayers of his city. Such is life. The man who does things never receives credit from some people until he is dead. I would like to say to the writer of the communication referred to that if there is any blame attached to anyone for the purchase of the City Hall lot, it is not to Mayor Calkins alone. This lot was purchased with the unanimous approval of the eleven members of the Common Council and the Mayor. All of these gentlemen were duly elected by their fellow-citizens to serve them, and all acted as their best judgment dictated. This purchase was also heartily approved by the corporation counsel. I believe a great many of these gentlemen pay equally as much tax and are as much interested, financially and otherwise, in this city as is your correspondent. I also believe that each of them is fully as capable of judging real estate values in Plainfield as is this "Great Daniel" who sits in judgment upon the qualifications of one of the best Mayors Plainfield has ever had. I had the honor of working with our Mayor for two years, and can say to the people of Plainfield that never in my life have I seen a man who has done more hard work or better work for his constituents than has Mayor Calkins. If your correspondent had been with him during the one hundred and fifty-five nights which he spent in the service of the city in the past year (from 8 o'clock often until the midnight hour), I know that he would thank him for what he has done for Plainfield and manfully ask the Mayor's forgiveness for the unkind and unjust criticisms he has heaped upon him.

I am of an opposite political faith from Mayor Calkins, but simple justice demands that I should give credit to whom credit is due. I am, therefore, writing you this letter.

I desire, as a taxpayer, to thank Mayor Calkins for the splendid service he has rendered our city, and to say to him that I trust that he will be spared to us for many years to come.

Very truly yours,
RICHARD A. CLAYBROOK,
804 Grant Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:

Referring to your editorial in yesterday's issue, I beg to state that the ambulance was not travelling at a rapid pace when the accident of last Friday occurred. The driver of the ambulance, in approaching Park avenue, duly sounded his horn, which is a large Klaxon of a special ambulance type. Had he been on the proper lookout for approaching vehicles, the collision would not have occurred.

There has been some question as to the advisability of having a gong upon the ambulance. It has been hoped that it would be satisfactorily demonstrated that the ambulance could be properly operated without one. The committee in charge of the matter, however, at a meeting held over a week ago, instructed the superintendent to have an electric chime placed upon the ambulance, and it is expected that within the next few days the ambulance will be equipped therewith.

Very truly yours,
EDW. H. LADD, JR.,

BRITAIN KILLS FOUR MORE IRISH REBELS

Twelve Leaders Have Paid the Death Penalty.

London, May 9.—An official statement announced that four more Irish rebels—Cornelius Colbert, Edmund Kent, Michael Mallon and J. J. Houston—had been shot. Twelve Irish leaders have now paid the death penalty.

The men shot were prominent in the rebellion, according to the official statement.

The death sentence of James O'Sullivan has been commuted to eight years' imprisonment and those of Vincent Poole and William P. Corrigan to five years.

Information tending to show that Irishmen in the United States contributed largely to the fund which made possible the equipment of the rebels is now in the hands of the British secret authorities.

Nothing from an official source could be learned, but it was not denied that the arrest of Count and Countess Plunkett, whose three sons were convicted of treason and sentenced to death, are involved in the collection of the money. It is known here that Lady Plunkett recently made a trip to the United States. Joseph Plunkett was shot, but his two brothers, John and George, had their sentences commuted to ten years' penal servitude.

The American embassy received a letter from James Mark Sullivan, former United States minister to Santo Domingo, stating that he had been released from Dublin castle, where he had been held on suspicion of connection with the rebellion.

John MacNeill, president of the Sinn Fein volunteers, has been arrested. MacNeill disappeared on the day on which the rebellion started.

'PLAINFIELD DAY' AT INDUSTRIAL EXHIBIT

Local Merchants Plan to Visit Jersey City During Week of June 5-10.

Plans are being perfected for a Plainfield visiting day at the Jersey City industrial exhibition from June 5 to 10, by the Plainfield Board of Trade, on behalf of the retail merchants, many of whom handle Jersey City-made goods. During the course of Jersey City's industrial display, which differs from other exhibitions of a similar character in the essential detail that the exhibits are shown in the city's retail stores instead of being grouped in any central building, a number of the large manufacturers have agreed to open their buildings to out-of-town delegations.

Co-operating with the Jersey City Chamber of Commerce, the Plainfield business organization is arranging a visiting date during the exposition when a group of Plainfield people can visit Jersey City and inspect a number of the larger factories. According to the program arranged, the out-of-town visitors will go directly to the Jersey City Chamber of Commerce rooms, where they will register and receive a visitor's card entitling them to admission to a number of plants.

The Jersey City Chamber of Commerce is also making arrangements with restaurant proprietors for serving a mid-day luncheon to the out-of-town guests. Local retail merchants, who sell Jersey City-made goods, are taking a keen interest in the visiting trip, and they will lend their co-operation in interesting their customers in making the excursion.

A preliminary meeting at which more detailed information relative to the trip, together with a complete list of the Jersey City concerns open to visitors will be forthcoming, is to be held in the Board of Trade rooms within a short time. A representative of the Jersey City Chamber of Commerce will attend this meeting, and Plainfield people who would be interested in this holiday are urged to attend.

BUILDING PERMITS FOR THE PAST WEEK

Eight Applications Passed by Inspector Doane Represent a Value of $4,958.

Eight permits, with a total estimated value of $4,958, represents the sum total of building applications passed upon by Inspector T. O. Doane during the past week. The permits call for the erection of one dwelling, four garages, two alteration jobs and the installation of one tank for the storage of volatile liquids. From the beginning of the year to the first of the present month the value of permits granted aggregated $313,746, and with the addition of this week's the total to date is $318,704. A detailed account of the week's permits follows:

The largest permit of the past week was issued to E. J. Johnston for the erection of a dwelling at 62 Webster place at a cost of $2,850. It is to be a one-family house, of frame construction, two and a half stories high, and is to measure 26 by 30 feet. It will have six rooms, den on the second floor, and a large reception hall on the first floor. A steam heating system is to be installed. William H. Clum is the architect, Cunniff Brothers the mason contractors and Charles Bicknell will care for the carpentry work.

Harry H. Pond is to erect a 21 by 25 foot frame garage at a cost of $1,200 at 924 Madison avenue. C. B. Northrup is the architect, Leland Manning the mason contractor and James C. Manning the carpenter contractor.

John Miles will erect at 223 Manson place a 4 by 21 foot two-story frame extension to the dwelling at that place. The improvements will cost $300. J. W. Mundy will do the mason work, and H. H. Hoffman has the carpenter contract.

Thomas Brown is to alter the house at 340 Bergen street by erecting a 3 by 13 foot extension to the side, at a cost of $300. Leland Manning has the mason contract and A. J. Rodier the carpenter contract.

Mrs. M. Coward is to erect a 12 by 18 foot frame garage at 75 Sandford avenue at a cost of $150. Samuel M. Titus, of Dunellen, has the contract.

Luther H. Clark is to erect a 22 by 24 foot frame garage at 1090 Arlington avenue at a cost of $100.

George M. Clark will install a sixty gallon tank for the storage of volatile liquids at 934 Park avenue at a cost of $46.

In last week's report of permits passed by Inspector Doane, two were omitted that were received by Chief Doane on Saturday. One was for a new home to be erected by O. W. Smith on Prescott Hill, Netherwood at a cost of $12,000, and a four-family apartment to be erected on the property facing West Sixth street at a cost of $5,200, Mrs. Rosel Frucht being the owner and applicant.

FAY AND TWO MATES GUILTY IN SHIP PLOT

Germans Convicted of Designs Against Freighters.

New York, May 9.—Lieutenant Robert Fay, a German army officer; Walter Scholz, his brother-in-law, and Paul Daeche, German reservists, were pronounced guilty by a jury before Judge Howe in the criminal branch of the federal circuit court on two indictments accusing them of plotting to blow up munition carrying ships by means of high explosive mines attached to the rudders of the vessels. The total punishment that under the law can be inflicted on each of the convicted men is twelve years' imprisonment and $20,000 fine.

The jury found Fay guilty on the first ballot, Scholz on the second ballot, after having read to them the confessions made by the three men after their arrest, and Daeche on the sixth ballot, after a long argument. The jurors stood six to six on Daeche on the first ballot, and after various votes the men who stood out for acquittal yielded to the majority on an agreement that mercy in his behalf should be urged.

Sensational developments are expected in the case. Fay twice during the trial sought interviews with William J. Flynn, chief of the secret service. As Fay offered once before to tell a story to the federal authorities, it is regarded as possible that he may be willing to talk freely now in the hope of getting a lighter punishment.

The jurors regarded Fay as an extremely clever man, and he may yet figure in a more startling light in connection with plans to hinder the shipment of munitions to the allies. The three convicted men all admitted that they regarded it a shame that this country should be making war supplies for the allies.

WHEAT CROP IS HARD HIT.

Heavy Abandonment of Western Acreage Is Reported.

Washington, May 9.—A feeling of discouragement was evident in a statement of the bureau of crop estimates regarding the winter wheat crop. Acreage abandonment was heavy, the statement said, the heaviest being in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri. The abandonment ranges from 18 per cent in Ohio and Iowa to 33 per cent in Illinois.

Sleet and snowstorms, followed by severe weather, a cold, dry spring and generally unfavorable conditions caused a decrease in the prospective crop.

BORAH ATTACKS WILSON.

Says Mexican Policy Brings Disrespect Upon United States.

Washington, May 9.—Senator Borah, member of the foreign relations committee and an aggressive Republican of the progressive type, arraigned the administration of President Wilson for its Mexican policy, which the senator characterized as "humiliating."

History, the senator said, would not furnish a parallel for the story of national humiliation imposed on the United States by the president's failure to protect American lives in Mexico and particularly because of the repeated loss of life due to raids.

Lamar Asks a Rehearing.

Washington, May 9.—David Lamar, whose sentence of two years in the Atlanta penitentiary for impersonating Former Representative A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania was recently affirmed by the supreme court of the United States, has asked for a rehearing.

Coral From Italy.

Much of the costly red, white and pink coral used for ornamental purposes is obtained from the coast of Italy. Men go out in boats and drag the rocky botttom of streams with wooden frames or nets, in which the coral becomes entangled, but the delicate branches are crushed in this way. The finest coral is obtained by diving.

BOY SCOUTS PLAN TO ATTEND REVIVAL

Will March in a Body to the Tabernacle—Summer Program is Discussed.

Plans were completed at the regular meeting of the Boy Scout Council last night for a full attendance of that body in line with the Boy Scouts Friday evening when they attend the big Tabernacle meeting. The Scouts and the administrative body of the movement will meet at the First Baptist church at 7 o'clock and march in a body to the auditorium.

It was the biggest meeting of the Scout Council that has been held in some time. Members present were President Theodore G. Davis, Lindsey Best, Frederick M. Genung, Edward Harding, Dr. George T. Moore, Deputy Commissioners E. A. Sprowl, F. E. Bach and A. Russell Bond and Scoutmasters Ernest K. Powlison, Theodore Gavett, Benjamin Harris, William H. Olmsted, William F. Richards, E. F. Barker and former Commissioner Allen E. Beals, who was appointed field secretary, having resigned from the office of scout executive, pending the illness of Brokholst K. Miller, secretary of the council. After the council meeting, there was a scoutmasters' conference, at which various methods of developing scout work in troops were discussed.

Edward Harding, chairman of the camp committee and of the finance committee of council, reported on the progress being made in the matter of arranging for a special summer program under a regular camp master at the Boy Scout camp this summer, and a report was presented for Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., regarding the progress of the scout work in this city.

A new set of rules was adopted governing application of scouts for examination and promotion. These rules have been transmitted to scoutmasters who have read them to their troops. It was reported that, through the kindness of Sergeant Littell, a series of marching drills have been arranged in anticipation of the annual parade on Memorial Day, when the scouts escort the members of the Grand Army to the two cemeteries. The Scouts of Troops 8, 9 and 14 have their first massed drill tonight at 7:30, and next Tuesday, Troops 12, 13 and others will be drilled.

Owing to the inability of representatives of the Dunellen Council to be present last night, the matter of merging the two councils was deferred until the next meeting. A resolution was adopted approving the general observance of "Be Kind" week, in conjunction with the scout body all over the world. It is observed by all scouts performing two or more instead of at least "A good turn daily."

A special meeting of the camp committee will be held at the home of President Davis, in Irving place, Thursday evening.

MRS. PHILLIP SUFFERN CHOSEN PRESIDENT

Woman's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. in Annual Session Elects Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. held at 10 o'clock this morning in the Y. M. C. A. building, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Philip Suffern; first vice president, Mrs. James E. Kimball; second vice president, Mrs. T. F. Hylan; third vice president, Mrs. Carman Parse; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Samuel Case; recording secretary, Mrs. H. C. Krebs; treasurer, Miss Edith B. Little. Reports submitted by the various officers were all encouraging and showed the auxiliary doing excellent work. The treasurer's report showed a balance in the treasury of $300.92.

At present the auxiliary has a membership of 288 women, all co-operating with each other and assisting the members of the Y. M. C. A. in practically all their undertakings. The many suppers given during the year for various classes in the building have always been prepared by the women's auxiliary. During the meeting this morning the National Quartet of the Biederwolf evangelistic party rendered vocal selections in a pleasing manner. A rising vote of thanks was given them in conclusion.

MISS MASARYK ALIVE.

Message From Vienna Given Out by Professor Muensterberg.

Boston, May 9.—In view of the interest that has been demonstrated in the fate of Miss Alice Masaryk, an Austrian school teacher reported under arrest in Vienna on a charge of treason, Professor Hugo Muensterberg of Harvard made public the following message received by the Austrian embassy from the home office:

"Preliminary trial against Alice Masaryk is pending. All rumors without foundation."

Professor Muensterberg added that according to the procedure of the Austrian courts a preliminary trial has only the character of an investigation. "Hence," he said, "it may be that the offense of which she is suspected is not of a specially serious nature."

E. Beadnell, formerly of the steamship Baltic, of the same line. Her crew ordinarily consisted of 165 men.

New Army at Verdun.

Paris, May 9.—French war statement:

German troops are still smashing away at the French positions at Hill No. 304, northwest of Verdun. The official communique issued by the French War Office today states that after a further bombardment of great violence, great forces were again flung against the French trenches this morning, but the attack was completely repulsed. During the night the French delivered counter-attacks north of Houamont farm, which ejected the Germans from trenches they have recently captured. Houamont farm is southwest of Fort Douaumont on the front northeast of Verdun. To the east of the Meuse an artillery duel of extreme intensity took place all night on the Douaumont-Vaux line.

Spinning Strike Threatened.

London, May 9.—Notices will be given to employes next week that nearly ninety-seven per cent. of the members of the Operative Spinners Association have voted in favor of a strike for an advance in wages. If the masters stand out, the Committee on Production is expected to intervene this week, or at any rate before notices expire.

BRITISH BUILDING ZEPPELINS

Constructing German Type of Aircraft, Commons Hears.

London, May 9.—Airships resembling Zeppelins in structure are being built in England, according to a statement made in the house of commons by Thomas James MacNamara, financial secretary of the admiralty. Mr. MacNamara, replying to a question by a member, said that he could not state how many of the new type of aircraft England possessed, as it was not to the public interest to reveal this information.

Mr. MacNamara stated in reply to a question that he could not mention the number of submarines put out of action by the British navy.

FUNERAL OF JOHN G. ECKHARDT

The funeral of John G. Eckhardt, whose death occurred Saturday night after a long illness, was held this afternoon at the home of his son-in-law, Charles Schwartz, of Walnut street, the borough. The service was conducted by Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, and was attended by relatives and friends from this city, New York and other places. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

AMBULANCE GONG HAS BEEN ORDERED

Intermittent Chime Will Soon Be Put on Muhlenberg Vehicle.

A handsome chime, or intermittent gong, has been ordered for the Muhlenberg Hospital ambulance and will be put on the vehicle as soon as it arrives in Plainfield. This announcement comes from a member of the board of governors, who refuses to give for publication the name of the donor of the gong. For some time, or since the new ambulance was put into commission in Plainfield, the governors have been alive to the need of a gong, but have waited until a good one could be purchased. The accident of last Friday night in which the ambulance figured was not serious but served to point out the need of a distinctive warning signal of some kind, and within a short time Plainfield people will be able to hear the ambulance coming when it is yet blocks away.

SPECIAL AID WORK IS TAKEN UP HERE

Local Women Organize Branch Society—Officers and Directors Named.

The Plainfield and North Plainfield National Special Aid Society was founded this morning at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. Edward Frasier, 1003 Park avenue, when more than seventy-five interested in the work were present. Officers of the society were elected as follows: Chairman, Mrs. Frederick Goddard; vice chairman, Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite; secretary, Mrs. James M. Charles; treasurer, Mrs. William B. Tyler. The directors elected follow: Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. Frederick J. Hughes, Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, Mrs. Edward Frasier, Mrs. Frederick Wallace, Mrs. C. G. Munro, Mrs. Arthur L. Otterson, Mrs. Charles R. Banks, Mrs. Charles Frost and officers of the society.

An interesting talk was given by Miss Isabelle Hardie, chairman of the Red Cross work in New York city. Enough members were enrolled this morning to begin at once the following classes, Red Cross and first aid, rifle, home economics, sewing, cutting and knitting and scientific gardening. The Red Cross and first aid class will begin within a few days at Muhlenberg Hospital.

IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

W. deLa R. Anderson Chosen President to Succeed Francis E. Bodin.

Officers were elected and encouraging reports presented at the annual meeting of the Improvement Society of North Plainfield Township held at Watchung last night. There was a full attendance of members and all took an active part in the meeting.

William de La R. Anderson was elected president to succeed Francis E. Bodin, retired, and Mrs. Charles C. Wheeler was elected vice president and Charles C. Wheeler secretary in place of Edward T. Canning, retired. After the election Mr. Anderson was escorted to the chair by Mrs. George Mobus and Dr. Richard Moldenke.

The new president reviewed the excellent work of the society for the past six years and reviewed its accomplishments. He pointed out that it was not only the community, but each individual that benefits from such an organization.

Outlining the policy of the society, Mr. Anderson said that in the future more attention would be paid to entertainments with the idea of holding the interest of the young people who are to be the future citizens of Watchung.

Announcement was made that the annual Indian show would be given at Watchung on June 9 and 10, and Mr. Anderson urged the various committees to co-operate in making the production this year better than preceding ones. The dress rehearsal will be held Monday evening, May 15, when everyone who is to participate in the open-air play is urged to be present in costume. Mr. Anderson also announced that the "Boola Boola Boys," who appeared in "The Mystic Rose," would sing in the Indian play. He is writing the words and Edward Spier is composing the music.

FORMER LOCAL MAN DIES.

Louis C. Teller, a former well known resident of this city, died suddenly Sunday at the home of his son, Daniel W. Teller, of 615 Valley road, Montclair. Heart disease was the cause. Mr. Teller was sixty years old and beside his son is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Hiram Humes and Mrs. Theodore Marsh, both of Hartford, Conn. While in Plainfield, Mr. Teller was employed by local firms as a painter.

BROKE SCHOOL WINDOWS.

Ed. Dandridge, a seventeen-year-old colored boy, was fined $3 in police court yesterday morning on a charge of disorderly conduct. It was charged that he had been breaking windows in a local school building, and because of his age, Judge De Meza assessed a fine.

ELKS TO ENTERTAIN 'MYSTIC ROSE' CAST

Dance and Luncheon for Grownups and Special Entertainment for Children.

The Plainfield Lodge of Elks, through the committee which had charge of "The Mystic Rose," the comic opera given in the Plainfield Theatre last week, and which made such a tremendous hit with three large audiences, have arranged to show their appreciation to those who assisted in making the opera such a great success by appearing in the cast. Invitations have been issued to the grownups for an informal dance and luncheon to be given on Thursday night of this week at the Elks' home. Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Skilling, under whose direction "The Mystic Rose" was put on, have promised to be present and it is expected that every member of the cast will attend.

Arrangements have been made with Manager Shannon, of the Plainfield Theatre, to entertain all the little girls who appeared in the wonderful "Flower and Butterfly" ballet, which made such a great hit with the public, next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Manager Shannon has very kindly combined with the committee in arranging a show for the little people which will surely please them. While the regular performance for the public will be the same as usual, several numbers appealing especially to the children will be added, including a Charlie Chaplin picture.

No child will be admitted without a ticket, but every girl who appeared in the show can get a ticket by calling at the Elks' home on Thursday or Friday afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock. The committee requests every little girl who appeared in the show to tell as many other children about the arrangements as possible, as it is the wish of the committee to see that every child be notified in time to secure a ticket. While the committee has all the names of those who appeared in the ballet, only a few addresses were taken, consequently tickets cannot be sent to the children.

Manager Shannon has arranged to reserve a portion of the theatre for the use of the children and the women who chaperoned the children during the rehearsals will be on hand to see that their welfare is well looked after.

COUNCIL NOT READY TO REPORT ON LYLE MATTER

A conference of the Plainfield Common Council was held last night for the purpose of considering the report of the Fire Committee on the Lyle investigation, but no action was taken. It was said this morning that councilmen discussed the recent investigation at length but failed to agree on a report.

LOCAL PEOPLE BEFORE COMMISSIONER DILL

Three Plainfield cases were up before Commissioner of Motor Vehicles William L. Dill in Newark yesterday.

For driving a truck thirty-two miles an hour at a road crossing South avenue, in the Fanwood section, Louis Vininger, of 409 Washington street, Newark, was warned. Fred E. Lampe, of 225 East Second street, Plainfield, was fined $20.65 for driving without a license. A fine of $7.50 was imposed upon Eugene Spencer, of 129 Grove street, Plainfield, for the misuse of manufacturers' numbers.

THREATENED NEIGHBOR'S LIFE, SENT TO ASYLUM

Ella Hedgeman, colored, was this morning committed to Morris Plains by Judge De Meza. The woman has annoyed those near her home at 617 West Fourth street for weeks and was recently arraigned in court on a charge of disorderly conduct. She promised to move out of the neighborhood, but yesterday Benjamin Perkins again asked for her arrest. The woman has threatened to take his life and that of his wife, he said, and it was deemed best to put her in an institution where she could be cared for.

Watchung.

The pupils of the Watchung public school are rehearsing for the play, "Alice in Wonderland," which is to be given on Monday evening, May 29. The entertainment is to be given to procure new song books for assembly use.

Theodore Luerssen, Jr., will conduct the Junior Christian Endeavor meeting Friday afternoon. His topic will be "Learning to Pray."

A large number of the congregation of the Wilson Memorial church went to the graduation exercises at the Princeton Theological Seminary today, at which time Rev. Mebane Ramsey, the present pastor, finishes his course at this institution. Mr. Ramsay has been honored with a fellowship.

CARD PARTY AND DANCE.

St. Mary's Social Club have made final arrangements for their card party and dance, to be held this evening in T. A. B. S. Hall. Games start promptly at 8:30. The affair promises to be a large success. Music for the dancing will be furnished by Squier's orchestra.

GIVEN SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

Albert Cook, colored, of 340 East Third street, was arraigned in court this morning on a charge of disorderly conduct made by his wife. He was given a suspended sentence by Judge De Meza on his promise to be good.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre or, when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart color and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

USELESS SACRIFICE OF AMERICANS.

Again American dignity has been outraged by ragged Mexican bandits, and we are powerless. When a force of outlaws numbering between 250 and 300 raided Glenn Springs, Texas, they found a "garrison" of nine United States soldiers, and four able-bodied male civilians there to resist robbery and murder. Three of the soldiers were killed, one boy lost his life, and the two civilians captured by the bandits were reported killed later. All sacrificed their lives to a stubborn and idiotic policy on the part of President Wilson and those around him in Washington. Mr. Wilson knows, as every other sane man knows, that the punitive expedition into Mexico is a needlessly heroic sacrifice of American manhood, and that the so-called protection of the American border is but a silly pretense at upholding the dignity of the Stars and Stripes. To capture Villa, or to accomplish any other object in Mexico, will require many more troops than this great country can produce without calling for volunteers. One word from the President and thousands, or hundreds of thousands, of men would offer service under the flag, and yet there prevails a Bryanistic opinion in Washington that the U. S. army "can whip the world." It has been shown conclusively that the United States army cannot even defend a single State against the spasmodic and cowardly invasion of a band of bandits. We are all for peace, but there is something greater—and that something is represented by the Star Spangled Banner.

• • • • • •

While the pacifists are quoting from various men whose names went down into history as a result of the terrible war between States, let real Americans listen to words from he who once saved the Union —U. S. Grant:

"To maintain peace in the future it is necessary to be prepared for war. There can scarcely be a possible chance of a conflict, such as the last one, occurring among our own people again; but, growing as we are in population, wealth and military power, we may become the envy of nations which led us in all these particulars only a few years ago; and unless we are prepared for it we may be in danger of a combined movement being some day made to crush us out.

"We should have a good navy, and our sea coast defenses should be put in the finest possible condition. Neither of these costs much when it is considered where the money goes, and what we get in return."

• • • • • •

Germany's answer to the United States ultimatum has been accepted as satisfactory, according to Washington report of yesterday, yet the government refuses to accept the suggestions, or conditions, that this country demand observance of international laws on the part of the Allies, especially Great Britain. Germany must come into court with clean hands, yet there is justice in her demands. Between Americans' lives and Americans' rights President Wilson has made a distinction, justly demanding that murder cease first. He will, it is hoped, later deal just as firmly with England.

• • • • • •

Maybe William R. Townsend will refuse to believe it, but there is at least one man in the city of Plainfield who has a conscience concerning taxes. Yesterday the Treasury Department in Washington received a plain envelope mailed from Plainfield that contained $1,400 and a slip of white paper with the words "Conscience Fund." No attempt will be made by the department to ascertain the source of the money, it being enough to receive it, but whoever he is, may he sleep better now.

A Methodist pastor in Washington, N. J., Sunday evening read a list of those who signed license applications for saloons in his city. Five of them were members of his own church, and all were promptly expelled. Fourteen were Presbyterians, and one was a Baptist. The Rev. George Fountain is to be congratulated on his courage. He is preaching a militant Christianity that will not smile at hypocrites, and Washington should support him in his determined stand. But will it?

• • • • • •

Whatever may be said of the Hon. George L. Record, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor of New Jersey, he has a good platform. "I shall make my campaign in this State upon the proposition that we drive out of politics the Public Service Corporation and the great brewing interests of the State," says Mr. Record. That would be a record of which any man could be proud.

Plainfield seems to be drawing many new manufacturing plants, which is the strongest possible indication of the advantages offered to new citizens. When a manufacturer selects a location he considers many things, including tax rates, municipal efficiency, stability of government, railroad facilities, and attractions for the workingman who is to become a householder.

• • • • • •

Richmond P. Hobson, who won distinction in the Spanish-American war and lost it when he ran against Oscar Underwood in Alabama, says that America can never be properly prepared until all the saloons are closed. From present conditions it looks like it is going to take a lot of "Dutch-courage" to persuade America to prepare.

Dr. Biederwolf believes that the second coming of Christ is not far off, principally because of the unrest among the Jews. If he had seen the unrest that one of our acquaintance exhibited the other day when presented with a taxicab bill, the good doctor would have begun measuring his head for a halo.

• • • • • •

Dr. Biederwolf continues to receive letters telling him that Plainfield is the "worst town in all the world for gossips," and urging him to preach a sermon on this sin. He may, but if all the guilty hide it will be to empty air.

The Iceman.

Of all the animals that roam
Upon the earth and call it "home,"
Or revel in the ocean's foam,
I'd rather be the iceman.
The desert lion reigns supreme,
At scarin' folks he's one whole team,
But still, this is no idle dream,
I'd rather be the iceman.

He backs his wagon to our door,
About the sleepy hour of four;
Lets out a yell an' then some more,
This energetic iceman.
There comes a rumble, then a whack,
As something heavy hits our shack,
And sends a cold shiver up our back—
A good aim has our iceman.

He is a monarch in a way,
Of all the things he can survey;
He is a king who's come to stay—
The high and mighty iceman.
It matters not where he may go,
For just one summer time or so,
I'd like to be the iceman.

From a welfare report:

We found Mrs. Bonham a pleasant little woman whose husband had earned her pretty new sewing machine by chewing tobacco. I reckon you think that is a mighy funny method of earning anything, but some tobacco has tags which are redeemable, and the machine was one of the premiums. Mrs. Bonham just beamed with pride as she rolled out her machine. "I never had a machine before," she explained. "I just went to the neighbors when I had to sew. So, of course, I wanted a machine awfully bad. So Frank just chawed and chawed, and I saved every tag till we got enough, and last year we got the machine. Frank is chawin' out a clock now; but that won't take him so long as the machine did."

From Our Champ Liar.

Here is some economy in the use of fuel. One of our townsmen had a chunk of wood that he burned for three winters. This is how he did it. He had a large stove with a powerful draft, and he would place the chunk therein at bedtime and owing to the very strong upward pressure of hot air the wood was forced up through the pipe and chimney and would then roll down the incline of the roof and land on the ground, only to be picked up and used again the next night. Very simple you see.

Bucolic Bliss.

Oh, how my yearning heart inclines
To trim the trailing radish vines,
And hoe the prunes that pleasures bring
To all who garden in the spring.

How eagerly each morn I rush
To view the pretty cabbage bush,
And pluck fair blossoms on the lea
From branches of the turnip tree.

Oh, how I do await a chance
To hoe the lovely olive plants,
And pick potatoes from the vines,
And dig in my crabapple mines.

- Proctor's Theatre -

The management of Proctor's were well repaid for their trouble and the enormous expense they went to yesterday in presenting Charlie Chaplin and Mary Pickford on the same program, for never before has that popular playhouse accommodated such a vast crowd of theatre-goers. The spacious auditorium was taxed to its utmost capacity throughout the entire afternoon and evening, and many were the praises bestowed upon the management by the enthusiastic patrons for providing them so wonderful an entertainment. Today Charlie Chaplin will continue to provoke storms of laughter in his mammoth four-reel burlesque on "Carmen." Dorothy Gish and Owen Moore (Mary Pickford's husband) will co-star in a delightful Triangle play dealing with the quaint life and customs of the Pennsylvania Dutch, entitled "Little Meena's Romance." An uproarious Keystone comedy will be provided called "His Last Laugh," and the tenth episode of "Mary Page," will also be shown. Wednesday marks the introduction of Bertha Kalich, the distinguished emotional star, as a screen actress, her first motion picture vehicle being a strong dramatic Fox feature entitled "Slander," which is presented in six massive parts. Charlie Chaplin will also appear for the last time Wednesday at Proctor's in "Carmen," and the eleventh episode of "The Iron Claw" will also be presented. On Thursday William S. Hart, the famous Western character man of the Triangle Company, will appear at the head of a wonderful cast of talented stars in "The Aryan," which tells the suffering endured by the pioneers of the West in the days when the advance guard of civilization traveled by mule and ox teams in great winding wagon-trains. In this latest Triangle play Hart more than lives up to the reputation he has made in his other successes—"Hell's Hinges," "Between Men," and "The Disciple." In addition to other features on Thursday Chester Conklin, the funny Keystoneite, will be seen in one of his typical comedy creations entitled "Bucking Society." A coming feature that will attract much attention and cause a sensation among local film fans is the announcement that in the very near future the management of Proctor's have arranged for a Mary Pickford Week, at which time they will present this talented star in a different one of her greatest successes each day throughout the week.

--Astor Theatre--

Stars in moving pictures have done many weird and unusual things performed wild and desperate stunts innumerable, and provided sensations untold at the behest of the director, but Tyrone Power, who will be seen at the Astor Theatre today in the Bluebird photoplay, "John Needham's Double," is believed to be the first camera-actor who has given himself poison, exchanged clothing with his own corpse and then walked away from the scene, leaving himself lying dead upon the floor. Reads queer; but it is a fact. The photoplay of "John Needham's Double" derives its name from the assumption that there is a distant cousin of Needham's, by name Joseph Norbury, whom, upon shaving off his moustache, came to resemble Needham so closely that the two men could not be distinguished apart. E. S. Willard brought the play to America many years ago, and it has remained for Bluebird photoplays to translate it to motion pictures through the scenario provided by Olga Printzlau.

After a long reign as one of the world's greatest stars of the stage, the celebrated Anna Held has gone into motion pictures, and will be presented for the first time upon the screen by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company on the Paramount program in "Madame la Presidente." This extraordinary production is the attraction at the Astor Theatre tomorrow. Aside from the $25,000 Oliver Morosco is reported to have paid Miss Held for the single picture, the private car he chartered to convey her to his Pacific coast studios, and the villa he provided in fashionable Pasadena, an even more domestic interest attaches to this picture. It now develops that the fat old comedian who appears as the waiter in the spirited cafe scenes in the Hotel Boulonge is none other than Max, her private chef, whom Miss Held always carries in her entourage when she leaves her beloved Paris. And the pretty little maid who sits on her right at the table in the cafe is Lianne Carrera, her talented daughter, who has already appeared in this country in "big-time" vaudeville. In addition to these wonderful productions we will show other hotoplays, viz.: Vitagraph, Biograph, Lubin and a great many others well-known to the Plainfield public. A strictly first-run Paramount and Bluebird program sixty and thirty days in advance of any other theatre. Our motto, "Quality, Not Quantity." We give Travel-stamps.

FUNNY HE NEVER MOVED

- Plainfield Theatre. -

Despite the warm weather prevailing yesterday, large audiences were in evidence at the Plainfield Theatre, where, amid cool surroundings, the patrons enjoyed a fine vaudeville and picture program opening for the first half of the week. Garry McGarry & Co., featuring the widely-known Hawaiian singers and instrumentalists, were easily the favorites on the bill. The company is a large one and the act has a snap and go about it that registers a hit as soon as the curtain goes up.

The feature number was followed by Rice and Alesias, expert acrobats with a lot of new stunts; Fieber and Harris, singers and dancers; Harry Volks and Company in a comedy playlet of hotel life; and Hibbett and Meyer, nifty singers, dancers and musicians.

"Charlie's First Vacation," the latest Charlie Chaplin comedy picture, was presented yesterday and will be shown again this afternoon and tonight. It is in three reels and keeps the spectators in one roar of merriment. This is undoubtedly the funniest picture that Charlie Chaplin has ever romped through and is well worth the price of admission alone. The Pathe semi-weekly will be shown today, and there will be other film features tomorrow, in addition to another "amateur night." For the latter, several local entries have already been made, one of them being a melodramatic sketch entitled "It Happened in Mexico," written and acted by Patsy Riccardo and his brother-in-law, Patsy Pandelino. It promises to be a riot.

AT PROCTOR'S TOMORROW.

RECREATION NOTES

The Zephyrs and Athenians will meet in the High School gymnasium tonight. The latter will have the use of the gymnasium from 7:30 until 9 o'clock, and the Zephyrs will use the floor from 9 to 10:30.

The public swimming classes will meet tomorrow night in High School pool. Classes in physical exercises and dry land swimming will be held in the gymnasium prior to going in the pool. Mr. Keene will be on hand to meet all who wish to enter the classes.

The Dunbar dance will be held tomorrow night in the Washington School instead of Friday. The change was made in order that the West End Community Center might have the use of the auditorium on Friday night to conduct their exercises for Jersey Day.

LAVISH DECORATIONS AT INDOOR PICNIC

Sisterhood of Temple Sholem Give Delightful Affair at Columbus Auditorium.

Japanese lanterns, swings, seesaws, blossoming trees, rippling fountains and everything else that goes to make up an artistic forest scene was the setting arranged by the Sisterhood of Temple Sholem for the indoor picnic held under the society's auspices last night in Columbus Club auditorium. The spacious hall was attractively decorated by a committee composed of Mrs. S. Baumgerten, Mr. Ramsey and Mr. Livingston. Spring flowers, blooming sprays and crepe paper of various hues were used in the decorations. One of the most effective displays seen in local decorations was the large fountain effect arranged by placing palms in the center of the hall with vari-colored streamers shooting up toward the ceiling and dispersing toward the corners. The Japanese lanterns were strung from the four corners of the room.

Over two hundred and fifty visitors from this city, Newark, Perth Amboy, New York and Somerville enjoyed the many pleasing features arranged, and patronized the many booths filled with goodies of every description. The fortune-telling booth was without a doubt one of the most popular of those present, and the lone gypsy girl was kept busy revealing the past, present and future to the throngs of youthful maidens and swains.

Dancing was the principal form of enjoyment, continuing until an early hour this morning. Music for the occasion was provided by Suhr's orchestra. During the evening several exhibition dances were given by Morris LaVere and Miss Rose Freedman. The couple received much applause for their capability in concluding the many intricate steps of the cake-walk and fox-trot.

One feature which proved a source of much merriment to the attendants was the arraignment of a number of "kleptomaniacs" who unwittingly helped themselves to the tempting displays of fruit and other eatables on several booths. "Sheriff" Levine immediately placed them under arrest and brought them up for sentence before "Judge" William Newcorn, who showed his leniency in nearly every case by imposing a fine of double the worth of the articles.

Mrs. Henry Schuldenfrei was chairman of the entire committee of arrangements, and much of the success of the affair is due to her work. She was ably assisted at the various booths last night by the following women: Mrs. Max Tepper, Mrs. E. Schloss, Mrs. W. Schloss, Mrs. William Newcorn, Mrs. L. Levine, Mrs. Victorson, Mrs. S. Salis, Mrs. G. Mendel and Mrs. S. Baumgarten.

Picked All the Peas Out of the Ashes.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How Ashputtel Picked Peas Out Of an Ash Heap.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

"IF we stopped romping would you please tell us a story, daddy?" asked the children after supper. So daddy told them: "Once two stepsisters were so unkind to a little girl they called Ashputtel that the only comfort she had from the grind of waiting on them was to go and cry beside a little tree she had planted by her own mother's grave.

"Now it happened that the king of that land held a big feast which was to last three days, and out of the young ladies who came to the feast the king's son was to choose a bride. Ashputtel's stepsisters were invited to the feast. So they called her to them and said: 'Comb our hair for us and brush our shoes and tie our sashes, for we are going to dance at the king's feast.'

"So Ashputtel did as they bade her and helped them dress for the party. But when they were all ready she could not help crying, for she wanted to go to the ball too. At last she begged her stepmother to let her go.

"'You, Ashputtel?' cried her stepmother. 'You have no clothes to wear, you cannot even dance, and you want to go to the king's ball?'

"But Ashputtel kept on begging, and at last, just to get rid of her, her stepmother said, 'I will throw this dishful of peas into the ash heap, and if in two hours you have picked them all out then you may go to the feast.'

"Then she threw the peas into the ash heap, and Ashputtel ran out into the garden, crying:

"'Hither, hither, through the sky,
Turtledoves and linnets fly!
Blackbird, thrush and chaffinch gay,
Hither, hither, haste away!
One and all come help me quick!
Haste ye, haste ye—pick, pick, pick!'

"Then first came two white doves flying in at the kitchen window. Next came two turtledoves. And after them came all the little birds under heaven, chirping and fluttering in. Then from the kitchen they flew down into the ash heap. And the doves bent their heads down to work—pick, pick, pick! All the other birds began to pick, pick, pick! Soon they picked all the peas out of the ashes. Long before the two hours had passed the work was quite done and the birds had left the kitchen.

"Ashputtel was very happy, for she thought she might now go to the party like her two stepsisters. But when she ran to her stepmother she was told: 'You have no clothes, and you cannot dance. You shall not go.'"

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ralph Begins to Faintly Understand Why His Mother Apposed His Marriage.

"Ethel, do you know where there is a pencil? I must have left my fountain pen at the office; it is not in my pocket." Ralph Gordon came into the living room where his wife was trying out a new song on the piano.

"There is probably one in my writing desk," answered Ethel without lifting her head.

Ralph walked to the desk and opened the top.

"Great Scott, Ethel, how a self-respecting woman can have such a looking desk as this passes my comprehension," exploded the young man as the papers spread in all directions when released from the restraining pressure of the lid. Ethel glanced indifferently in his direction, and continued her strumming on the piano.

"If you were rushed with work, it would be some different," continued Ralph, "but you do nothing all day long, and there is not a thing in place in this house."

"That desk is in rather a congested state," remarked Ethel gaily, coming toward him to enjoy a joke at her expense. "I miss mother. She kept my desk in fine shape I can tell you." She commenced stuffing the papers back in the desk, squeezing the cover down each time. She returned a paper to prevent it again falling on the floor. "You see the maid is constantly bringing me things that she picks up and does not know what to do with, and I don't want them in sight, so I stuff them in here, but it seems as if I could not continue this indefinitely. I must find a new catch-all."

"Ethel," Ralph stood watching her graceful movements as she put the last rumpled paper out of sight," I wish you would try to be orderly. It really annoys me very much. Everything at sixes and sevens."

"I am naturally untidy," interrupted his wife. "'I despise your prim ways as much as you dislike my disorderliness." She was smiling bewitchingly into his face as she spoke. "What's the use of having a home if you cannot be free to be yourself in it. I love to lay things around just anywhere. Why shouldn't I?' She laid her face caressingly against his sleeve.

"But, Ethel," he began, slipping his arm around her, "don't you see how much work it makes to have things scattered all over the house: nothing in its place. We never know where anything can be found——"

"Oh, don't be tiresome, Ralph," she exclaimed fretfully. "You would never have known that the desk was full of papers if you had not forgotten your fountain pen. So it's your fault," she added, brightening. "As to its being less work to put things in their places anyone can see how silly that it. Just look at the work it will be to clear out that desk alone." She looked playfully up in his face.

"But don't you see, dear, if you had put these things away instead of stuffing them in here——" Ralph stopped for he was shocked to find that his tone was exactly the one he would have employed to a willful child.

"That's right, dear. Put the sermon off till another time. I am not cut out for a preacher's wife." She put her arms around his neck and kissed his cheek, but he seemed preoccupied and unresponsive.

"Was mother right?" he asked himself in sudden terror. "She is as carefree as a child. If she persists in evading all responsibility always——" An oppressive weight seemed to have settled on his heart.

"I must go and finish drawing my plan," he said at last, patting her head.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Conducted by

THE W. C. T. U.

The Detroit saloonkeepers have proved poor insurance risks the past year. Of the 1,377 men to whom licenses were granted a year ago 39 have died, a rate of almost 30 per 1,000, while the normal rate for the city is only a trifle over 15 per 1,000, including deaths among infants. The work of a saloonkeeper is surely not so arduous as to be responsible for this excessive mortality. The Detroit Times explains the matter as follows: "Drink is the cause of the high mortality rate among saloonkeepers. The saloonkeeper who is a teetotaler is a rare exception. Some saloonkeepers are occasional drinkers, many are nibblers, and many are heavy drinkers. Bright's disease or pneumonia is commonly given as the cause of death among saloonkeepers. Bright's disease is often brought on by excessive drink. Pneumonia is nearly always fatal when the constitution of the victim has been impaired by strong drink."

"I think I may safely state that not less than ninety-five per cent. of all the cases of homicide which are presented to the State Board of Pardons are in some way connected with and due to the use of intoxicating liquors." These are the words of Judge A. D. Thomas, president of the Indiana State Board of Pardons and member of the board for more than ten years, and one who from long experience is qualified to speak authoritatively on the relation of alcohol to criminality.

The Spokane (Wash.) office of the Mutual Life Insurance Company has handled 20 per cent. more business this year than for the corresponding period of 1915, and during the first quarter of 1916 it has leaped to the fifth place among the sixty-three large cities of the United States and Canada on the records at the home office of the company. W. H. Shields, manager of the Spokane district, which includes eight counties in eastern Washington, eight counties in northern Idaho and the entire State of Montana, credits this remarkable gain to the coming of prohibition. He declares that Montana will vote dry at the November election.

"I attribute the greater part of the gains of my office to the coming of prohibition in Washington and Idaho and the general improvement in the conditions of Spokane and vicinity," said Mr. Shields. "There is no business that is any more greatly affected by prohibition than insurance lines, and we expect a big increase in business in Montana for next year, for they are certainly going to vote 'dry' there this fall. I recently returned from a tour that covered the State of Montana.

"The business men of practically all classes, excepting those directly interested in the liquor business, are boosting hard for prohibition; merchants, bankers, mining and smelter men are unqualifiedly in favor of it, and I can not see how the result of the fall election can mean anything else than the banishment of saloons from the State."

The Progressive party of Utah at its recent convention, included in its party platform a provision for State wide and Nation-wide prohibition.

The temperance wave gathers height and depth, wideness and strength. Cheering news comes from Russia that a bill will probably be passed, making the prohibition decree permanent and declaring that never again shall vodka or any other strong alcoholic drinks be made and sold in Russia. In America unexpected champions are taking up the fight for temperance and the white portions on the temperance map are constantly growing larger and more numerous.

A recent utterance of the Rev. Arthur J. Brown, D.D., a famous missionary leader, deals with the liquor business in such powerful terms as to deserve frequent repetition and wide circulation:

"In my travels in foreign fields I learned that not only the customs of the people hinder missionary activities, but I found the slime of the pit as represented in the American saloon had been transferred to those fields. There is a brewery in Jerusalem; there is a distillery on Mt. Lebanon; there are American saloons in Damascus. The saloon is the church's deadliest foe in its foreign missionary work. The missionary goes to Christianize, while the rum-shop follows in his steps to destroy his work, even to hurl the people back to a worse than heathen darkness."

It is the duty of the American church to aid in every possible way in the extermination of the saloon. It hinders and undoes the church's work at home; it tends to nullify its triumphs abroad. What are you doing in your town, your county, your State—to hasten the end of this foe of all that is good

The latest statement from Pierre L. Bark, finance minister of Russia, is as follows: "Despite war expenses amounting to 12,000,000,000 rubles, and thanks to the abolition of the alcohol monopoly, the financial strength of the country is growing. The savings of the nation since the beginning of the war have increased by 2,000,000,000 rubles."

Denver industries are all feeling the good effects of the prohibition law in increased volume of business. This applies to the automobile industry, banks, groceries, markets, clothing stores, laundries and many another. The dealers in magazines and periodicals are among the latest to tell of increased sales the past three months. Denverites are great readers and leave annually at the news stands from $125,000 to $150,000, in addition to nearly twice as much paid out for magazine subscriptions. Since the first of the year, however, the business of the news stands has increased to a marked extent. Many citizens who formerly failed to patronize the magazine dealers are now regular customers. Cozy hours with the popular magazines seem to be one of Denver's favorite substitutes for the evenings previously spent at the saloon bar.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

"SPARROW GRASS."

THE clever cook never decides how to cook asparagus until she sees just the bunch she is to cook. If it be of the tender, long, green variety or of the plump, white kind she simply boils it carefully until it is tender and then serves it either with melted butter and pepper and salt or with a not too thick cream or drawn butter sauce.

If the asparagus is of the scrawny or tough sort she cooks it more elaborately. Asparagus soup can be made of this less tender sort. Boil the asparagus, cut into small bits, until it is very tender and then rub it through a fine sieve. Heat again with the water in which it was boiled and mix with an equal quantity of hot milk. Thicken with butter and flour and season well.

Here is another dish that can be made with the less tender sort of asparagus. Cut the asparagus into two inch pieces and boil tender. There should be two cupfuls of them. Beat the whites and yolks of three eggs separately and then together and add the asparagus, a tablespoonful of butter and half a cupful of milk. Cook in a double boiler until the mixture is creamy and cooked sufficiently. Turn on a hot dish.

Asparagus when it is very expensive and a big family must be served can be combined to advantage with other vegetables. It is good creamed with cauliflower broken into flowerets after it is cooked. It is also good with carrots or peas creamed.

Asparagus pudding is made in this way: Mix together a heaping cupful of tender asparagus cut into small pieces, four well beaten eggs, a tablespoonful of minced ham, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, a tablespoonful and a half of flour and salt and pepper to taste. Add enough milk to make the consistency of thick batter and pour into a buttered mold just big enough to hold it. Cover with a cloth and plunge into boiling water. Boil for two hours, turn out and serve with beaten butter.

DEFENSE GIVEN BIG SURPRISE

Codefendant Turns State's Evidence.

PHYSICIANS ARE ON TRIAL

Montclair Doctors Severely Scored by Prosecutor For Operation on Wife of One of Them—Patient Was Strapped on Table of Kitchen of House.

Newark, May 9.—To the apparent surprise of every one in the courtroom, except those in the confidence of the prosecutor's assistants, Dr. Paul E. Truesdell, a dentist, formerly of 71 Valley road, Montclair, who, with Dr. John H. Young of 37 North Fullerton avenue, the same town, were indicted for complicity in the death of Dr. Truesdell's wife, Mrs. Emma Wolf Truesdell, Feb. 15 last, turned state's evidence and was the chief witness for the prosecution when the case came to trial before Judge William P. Martin and a jury in the court of quarter sessions. Dr. Truesdell described in detail the operation performed on his wife, which resulted in her death.

Called to the stand by Assistant Prosecutor Wilbur A. Mott, Dr. Truesdell stated that Dr. Young and two nurses, one of whom he named as "Nurse Cox," came to his house in Montclair on the day in question and that shortly after noon his wife was brought to the kitchen and strapped on a table, there to be operated on. He held his wife's hand as she was being put under the influence of an anaesthetic, and he remained in the room fifteen minutes.

Dr. Truesdell was closely questioned as to the sort of instruments used by Dr. Young, and much of the testimony given by the dentist was of a technical nature.

Dr. Truesdell testified that he was twenty-seven years old, that his wife was twenty-one and that he had known Dr. Young seven or eight years.

In his address to the jury Mr. Mott said the state would not claim that the operation performed on Mrs. Truesdell was not of a nature that might not have been performed by a reputable physician, but the claim would be made that there was "gross negligence and criminal recklessness with life." It was on this that the charge of manslaughter was based, which is the charge in the indictment.

More than a score of fashionably dressed women were in the court.

The two nurses who were present at the operation and the physicians who performed the autopsy will testify later.

DROPS DEAD ON ROAD.

Wealthy Man Succumbs While Wheeling Own Trunk.

Nordhoff, May 9.—While wheeling his trunk to the railroad station from the home of W. F. Oldham, Clarence Richard Parish, a wealthy furniture manufacturer, of Columbus, O., dropped dead of heart disease.

Mr. Parish, who was sixty-one years old, and his wife had been visiting at the home of Mr. Oldham. They were to have gone to New York to take a train for Columbus, but were unable to obtain any sort of vehicle to convey their trunk to the station.

As tickets had been bought and all plans made, Mr. Parish was anxious to leave. He borrowed a wheelbarrow, loaded the trunk on it and started for the station, followed by his wife and several friends. It was a jolly party until suddenly Mr. Parish dropped the handles of the barrow and crumpled up and dropped dead on the road.

CHILD DIES FROM FALL.

Father Carrying Injured Girl Is Taken For Kidnaper.

Jersey City, May 9.—Florence Frown, three years old, of 54 Vroom street, this city, fell from a first story window of her home. The fall was only four or five feet, but her skull was fractured. She died in the City hospital.

When her father ran out and picked her up he started on a run with her to the hospital. Persons on the street saw him carrying the child and heard screams at the child's home and, thinking the child was being kidnaped, chased and stopped Brown.

He managed to explain, but was delayed several minutes by the crowd which gathered, bent upon attacking the kidnaper.

PROBE GIRL'S DEATH.

Newark Young Woman Is Found Dead In Bed.

Newark, May 9.—Police authorities of this city are investigating the circumstances surrounding the death of pretty seventeen-year-old Grace Hymers, daughter of Frederick Hymers, a retired merchant, of 365 Broad street.

Mrs. Catherine Hymers, mother of the girl, went to her room and received no answer to her call. She summoned servants, and the door was broken open. On the bed Miss Hymers was found. The gas was turned on, and the girl had been dead several hours. She was fully clothed, wearing a new Easter dress.

Doing It Himself.

Terrific, tumultuous noises inside the room.

Outside, little Johnny listening spellbound.

Next scene, little Johnny asking his mother the meaning of the terrific, tumultuous noises.

"Hush, my small son," says mother. "Pa's trying to save the price of a shave."—London Telegraph.

MERE KNOWLEDGE OF CURVES NOT GOOD PITCHING.

When Plainfield High School batters stacked up against Billy Lance, of the Pennington Academy outfit, they were given a problem to solve that will in all likelihood stand them in well when they take on North Plainfield in the initial interscholastic league tilt Saturday afternoon. Lance is one of the few schoolboy pitchers who knows how to use his head and mingle baseball sense with a knowledge of curveology. While he has more than a youngster's acquaintance with twisters his ability to use his noodle and size up batters is the predominating factor in his success in an academy uniform. If some of the high school hurlers we have in Plainfield and the borough were imbued with three-quarters as much horse-sense as Lance they would be able to place their school nines on a par with the best in the State. In times past local and borough school boxmen have displayed a woeful lack of good judgment and the talent this year seems to be affected along the same line. Coaches would de well to profit by the experience of Plainfild High against Pennington and devote a few afternoons to drumming common sense into the craniums of mound performers.

BOTH INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE CONTENDERS ARE ENIGMAS.

While dealing with the initial fight of the interscholastic league race for 1916 it would be well to give a few seconds thought to the calibre of baseball we might well expect from the material at hand this year. Appearances in preliminary struggles are of course deceiving and to pick a logical candidates to championship honors this year would be unfair as well as almost impossible. To date neither school has appeared in the garb of a phenom and individual stars are as rare as Giant victories in the National League. Summarized we don't dare to expect anything out of the ordinary and if we attempted to single out a favorite we'd be fooling ourselves as well as the baseball public. Certain it is that high school baseball in the city and borough this year is slightly off color and it may be left for the league schedule to bring the best performance to the surface. In the past both schools have played their best in the league combats and both may stage better all-around baseball after they have had their initial setto.

NOW THAT WE HAVE A LEAGUE, WHY NOT SUPPORT IT?

Financial troubles seem to have trickled into the camps of several City Baseball League camps. The disease, however, is still in its lighter stages and it may be possible to single out a remedy before the crisis comes. After Saturday's contest at least two of the leaguers had complaints to lodge about the attendances and gate receipts. The weather man was in good spirits and the contests were good ones and with these two essentials on deck we haven't been able to single out a cause for the apparent disinterest. In the future the baseball public will have to devote a little more attention to the league contests and shell out a few more admission fees or we're going to witness another calamity in the form of a sponge throwing stunt staged by some team in financial straits.

• • • • • •

WOULD "JITNEY" BASEBALL PAY IN PLAINFIELD?

All along the City League circuit we're heard grumbling about the rate of admissions charged. Certain fans whose ability to judge baseball and its worth falls below the standard of an average intelligent individual have been crying over the necessity of parting with fifteen cents to get on a league team's sideline Saturday afternoons. The league is not a money-making proposition by any means but a certain amount of cash has to be forthcoming in order that running expenses might be met and the fifteen-cent contributions if increased to a quarter would not transform the team treasuries into mints. Fifteen cents is little enough and if we did bring the fee down to a nickle there would still be some who would demand a four-cent rate. Pay the present amount and be thankful you are not touched for a quarter each week-end.

HAVE YOU PASSED BEYOND THE STAGE OF USEFULNESS?

According to previous announcement the charter of the Plainfield Rifle Club will be closed with a bang tonight. If your name isn't on the list get it there at all possible speed. If you don't you will eventually be one of those Plainfielders who will be doing the wishing act months hence. A good movement like this one is deserving of a universal support and every able-bodied man or youth owes it to his city and to himself to affiliate himself with the project. To neglect this duty is to confess that you are one of these debilitated individuals who have long since ceased to take an interest in worldly doings of a worthy nature. Line up with Plainfield's best known citizens and Plainfield's most loyal Americans by signing that application blank at once.

COUNTED OUT ATHLETICALLY BUT NOT AS A BUSINESS MAN.

"Doc" Osler once said something about men beyond the stage of usefulness in the athletic world after they had passed the age of forty but the widely quoted pill dispenser never said anything about athletes being too old to appear as business lights after that milestone had been passed. Judge "Dave" Campbell, perhaps the best known citizen of hustling Dunellen and at one time the premier all-around athlete of New Jersey, is flirting today with the eighty mark but he has just launched out in the commercial field with an enterprise that promises to be a hummer in Dunellen. Seldom do we hear of a man of his years starting in business for himself, but "Dave" has done it and many of the citizens of that town who have said "Good Morning, "Jedge" to him on more than one occasion are among his most loyal backers.

Press Amateur Dep't

Eddie Bergen donned the spangles for the Clinton Avenue baseball team Saturday and performed to perfection. Eddie is still full of vim and expects to put in a successful season. By the above-mentioned spangles is meant the array of catching togs with which Eddie dolls himself up and which seem so necessary to his work.

In the ranks of the City League scorers is one Earle Pierson. Mr. Pierson is no longer a player. Last year he pastimed with the Baptists, but it is impossible for him to get out to practice this year. When he does adorn the diamond he is as good as the next man and is one of the most sportsmanlike of baseball players around these parts.

The batting bee in which Compton indulged last week is not a new stunt for him. In looking over the files of last year's amateur ball columns we find that in one game Compton hit two singles, walked once, and was hit once out of five times to the plate.

The work of the umpires in the league games so far has been good. Jimmy Montross, at one time a hurler of consequence, is quite adept at the umpiring work, while Hansen and Malanga are "vets."

The genial Dan Randolph is now a pinch hitter. Dan is good with the stick and should put a crimp in the reputations of a few pitchers in this vicinity.

Last year the Saurer team used a "sub" named Gawler. He was not considered a star at that time, and in the games in which he played did not startle anyone. However, the same Gawler is now a member of the Baptists and is setting the circuit afire with his bursts of speed.

The Netherwood team is still the pennant contender of old. With Lou Slocum in the ranks, the East Enders expect to annex the flag again this year.

Frank Brennan, who had the misfortune to break a leg in a league contest last year, is back on the job. Frank is a little bit shy at baserunning and has not attempted any of it as yet. In the game played Saturday, "Kid" did no running. He is still there with the stick and as an outfielder has few equals.

Speaking of outfielders and of "equals" of Brennan, the name of Tone Denny looms up. Tone is a pitcher by nature, a hitter by ability and an outfielder by choice. He can hustle over the turf in center garden as speedily as any of them, and features "shoestring" catches.

And speaking of the Denny brothers reminds us that Brother Jack is quite an asset at pitching. Being, as he is, a very earnest and consistent worker, Jack's value to his team cannot be accurately measured. With the bat the older Denny is accomplished.

Queries--Comment--Answers

With this edition of the Plainfield Daily Press sporting page the "Queries, Comment and Answers" column is renewed. This idea is an original one with the Press, and during its two years' life it was an entertaining and instructive department. The rush of sports a short time ago made it impossible to devote the required time to the feature, however, and it was dropped temporarily. Since then an accumulation of queries has come into this office and this is taken as the surest sign of its popularity. The queries now on file will be answered in the order in which they were received, and the same treatment will be accorded new ones. Queries pertaining to sports or other matters will be given consideration, and while it is not claimed that the department will be infallible, every effort will be made by the Press to secure accurate answers and information.. Criticism is invited.. Only a limited number can be answered each day, of course; but all answers will be provided within a few days after the questions are received by us. Tell us what you want and we'll try and satisfy your curiosity.

Query: Is it expected that the new Plainfield postoffice will be ready for dedication by May 30, when the postmen's convention is held here?—K. J. L. M.

Answer: Present indications are that it will not be ready before another annual convention rolls around. At any rate, no dedication ceremonies will be held May 30.

Query: Are members of the Plainfield police force compelled to purchase their own uniforms? How should I go about it to get a position in the department?—V. V.

Answer: The local cops are required to furnish their own regalia at a cost of about $100 for the complete outfit. There are several vacancies in the department at the present time caused by resignations, and Chief Kiely is ready at all times to provide you with information relative to this. You will be required to pass the specified examinations.

Query: Is there any law against passing circulars in Plainfield?—C. N. J.

Answer: There most certainly is. Get a permit from the mayor first if you do not want to get into trouble.

Query: Will you please tell me if "Willie" Keeler ,the ball player, was born in Plainfield? I have laid a bet that he was, and played here before going to the big leagues.—A Fan.

Answer: Keeler was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., March 3, 1872, and although he played in Plainfield he did not start baseball here. He had previously played semi-pro. ball in Flushing, L. I., and Arlington, N. J., but went from here to the Binghamton Eastern League Club.

Query: Is it good baseball for a pitcher to pass a batter on balls.—H. J. K.

Answer: There has been some criticism from time to time on the question of passing a heavy hitter purposely when he comes with men on the bases, and it has been suggested that a rule be passed prohibiting it There is, however, no justice in the criticism, for the play is a perfectly correct one. The object of the pitcher is to win his game by any fair and legitimate means. As for a rule to prevent this—it would simply make life a burden for umpires. A smart pitcher would continue to pass when he wanted to, and it would take a lot of nerve on the part of the umpire to determine when he did it intentionally.

Query: On what date did the fire occur in the Cook Lumber Yard where Boice-Runyon is now located?—A. B. C.

Answer: November 20, 1885.

Query: How old does a ball player have to be to get a chance in the big leagues?—B. H.

Answer: There is no age restriction. If you are twelve and good enough you can pitch for McGraw's Giants. In fact, Johnny would be glad to have you just at present.

Query: By what plurality was Murphy elected governor of New Jersey? Is this Murphy the same one who is prominent in the Newark Celebration work?—H. K. U.

Answer: Governor Murphy was elected to the office in 1901 by a plurality of 17,333. He is chairman of the general committee in charge of the celebration plans.

PLAINFIELD FOUR AGAIN DEFEATED

Local Women no Match for Baltusrol Players and Take Score End of 7 to 0 Count.

WESTFIELD WINS OUT

Second Series in New Jersey Division of Women's Metropolitan Golf Association Championship Tourney—34 Points for Winners.

Plainfield women golfers had rough going at Baltusrol yesterday afternoon, failing to score a point when pitted against the home club representatives in the second series of contests in the New Jersey division of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association matches. Baltusrol players counted for a couple of twos and a three, only one member of the team returning a blank. Westfield women came in victorious by a score of 4 to 1, playing against Norwood on their own course.

Englewood won from Glen Ridge by 6 points to 2, Montclair defeated Forest Hill Field Club, 8 to 2, and Hackensack overcame Arcola by the one-sided tally of 9 to 0. All totogether the winning clubs scored 34 points against the five points that were gathered by the losers.

The New Jersey division will have still another series of matches on Thursday, the double portion being necessary so as to keep the schedule uniform with that of the Westchester and Long Island—Staten Island section, where the entry is smaller.

CITY LEAGUE MAY HEAR BIEDERWOLF

But One Small Obstacle Remains in the Path of Plan to Attend in a Body.

Suggestion was made at last night's meeting of the City Baseball League that the ninety players in the organization, together with their supporters on the diamond, attend the Biederwolf services in a body next Sunday afternoon and the reception the proposition received was almost unanimous in its favor. At least five of the teams will join in the movement and in all likelihood the entire roster. The Tabs have a game scheduled for Sunday afternoon with the St. Peter's aggregation at New Brunswick, but it is understood that negotiations are underway to postpone this match until a future date. John Denney, who represented the Abstainers at the meeting, was in favor of joining in the movement but he explained that it would be necessary for him first to consult with Manager Jim Schott, who was not present last night. Secretary Daniel Randolph was authorized to take charge of the matter and he will make formal announcement of the plans in the course of the next few days. It has been tentatively planned to meet at the Press office at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon and proceed to the Tabernacle in a group. The issue was productive of considerable comment of a favorable character and the players are optimistic of the chances of overcoming the one obstacle.

Business of a routine nature occupied the time of the league moguls last night. A number of additions to rosters were made and some "deadwood" was allowed to drift. Harry Moulton and Gerald Linke were entered on the Clinton Avenue list to replace Spencer and Miller, respectively. "Tuts" Jaeger will play for Hope Chapel in Johnny Heron's place and Tommy Mullin replaces Jaeger in the Farmers' lineup. Taylor takes "Shakey" Clarke's place in the Baptist fold.

Seen and Heard on the Street

Muhlenberg Hospital ambulance backed up to the curb on West Fourth street, and something like thirteen million kids, more or less, blocking progress on the sidewalk in their eagerness to get a look at the hapless victim soon to be carried out on a stretcher.

A large crowd of men and women bound for a surprise party standing in the rain at Grant avenue and Fourth street, Sunday night, awaiting the signal from a punitive expedition sent ahead to get a line on the unsuspecting victim.

Alec Ayers, sitting on the front seat of his new flivver undergoing instruction for driving, Sunday morning, on Park avenue, his look of disdain on the passing plebians suddenly changing to one of mortal terror when a big tree insisted on detaching itself from the curb line and placing itself squarely in his path.

"Lenny" Schlick, the Barney Oldfield of the West End, appearing on the streets Saturday in an underslung 1912 Hupmobile, built something like an American Harvesting Company's seed dropper and equipped with a stering wheel as big as those the commuters can see in a Hudson river ferry boat pilot house.

North Plainfield young man who stays up a good part of the night playing poker, skulking around the back yards yesterday morning to get to his place of employment on West Front street by means of the rear door before the boss or any tattletale could spot him.

Stylishly-dressed woman, whose face indicated at least ordinary intelligence, standing in the heavy rain on North avenue, Sunday morning, minus umbrella or anything to protect her from a drenching, while a big collie dog lolled back on the cushion of her one-seated roadster kept perfectly dry by the cover of the automobile.

LONG CARD FOR P. C. C. MEMBERS

Schedule for Men and Women Announced Today by Club Committee.

MANY PRIZES OFFERED

Season Will Be Continued Saturday When Cranford Representatives Come Here for Match—All Features Returned.

Although competition among Plainfield Country Club golfers has been going on for two weeks the members have just been provided with their official schedule booklets and indications are that a busy season is in store for all interested. The committee composed of W. Lester Glenney, chairman; J. W. Baker, D. H. Barrows, O. H. Fleming, F. O. Reinhart and H. E. Butler has arranged a schedule of male competition from April 29 to November 30 inclusive; and the women's committee, composed of Mrs. C. B. Lawrence, Jr., as chairman, and Mrs. Ursula Conrad, has arranged a similar card including the dates from Thursday, May 11, to September 28, inclusive.

Aside from the regular schedules three miscellaneous events have been arranged. The selected score cup will be given for the best selected 18 holes, only scores made on Saturdays and holidays to count. No score may be counted unless made in continuous competition of at least 12 holes and the playing is to consume the period between May 13 to November 7, inclusive.

The spring point cup will be awarded for the four best net 18 hole scores on Saturdays and holidays between May 6 and July 4, inclusive. The points will be scored on the 4, 3, 2 and 1 basis, and the cup will be donated to the golfer scoring the highest number. The best round of the day may be counted providing the contestant enters it upon the scoreboard as well as depositing the attested card in the box. The fall points trophy will be awarded under similar conditions played for between September 4 and November 7, inclusive.

The men's schedule in detail follows:

April 29, open day; handicap 18 holes.

May 6, team match vs. Cranford Golf Club at Cranford.

May 13, team match vs. Cranford Golf Club at Plainfield.

May 20, handicap against par, 18 holes.

May 27, spring cup, qualifying round, 18 holes, medal play.

May 30, spring cup, first and second rounds match play handicap, selected score cup; 18 holes from 36, two-third handicap.

June 3 and 10, spring cup, semi-finals and finals, 18 holes, match play, handicap.

June 17, championship, qualifying round, 18 holes, three sixteens.

June 24 and July 1, championship, first and second rounds; also defeated eights.

July 4, championship, semi-finals and finals; all sixteens and eights.

July 5 to September 1, competitions suspended during summer.

September 4, 36 holes, medal play; prizes for best net and gross scores.

September 9, handicap against par, 18 holes.

September 16, kickers' handicap, 18 holes.

September 23, tombstone contest, 18 holes handicap.

September 30, fourball championship, qualifying round, 16 to qualify.

October 7, 12 and 14, fourball championship, match play rounds, 18 holes.

October 21 to November 4, competitions to be arranged if prizes donated.

November 7, handicap, 18 holes, medal play, best score of day to count.

November 11, 18 and 25, competitions to be arranged if prizes donated.

November 30, Thanksgiving Day, 18 holes handicap.

The women's schedule follows:

Thursday, May 11, handicap medal play, 18 holes.

Thursday, May 18, handicap match play against bogey.

Thursday, May 25, approaching and putting.

Monday, May 29, handicap match play, qualifying round.

May 31, June 1 and 2, match play rounds, 18 holes handicap.

Thursday, June 8, tombstone handicap, 18 holes medal play handicap.

Thursday, June 22, best ball foursomes.

September 7, handicap, 18 holes medal play.

September 14, tombstone handicap, 18 holes medal play handicap.

September 21, match play against bogey, 18 holes handicap.

September 28, approaching and putting.

P. H. S. ATHLETIC MEETS.

Plainfield High School's track team is now busy preparing for a number of meets to be held with neighboring schools during the coming month. The first will be with Westfield, and has been announced by Manager Harold Seals for Saturday, May 13. On Wednesday, May 17, Battin will appear on Parker Field and on the following Saturday a number of the High School team will go to Newark to compete in the games at that city under the auspices of the Princeton Club and part of the 250th anniversary observance that city is now celebrating. On May 27 the local school will be represented in the Stevens Institute games at Hoboken, and on May 30 a meet will be held at New Brunswick with the New Brunswick High School.

CHARLES ROSCOE'S NARROW ESCAPE IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Charles L. Roscoe, of this city, had a narrow escape from being seriously injured Sunday night, while returning home from Long Branch in an automobile. In attempting to turn a corner at the foot of a hill, the car skidded, turned over and went down an embankment pinning him under it.

The wrecked machine was raised by Fred Nicholson and James Henderson, who were in the car, but jumped before it went down the embankment.

Roscoe was taken to a nearby physician who examined him and found that he had a few scratches. The car is owned by Mr. Manning, of Westfield. The repairs to the car will cost about $300.

GIRLS, HERE'S ONE YOU LET GET AWAY; AND HE WAS RAISED IN PLAINFIELD, TOO

Plainfield's reputation is "ruint." A good looking young man has gone out from the city to confess, as he graduates from Columbia University, that he is as yet unkissed, and the fair young maidens of this city must take unto themselves the shame—if it be a shame.

The Plainfield youth who has so much coming to him in the way of worldly pleasure is Alan Bruce Conlin. His story, and that of nine classmates, is told in the New York Herald as follows:

"Ten Columbia seniors confess to having never been kissed. Bolder than their forty Princeton fellows who divulged the shameful secret a short time ago, but kept their names secret, the Columbia men have shown little averseness to revealing their identity.

"Beyond the fact that they've never been kissed, there's nothing the matter with these ten men—that is, nothing inherent which might account for their failure to attain the heights of osculatory bliss. Most of them are decidedly handsome. Among them, just for example, is Francis M. Simonds, Jr., captain of the Columbia football team last fall, an oarsman, one of the most prominent members of the undergraduate body and, last but not least, voted by his classmates only a few days ago the handsomest man in their ranks. Surely something is the matter with the younger generation of woman-hood! And this is leap year!

"This arraignment of the other sex acquires an international character when one considers that in the number of the confessedly unkissed is S. Tsu-Yung Seng, of Wuchang, China, and Nicholas Bucci, a youth of Italian parentage. The slant eyed daughters of the Orient and the olive skinned maidens of sunny Italy must bear together with their sisters of pure American stock the contsumely of letting these young men attain their A. B. degrees without learning things men knew before there were schools.

"Of course there will be scoffers on the one hand and apologists on the other who remark that all these youth confess to is never 'having been' kissed, and that they admit nothing about whether they have kissed. But those versed in osculatory ways and procedure, knowing full well that the true kiss is always a collaboration, will be unable to accept this suggestion, either as tending to weaken the confessions or as providing palliation for modern young womanhood's neglect.

"A fair portion of undergraduate by nearly every other member of the marked half score. Wallace D. Taylor is business manager of Spectator, the Columbia campus daily paper. Alan Bruce Conlin, another of the unkissed, is an editor of Spectator and secretary of his class. Arthur S. Crane, as manager of the Columbia musical clubs, has even gone so far as to woo a muse, but none of the members of he rsex on earth has vouchsafed him the encouragement and success the deity was accorded.

"Douglas M. Black was captain of the varsity debating team, and as a fluent talker might well be thought capable of impressing his worth upon some maiden with kisses to give. F. S. Appleby has gained honors in the billiard world, and then there is Robert W. McCracken, an athlete."

EXPERT TESTIFIES IN SEWER HEARING

G. A. Johnson Chief Witness Today in Action to Restrain Erection of Plant.

The Chancery action in which John H., Henry E. and Kate C. Sebring, owners of property adjoining that of the Darling farm, seek to restrain Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen from erecting and operating a sewage disposal plant on the latter farm, was continued today in Newark before Vice-Chancellor Howell.

Judge W. A. Coddington, representing the complainants, called as a witness George A. Johnson, of New York, a sanitary expert, who testified that the plant of necessity would permit injury, from odors and through effluent polluting the nearby brook, especially in times of flood. He admitted that the plant could be made measurably safer through the expenditure of more money, possibly through the use of covered tanks.

Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, testified as to conditions during the high water of last August, when the Sebring farm was flooded. Mayor Harris, of Middlesex borough, also told of high water conditions. Mr. Johnson further stated that in his opinion the plant was up-to-date, but that the best of plants will create a nuisance. The case will be continued tomorrow.

APPLICATIONS TO JOIN THE ARMY INCREASE AT SIGN OF ANY TROUBLE

PROSPERITY, bringing with it the lure of high wages and steady employment, has proved an attraction for the United States army to buck in its campaign for further enlistments. For weeks recruiting officers in the New York district have been conducting an automobile campaign to interest men in the service.

The east side wins first prize in the number of enlistments for the month of March, having enrolled 116 men. The west side is second, with a total of 78 men, and Brooklyn is a bad third, with only 33 enlistments to its credit. Across the Hudson in Jersey City it has been very hard to arouse enthusiasm in the army, and only eleven men were accepted during the month.

"Curiosity killed a cat, but is not going to get many New Yorkers into serious trouble," said Private Osborne of the head recruiting station for the

New York district at 25 Third avenue, who has been doing most of the talking from the army automobile to the street corner crowds. "Everybody is ready to listen, and they all like to grab for the pretty colored booklets that we distribute after the speeches, but mighty few of them ever show up at the recruiting station afterward. The best meeting that we had was at City Hall park, when the crowd got so thick the police had to interfere and make a passageway so that the automobile could get started again.

Kid the Recruiting Officer.

"One of the most exasperating things that we have to put up with," said Private Osborne, "is the way former enlisted men try to kid us when we are talking. They think that it is funny to ask a lot of questions and get the crowd to laughing.

"There are a good many women and children in some of the gatherings that we talk to," said Private Osborne, "and they all seem to be interested in the subject. In fact, they can ask more questions than the men. There were two little kids about thirteen years old the other day at one place where we stopped that wanted to enlist as drummer boys."

At the Third avenue recruiting station it was said that most of the men who come in are young fellows from eighteen to twenty-one years old who give their former occupation as laborers. Occasionally a well dressed man comes in who has had a technical education, such as an expert electrician or mechanic. A large percentage of those who are accepted for the service have foreign names, many of them being Italian and French. According to the recruiting officers, there have been practically no Germans applying for admission to the army.

Since the Pershing expedition started Chicago leads the country, according to the war department figures. The official figures show in the first week the government accepted ninety-one new soldiers from the Chicago district. The Peoria district reports nineteen men, Indianapolis thirty-four, Evansville seventeen, Terre Haute four, Detroit twenty-one, Grand Rapids seven and Davenport six. These eight districts, including Chicago, total 199 men. In two weeks Chicago organized and offered a new cavalry regiment.

During March the United States army recruited forty-four men at Atlanta as against thirty-two for February, an average month's business. These forty-four were recruited out of ninety-eight applicants. On or about March 20 five branch recruiting stations were established in that district, the records from which brought the total for the district for March to seventy-two out of 281 applicants. At this rate the recruiting runs on an average for the entire district of about 200 per month. The normal, prior to the Villa raid, was about forty-eight per month. Since the Villa trouble, however, a better class of men on the average has applied, and during March the acceptances were one out of five.

Army recruiting, despite the Mexican squabble, is not proving very attractive to Pittsburgh young men, although the government is extending the recruiting service throughout western Pennsylvania. Milwaukee Shows an Increase.

The increase in enlistment for the army since the chase for Villa has been an average of ten men enlisted a day. Before the Mexican bandit's raid on Columbus there were seldom ten men enlisted in two weeks. The number of enlistments from up the state has increased also, each of the six up state cities having sent in as many men each week as Milwaukee was accustomed to recruit in a month. Nearly every man enlisting has a chance to immediately go to the border for active service. They all object to army life in time of peace, but with excitement in the air they are anxious to be at the front. Many of those enlisting are men who have served with European armies, but have become American citizens.
